So far we haven't heard of anyone else who plans to campaign for the job. There was a rumor the health agent, who's quitting as of today, might be a candiate. But Kevin O'Brien said there was absolutely no truth to that report.

He said he will talk about his own plans for the future sometime soon.

Millie Whorf honored

Selectmen signed a citation last week honoring Millie Whorf of North Scituate. The award recognized Whorf for her many years of entertainment.

Whorf, a singer and pianist, celebrated her 85th birthday on Sunday.

The town will get the $10,500 it sought for a water leak detection survey system-wide.

Due to a mix up created by state officials, the amount of the grant was incorrectly reported in the Mariner last week.

Town meeting will be asked to match the amount.

Disarmament resolved

The question of bilateral nuclear disarmament will come before town meeting in the form of a resolution, according to Doris McNulty.

Mrs. McNulty said she was surprised that a group in town wasn't working on the question in some form before now.

She brought up the idea in public over the past week and hasn't heard any strong dissent so far.

The question seems to be worded similarly to the article that will come before Scituate's town meeting next week.

leave.

LUMPY: Why don't we just leave now.

BEAVER: Because I told my Dad I'd vote on this dump thing.

Scene 4 opens with Ward and June sitting on the living room couch, each reading a newspaper.

WARD: You know, I'm kind of proud of the Beaver. It's not every son who'd help his father be a good citizen.

JUNE: Yes, I know what you mean. And also there's that Dump Committee he's just joined.

WARD: Exactly! Those issues are touchy. Now that I know Beaver and Lumpy are working with the Board of Health to map out a strategy for controlling them, I feel pretty relieved. There are too many issues in town that go untended.

JUNE: Perhaps now we'll be able to take walks on the beach without worrying about broken glass.

WARD: Right, and I can take the boys walking in the woods off Forest Avenue — if they haven't cut the trees down.

JUNE: Things seem to be getting better everywhere you look, don't you think?

Cut to Beaver and Lumpy sitting in Ernest Steven's kitche. Both are eating cookies. Crumbs keep falling on a bunch of blue papers.

ERNIE: And when do you fellows think we should cap the landfill?

LUMPY: (looking up at a glass of milk) Thanks.

ERNIE: Okay, Thanksgiving! Where should the toxic waste go?

BEAVER: (wiping off the crumbs from Lumpy's cookies) What a mess!

GENE: (seeing Beaver's sweeping gesture, and writing furiously) Wait, not so fast. That's not on the approved plan...

Fade-out as audience laughs it up in the background.

Cut to Town Moderator Bill Weeks who stares straight into camera, and says: I want to see YOU at Saturday's Town Meeting!!! 1 p.m. or else.

1982-Gypsy Moth policy issued from the DEM strongly recommends that Bacillus thuringiensis (BT) be used as the control material for publicly conducted and funded programs.

"Use of biological materials is the most reasonable course of action to take... BT is the only biological control material that is readily available," Bliss said.

Though BT has a record of being erratic and has its limitations, Bliss said, control is not meant to wipe out the gypsy moths but rather to control tree defoliation.

Both Scituate and Cohasset plan to spray with Sevin (Carbaryl). Scituate will also use Orthene.

Jeffrey Carlson, the state's assistant supervisor of the pesticide program, spoke of the studies which have been conducted on Sevin. Though Sevin is registered in the state there is a strong rebuttal against its use. With further testing perhaps the Environmental Protective Agency (EPA) will recommend further regulatory action.

Carlson said that most chemical analysis has been conducted on lab animals rather than humans. He told some 65 listeners that the toxicity of a chemical is not the only factor involved — more important is the amount of exposure.

Carbaryl tests in 1968 showed a substantial number of birth defects in beagle dogs, said Carlson. He spoke of mutagenecity which results in use of Carbaryl: reproductive defects, viral enhancement, cancerous as well as benign growths, and neural toxicity.

When calculating whether a chemical causes unreasonable risk to mankind or the environment, Carlson said you have to weigh all the positive and negative statistics. "You must look at the overall weight of evidence. One study is not conclusive... it highly depends on the quality and strength of data," he said.

A concerned Maine citizen, Charles Fitzgerald, strongly opposed chemical control of gypsy moths. "I did not feel safe with the EPA and other agencies who are supposed to protect us from insecticides which are so heavily used," said Fitzgerald.

The infestation is still out of control in Fitzgerald's community even though spraying had been conducted annually with Sevin for the past 25 years.

Fitzgerald said much of the testing is incomplete with insufficient evidence.

Though he disagreed with many tests and findings he spoke of several remarkable reports, which he supported with slide documentation.

In one newspaper report, Fitzgerald alerted the audience to some 7,000 lobsters which were killed within a minute from three or four drops of Sevin in a 600 gallon tank of water.

Fitzgerald pointed to a study which reported that Carbaryl is most readily absorbed through the skin and directly into the blood stream.

In an accidental experiment, results showed that exposure to Sevin caused a virus to multiply, many times the norm, within human embryo cells.

Much of the spraying done in Maine has been conducted by planes which fly too high when releasing chemicals. Fitzgerald said a helicopter flying just above tree-tops is the best way to eliminate spray drift.

Fitzgerald's biggest complaint was that most of the testing which has been done, was done by the companies which make the chemicals.

During a question and answer period at the close of the panel lecture, a Norwell bee keeper spoke briefly about the hazards of chemical spraying. He said poison sprays will kill beneficial insects as well as the insects we don't want. "We're tampering with the environment," he said. He wanted listeners to know that roughly 30 percent of the foods people eat are pollinated by bees.

Information provided from the DEM shows that Carbaryl is poisonous to invertebrates, deer, bees, parasites and Boston ivy. BT was recorded as being toxic to none. Orthene may promote mutagenecity while this chemical is poisonous to birds, bees, apple, elm and maple trees.

Detouring the dilemma and hoping for the best

By Jane Lane

There'll be no immediate solution to the critical commuting problem on the South Shore, but several state officials are attempting to detour any future dilemmas.

Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Weymouth) and Rep. Philip Johnston (D-Marshfield) co-chairmen and co-founders of the South Shore Transportation Caucus, held a public discussion on the South Shore's increasing commuting woes. Secretary of Transportation James Carlin also attended the meeting.

Carlin, who admitted his relief at not having to travel the daily route to Boston from the South Shore, said he could not offer any quick solutions, but he was willing to listen to any ideas. In earnest, he offered a chicken salad luncheon to anyone who wanted to stop by his office to discuss solutions to the dire transportation situation.

Looking in retrospect, Carlin said many factors led to the inadequate commuting system along the South Shore. Among the leading cause was that no one predicted the immense population growth. "Although there was zero population growth in the state in the 1970's, there was 100 percent increase in the South Shore," he said.

Carlin concluded his opening remarks by stating that construction work along Rte. 3 in the Braintree-Quincy area would continue, along with the reconstruction of the Fore River Bridge. The Weymouth work is expected to be completed by June 17, he added.

Both McKinnon and Johnston felt the South Shore's allocation of MBTA services was vastly inequitable to the amount of revenue generated by those towns. Johnston noted that Marshfield and Scituate are required to provide $500,000 each to the MBTA for no service.

"I am wondering, in the absence of our ability to pull out of the MBTA, that something can't be given in exchange for the million dollars we are giving you?" Johnston asked. The Marshfield representative suggested that local residents might be allowed to park free at MBTA parking lots.

Carlin admitted the suggestion had merit, but he would have to check with MBTA General Manager James O'Leary before rubber stamping such a plan.

In response to Johnston's claim of no service to the towns, Carlin said he would be willing to operate a bus run from Marshfield to the South Braintree station at no charge. Almost as quickly as he suggested the idea, Carlin hastily added he would have to check with MBTA officials before such a plan was implemented.

The purpose of the meeting was to explore alternative modes of traveling from the South Shore. Many residents felt the commuter boat in Hingham has been a successful alternative, yet it has received little support from the state. Johnston asked if a similar boat run from Scituate or Marshfield could be implemented.

According to a representative of the Mass Bay Commuter Service, there is a boat which could be used in open waters, as along Scituate, for commuting purposes.

Bruce McHenry of Barnstable suggested that solutions be devised with "an engineering perspective." He approved of the inclusion of fast lanes for van and carpools, either as previously devised on the Southeast expressway, or in the center strip as constructed in Washington, D.C.

Eugene Russo of Hanson outlined his plans for a monorail system along Rte. 3 in the southeast and southwest corridors of the state. Russo, an engineer who has personally worked on the plan for five years, said he has received little support for his study. Rep. Johnston is one of the first state officials who has encouraged Russo to continue his efforts.

The monorail system, as detailed by the Hanson resident, would be constructed above the southeast expressway at a cost estimated five years ago at $1 million per mile. That figure is in comparison to the $6 million per mile total paid by the MBTA for its expansion into the South Shore, he said.

Although others attending the meeting disagreed with the merits of such a system, Johnston said it is another alternative which should be investigated, in view of the critical transportation problem in this area.

Other topics which will continue to be explored by caucus members are: service of the Plymouth-Brockton bus; MBTA service; non-serviced MBTA towns; commuter boat and other alternative modes of transportation; construction scheduling, and rail commuting service from the South Shore.

Sen. McKinnon concluded in jest that the caucus will invite Sec. Carlin back again in two months "with all the answers."

The Lawrenceville School is a national, residential, independent secondary school with over 650 boys from over 40 states and 25 foreign countries.

☐Having often heard about the many special events planned at the Harborview Senior Citizens Housing at 60 Elm Street, I'd often wondered who this active group of people were.

New officers for the Harborview Tenants Association are: for court one, chairman — Ellen Jason, representative — Mary Delay; court two, chairman — Mary Oldfield, representative Anne Kugler; court three, chairman — Lillian Mitchell, representative — Abbie Parker, court four, chairman — Dorothy Graham, representative — Ruth Bachigalup.

Hospitality chairman is Florence Goldberg and her committee includes Genevieve Jones, Shirley Laidlaw and Florence Stoughton. The latest effort by the association provided a St. Patrick's Day Corn Beef feast for over 40. On april 12, the Cohasset Rotary Club has invited all the members to a Turkey Dinner. Every Monday morning, a group gathers at Elm Court for crafts and at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday there is Beano.

☐Last Saturday was the official opening of Studio IV at 59A Water Street in Hingham. The studio is a joint venture of two Cohasset artists, Marylouise Slotnick and Roberta Raffa and Gloria Worthington of Hingham.

The shop which is located next to the Fruit Center features painting in a variety of media, art classes, photo restorations, flower arrangements and hand made crafts. Further information on the new studio is available by calling 749-0259.

Alan M. Schwartz

☐Alan M. Schwartz, M.D., of New England Medical Center and Tufts University School of Medicine, has been promoted from assistant radiologist to radiologist at the hospital and from assistant to associate professor at the medical school.

A specialist in pediatric radiology, orthopedic radiology and CT scanning, Dr. Schwartz was educated at Tufts University and its medical school. He interned at the Maimonides Medical Center in New York City and served a three-year residency at NEMC. After two years as a radiologist with the Naval Regional Medical Center at Newport. RI, he returned to NEMC in 1975.

Dr. Schwartz belongs to a number of professional organizations including the Society for Pediatric Radiology, the American College of Radiology and the Radiologic Society of North America.

He lives in Cohasset with his wife Mary Jane who is an Emergency Room nurse at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

☐There was a very popular movie a few years ago, "The Out of Towners." which reminds me of the exploits of two Cohasset women, on their recent trip to Boston's Chinatown.

Upon entering what they thought was a typical Chinese restaurant, they soon discovered it definitely was not. The man in charge, although he spoke very little English, was more than a bit willing to help them make a hasty exit but not before they realized that somehow they had managed to locate themselves in a very busy gambling den.

☐Lisa Cogill called the other day to say that she is doing afternoon childcare at her home. She also does overnight sitting. Her phone number is 383-1577.

☐I have to give Al Odermatt the credit for the following delightful story.

Quite some time ago he told me about Doreen Flynn's second grade class at the Joseph Osgood School and their very special definition of what Love is. All volunteers in Miss Flynn's class every Friday and both he and the students have enjoyed getting to know each other.

It's not that I forgot, yet somehow I never did get to it. But anyone who knows Al, can appreciate he's not one to be daunted. And, after another of his official invitations for a specific time, last Friday, I did follow up on the story and was very glad that I did.

Love, the children say, is — feeling warm when my mother hugs me

— a lovely feeling!

— when you get married.

— something when you give it away.

— helping old people with their chores.

— when you get a new puppy.

— when you get a baby brother.

— helping handicapped people.

— having dinner with the whole family.

— getting a goal and people cheering for you.

— being an orphan for a long time and then someone adopts you.

— when my dad comes over to see me and plays with me before I go to bed.

— making a lot of new friends.

— when you make your First Communion and God loves you.

— a good feeling when my father hugs me.

Science Center vacation program

The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell looks ahead to the School Spring Vacation Week.

Garfield and Heathcliff, sophisticated cats. Mary Jean Unis of the American Humane Society will be at the Science Center on Tuesday, April 20 to explore the world of cats from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for grades 2-5. Bring lunch. Fee is $7 members, $10 for non-members.

Children, Kindergarten through Grade 4, come celebrate Earth Day on the Space Ship, Thursday, April 22, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Enjoy environmental activities, watch a film about our coast and plant a seedling shrub which you can then watch grow. The fee is $6, members; $9 non-members.

On Friday, April 23 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., children in grades 1 through 6 can discover the world of local amphibians which appear in the spring. Identify their sounds and eggs. Visit their homes in the pond and swamp. Learn to set up an aquarium for observation of egg development. Fee is $5, members; $7 non-members.

On Saturday, April 24, from 1:30 to 3 p.m., Science Magic will again be at the Science Center. Exciting and dramatic experiments demonstrating color changes, sound vibrations, air pressure phenomena, burning and fire features, inertia changes and electrical characteristics. For grades 3 through 8. Parents invited. Fee is $3 members; $4, non-members.

Prepaid reservations are required for all Vacation Programs. Send check to SSNSC, Box 429, Norwell, MA 02061. For further information call 659-2559. The Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane.

Obituary

Carl Beggs

Carl Lee Beggs, 60, of Cohasset, founder-owner of Beggs Coin Laundromat in Brockton, died at home March 28.

Born in Sesser, Ill., he had lived in South Weymouth for 25 years and in Cohasset for one and a half years.

He was a 1948 Harvard graduate. He owned the laundromat for 15 years and was a member of the board of New England Cleaners and Launderers Association. He was also a member of Hatherly Country Club, Scituate, and the Samaritans of Boston.

A World War II Army Air Force veteran, he was a fighter pilot in North Africa.

He leaves his wife, Marilyn (Miller) Beggs; a son, Kevin Beggs of Hanover; five daughters, Valerie Beggs of Vineyard Haven, Kristen Delorey of Cambridge, Cynthia Locke and Kimberly Beggs, both of South Weymouth and Melissa Beggs of Maine; three step-daughters, Karen Creedon and Lisa Creedon, both of Brookline, and Stephanie Creedon of Cohasset; and a brother, John Beggs of Michigan.

A funeral service was conducted Wednesday in the Lutheran Church of the South Shore, Hanover. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Public hearing on casino gambling

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to selectmen, will represent the Cohasset board at a public hearing on casino gambling, Wednesday (today) at the state house. Clark will submit the following letter which was approved by selectmen last week:

To Rep. Robert Ambler:

The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset has voted to oppose any legislation that would allow the building of a casino in the Town of Hull or any other location in Massachusetts.

In addition, the Town Meeting overwhelmingly voted on a Resolution to oppose Casino Gambling.

The location of the casino is at the boundary of Cohasset and Hingham. Route 228 is already overburdened with traffic and to increase the traffic would mean that cars and buses would be backed up for miles.

In addition our Chief of Police feels it would mean tripling our police force. The Board of Selectmen is also concerned about the increase in crime and violence that will be sure to occur if a casino is allowed to be built.

Therefore, it is requested that your Committee vote not to allow Casino Gambling in Massachusetts.

Good government

There's an old saw about democracy — the people get government that's as good as they deserve.

Looking at a field of very few candidates for town election, we feel obligated to inject a word about apathy.

Town elections will be Saturday, April 10, at town hall. It's too late to register to vote, if you aren't already registered. If you are registered, vote, participate.

There are 15 slots to be filled by the election. There are 18 candidates. There's a race for the seat on the board of selectmen as a challenger vies with an incumbent. And there's a race for school committee as a challenger bids against two incumbents for the two openings.

We've heard very little on the issues.

We wonder why all the noise we hear about the process of revaluation, there isn't even a small challenge to the incumbent assessor who's up for reelection. It seems few people are interested in the assessors job even though the year's tax rate remains an unknown.

Be there

Town meeting begins at 1 p.m. Saturday, April 3. Be there.

Important decisions will be made that will affect the quality of life here in the coming year.

No business can be transacted unless 200 registered voters show up. While it seems probably, the required number will arrive in time for the meeting to get underway, it's just as probable that a small percentage of the voters will be left to make policy decisions for the town.

The town is facing fiscal problems left over from the slow process of revaluation.

This is the time to question officials. The way to begin is by being there.

Dump question

The board of health is looking to keep the present landfill open — under better conditions than happened in the past.

We thought the only way to solve the mess at the landfill was to close down the operation and try something else. Then we heard what the alternatives really are — shorter hours, etc.

We decided to back the board of health. We think the plan for increasing the level of staffing at the landfill will solve the basic problem.

On disarmament

There are those in town who do not plan the coming town meeting should go without debate on the sticky question of nuclear disarmament.

The question of unilateral disarmament is not at issue. What is at issue is the future.

Anti casino forces still strong

To the Editor:

As we observe the first anniversary of the incorporation of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, we want to advise those whose contributions helped us beat back the casino drive in 1981, as well as those who may be impelled to support us in 1982, how our funds have enabled us to present an effective opposition to the imposition of casinos on this state.

Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc. is a grass roots, non-partisan, non-profit organization with the purpose and intent of defeating any and all establishment of casino gambling within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Two pioneering anti-casino groups from locations presently identified as potential sites joined in the formation of C.A.C.G. The first group, Voices Not Vices, was founded in 1976 by Fred Moran who sought to keep casinos out of the Berkshire community of Adams. The second, Group Against Gambling, was led from its inception in 1980 by Carol Oteri of Hull, a long-time opponent of casinos.

As the new corporation gathered strength, it quickly became apparent that the problem was not native to Hull and Adams alone. It is truly a statewide threat, as the makeup of our membership reflects. Those now feeling safe because of their particular location should be aware that the plans of the casino entrepreneurs range far beyond the two towns initially targeted.

This issue has been around for many years. And, from all indications, will stay around for years to come. Its proponents are busying themselves to mount Beacon Hill once more with a sheaf of bills already filed proposing to bring casinos and their numerous attendant woes to our midst. Large sums of money have been expended in land acquisition and in cementing ties with various public and private individuals, of a kind which requires constant surveillance. Massachusetts needs no more of the type of life and crime which mark the casino cities of this country.

WHAT WE HAVE DONE

1. Support in the fight against casinos has been secured from Governor Edward King, Lieutenant Governor Thomas O'Neill, Attorney General Francis Bellotti, Treasurer Robert Crane, Secretary of State Michael J. Connelly and many Massachusetts state senators and representatives, most particularly Senator Peter Webber and Representative Frank Matrango from Berkshire County and Senator Allan McKinnon and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, both of whom represent the Hull area. In addition, all strong gubernatorial candidates in the 1982 election have committed themselves to an anti-casino position. We do not say that in every instance this support has been generated entirely by our efforts, but such is the case with a large number of key people in public life with who we conferred at length and to whom we submitted research materials.

2. Through the efforts of volunteer workers and by participation in innumerable programs, debates and presentations, we have actively sought and gained the support of the Massachusetts Council of Churches, the Massachusetts Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Southern Methodist Council of Churches, the Massachusetts Civic League, civic associations, women's clubs, chambers of commerce, mothers' clubs, boards of selectmen, garden clubs and many others. Recently, after several months of study, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the largest suburban chamber of commerce in the nation, has come out against a casino in Hull with a lengthy and carefully worked out report.

3. We have provided information to and been interviewed by leading newspapers and magazines. Editorial stands against casinos have been taken by the Boston Globe, the Herald American, the Berkshire Eagle, the Middlesex News, The Cape Cod Times, The Hull-Nantasket Times and many other daily and weekly newspapers across the state. Press releases outlining out activities are sent by Publicity Chairman Elizabeth Harling on a regular basis to newspapers and broadcasters across the state. The March issue of "Yankee" magazine contains an outstanding article to which our president Carol Oteri and a director, Maria Plante, contributed their views.

4. Members have initiated and contributed testimony before legislative committees in Boston, at the Democratic State Issues Convention, at the Massachusetts Republican State Convention and before the League of Women Voters. We have also been panel members and audience participants for many TV and radio programs. The list includes "Miller's Court,' "Sound Off," "The Ted O'Brien Show," "Good Day," "Moneysense" and "Forum 38."

PLEASE NOTE: 'President Oteri recently confirmed that 1982 legislative hearings are tentatively scheduled for March 31st.

5. We have compiled a library of materials concerning casinos which is quickly gaining us a reputation for accuracy and thoroughness. Two films, "Atlantic City-Winners and Losers" and a documentary on Atlantic City from John Chancellor's NBC Nightly News are available for screening to groups meeting anywhere in the state. We have organized a Speakers Bureau on which groups may call to learn more about the real issues involved with casino gambling.

6. C.A.C.G. is in constant communication with organizations in New York, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Florida, who have the identical purpose of excluding casinos. President Carol Oteri and Vice-President Fred Moran are our appointed representatives to LANCE (Legislators Against New Casino Establishment), a new organized regional strike force of legislators and anti-casino associations from the six New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The second LANCE meeting will be held in Boston at the statehouse on Thursday, March 25, 1982.

7. Funds collected to assist in the fight against casino gambling are carefully spent. Our expenditures will be detailed to any member who requests it. We cannot hope to match the casino promoters dollar for dollar, but we can expect that everyone sharing the convictions of those of us who have given this issue our time and attention will back us with their personal effort and a check for a sum as ample as they can afford. What price do you put on the quality of life in Massachusetts?

We are enclosing a copy of our most recent literature. Additional copies are available for distribution.

Let your legislators know how you feel. Wake up your neighbors to the real "spin off" that we can expect from casino gambling. Support us through your active involvement and financial contributions. Massachusetts does not need the crim, corruption and congestion which casinos will bring to us.

Honorable Paul C. Reardon
Chairman of the Board
Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc.

Disarmament attacked

To the Editor:

Jeopardizing our planned defense system is serious business. Loyal American citizens are unwilling to be pawns of activists and unthinking politicians, when the protection of our lives is at stake.

While each of us wishes that the atomic weaponry had never been initiated, the demon is with us nevertheless. We must not tie the hands of our leaders so that they will meet opponents in a ring of inequality.

In the past the image of the United States has been so badly demeaned that it will require courage and fortitude on the part of everyone to fight to save our freedom and to regain the respect of the world.

It is mind-boggling to think that the handful of anti-American activists who started the idea of a nuclear freeze are banking on the naivete of sincerely concerned citizens and the greed of a few politicians to seize upon this idea for self-aggrandizement. May God help us that the attempt to weaken our country does not materialize.

The Russian bear has been lolling away the time dreaming his cunning dreams started long ago. The new regime that is preparing to rule, after Mr. Brezhnev, will shock and surprise only the unprepared and uninformed.

How can we be sure that the Soviets would abide by a nuclear freeze, when we question their violation of many treaties, one being the Geneva Protocol of 1925? The allegations of attacks in Afghanistan with poisons such as nerve agents, irritants, incapacitants, phosgene oxime and other toxic poisons make us ponder the reliability of any Soviet promise regarding nuclear arms.

Let us work for peace, yes, but not at the expense of liberty and the capability to defend ourselves.

Lillian C. Marcoux

LWV explains Town Meeting procedures

The following answers were obtained from the Cohasset Bylaws and also "Town Meeting Time" by Trustman.

1. HOW CAN A CITIZEN PUT IN AN ANNUAL MEETING ARTICLE? Ten or more registered voters must file a written request with the selectmen at least 45 days before annual meeting. (200 are required for a Special Town Meeting.)

2. WHO DETERMINES THE ORDER OF THE ARTICLES? There are guides, but the Selectmen have final authority. The meeting itself may vote to advance or postpone an article.

3. HOW MANY VOTERS ARE NEEDED FOR A QUORUM? 200.

4. HOW DO YOU QUESTION A QUORUM? Rise and ask; cannot interrupt a speaker, but any other time is appropriate. Supercedes all motions except adjournment.

5. HOW DO YOU MOVE THE QUESTION? "I move the previous question" means enough debate, let's vote. This motion requires a 2/3 vote.

6. HOW LONG CAN THE SPEAKERS GO ON? Moderator has power to run the meeting; no person, without permission of meeting, shall speak on any subject a second time for more than 5 minutes if other citizens who have not spoken desire to. No person shall speak more than twice upon any question except to correct an error or make an explanation without permission of the meeting nor until others who have not spoken shall speak if they so desire. Moderator may limit debate if he deems it necessary or desirable.

7. HOW CAN YOU CHALLENGE ILLEGAL OR IRRELEVANT COMMENTS OR SLANDERS? Say "I rise to a question of privilege or point of order." This can interrupt the speaker.

8. CAN YOU REQUEST A SECRET BALLOT? Yes. HOW? Meeting must order it by a motion and get a majority vote. Advisory Committee may recommend it and, if the Committee does so, the Moderator may order it.

9. WHAT CAN YOU DO TO CHALLENGE THE MODERATOR'S DECISION ON A VOICE VOTE? Rise and say "I doubt it." If at least seven people stand, the vote must be verified by tellers.

10. HOW CAN YOU CHANGE THE ORDER OF ITEMS? Postpone requires a second, "I move this be postponed until a certain time (after a specific time or a specific warrant item)." It requires a majority and may be debated. Advance to change the order of business, the motion requires a majority vote. Say "I move to advance article...". It must be made when no other business is pending.

11. CAN A MOTION BE WITHDRAWN? Yes, if it has not been put before the meeting by the moderator, it may be withdrawn by the person making it. Such a motion to withdraw requires a majority vote if the motion to be withdrawn has been admitted to the meeting by the moderator.

12. HOW DO YOU AMEND A MOTION? An amendment requires a majority, can be debated, and also can be amended itself. Amendements are voted on in the order of last presented forward to first one presented. Written copy must be given to the Moderator. Only two amendments or one amendment on the first amendment are allowed at one time, i.e., an infinite number of amendments, but only two at a time.

13. HOW IS THE BUDGET CONSIDERED? Moderator states the article in general terms, somone (usually Selectman) moves the motion, the meeting hears the comments of the moving party and the report of the Advisory Committee. Moderator calls for further discussion, amendments — questions are then in order. Items of the budget can be separated for a vote, amended, or debated. The School Budget can be amended, but effect of the vote is not binding if the amendment decreases the budget, as schools have fiscal autonomy. In the event of a reducing amendment, the courts may compel the town to appropriate the deficiency together with a penalty totaling 25% of the deficiency. An amendment, however, can cause the School Committee to reconsider.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE COHASSET LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS.

How to really participate at T.M.

The Office of the Town Counsel has suggested the following procedures when a voter wishes to consider only part of an Article in the warrant once that Article has been put forward by the Moderator and a motion has been made.

As a rule, the Moderator reads aloud to those in attendance at the Town Meeting each Article in the order in which it appears in the Warrant. A Selectman or other moving party then introduces a motion as follows: (1) that the Article in question be considered, covered and acted upon in one vote; (2) that action be taken in accordance with the tenor of the Article: or (3) that certain adjustments by motion be made a part of the Article. This motion is then open for discussion.

Some Articles in Cohasset's Warrant, (for example, Budget Article IV and Article V which incorporates the Personnel Classification By-Law Schedule) are conducive to a division into their parts. If a voter wishes to direct the discussion to only one part of such an Article, he/she may proceed in one of several ways. If the participant wishes an explanation of the recommended appropriation for a particular account in Budget Article IV, he/she would request of the Moderator a point of information regarding same, as for example, the expenses of the Personnel Committee. The Moderator, in turn, would request the individual in charge of that area to explain the items included in the appropriation. If a participant wishes to question a budget appropriation item individually (for example, personal services of cemeteries), or by category (cemeteries), he/she would move to amend the motion to consider the Article in its entirety by using this form:

"MOVED: That a particular item as referred to in appendix of the warrant, account number_____ in the amount of $_____, be stricken and that there be substituted therefor the amount of $_____." If this motion is passed then the figures in the main motion are changed to reflect the above amendment.

Presumably, even though one has no particular figure in mind as a substitute for the recommended appropriation for a department, one could move to amend the motion to act upon the entire Article in one vote as follows:

"MOVED. That the pending motion be amended so that Article IV is not acted upon in one vote but that Account Title(s)_____ and Number(s)_____ be separately considered and voted upon."

If an Article cannot reasonably be divided into sections, the motion to amend the motion calling for action on the Article could be worded:

"MOVED. That the pending motion be amended by striking (insert words to be stricken) and by substituting therefor the following (insert desired language) so that the motion reads as follows:..."

A motion to amend (called the primary amendment) and its merits may be debated and may itself be amended by a secondary amendment. No more than one primary and secondary amendment may be before the voters at one time. Furthermore, no motion may exceed the scope of the Article at which it is directed.

Weapons freeze

To the Editor:

The danger of world-wide disaster from the stockpile of 50,000 nuclear weapons is becoming more evident each day.

Many people feel a mutual weapons "freeze" is a positive 1st step to reduce the danger, although many are skeptical of any Russian promise. Brezhnev says he wants to reduce nuclear weapons, but if we agree to a freeze, how can we be sure the Russians won't cheat?

Well, we don't have to trust them. From 100 miles up, our reconnaissance satellites, orbiting the earth every 90 minutes, photograph 1000 mile wide strips of the Soviet Union and radio the pictures down. These orbiting cameras can zoom in on, and identify objects the size of a license plate. That level of details allows the Pentagon and CIA to locate, identify, and count the Soviet Union's nuclear forces precisely. There is little chance that they could build, transport and deploy weapons without detection.

But would the Russians try to cheat? In June, 1980, the Dept. of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the State Dept., as well as the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, issued a joint position paper that stated that "Soviet compliance performance under 14 arms control agreements has been good." (Congressional Record, June 27, 1980. p.H5839).

The agreements referred to include the 1963 Nuclear Test Ban, the 1967 ban on Nuclear Weapons in Outer Space, the 1968 Non-Proliferation Treaty, SALT I, signed in 1972 and expired in 1977, but not violated by the Russians. SALT II, signed in 1979, but not ratified by the US has been upheld by the Soviets.

The real risk is in continuing to build more nuclear weapons, rather than in a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

John R. Geraghty

You ought to go

To Every Cohasset Voter:

You really ought to come to Town Meeting, you know. It's Saturday, April 3, beginning at 1 p.m. in the High School Auditorium.

Here are 10 good reasons to come. One of them must be for you.

☐It's a serious public duty. Nothing preserves democracy like using it.

☐It's a big help to your town officials. We want to know what you want us to do. And we need a quorum.

☐It's a real education. You can learn more about town operations in a few hours than you can the rest of the year.

☐It's involvement. If you're looking for a role in local affairs, here's a way to get started.

☐It's a novelty. If you've never been to a New England Town Meeting, you owe it to yourself to take a look.

☐It's relaxation. After a morning with the broom and dishpan or a paint brush and rake, take it easy and relax at Town Meeting.

☐It's live advocacy. Here's your chance to sway a crowd, make a pitch, register a gripe. If you don't, someone will!

It's great theatre. Observe the human drama of persuasion and rebuttal, watch the "engineering of consent."

So, no more excuses. Take a few hours on Saturday, April 3, beginning at 1 p.m. Try it, you'll like it!

Energy exchange abandons Cohasset

For several months, Energy Exchange operated out of the abandoned Cohasset Motors building on Route 3A.

The company which seemed to be doing a booming business was dealing in oil and gas exploration, according to one of the former employes.

Last week a Mayflower moving van pulled up to the building and cleared away every last stick of office furniture.

The new home of Energy Exchange is Tampa, Florida.

Many people wondered what was going on in the building just off the main road. The huge windows of the former car dealership showed plenty of activity.

Police Chief John DeBassio said the operation never meant to be permanent at that site. The chief said he made some inquiries when the business opened in the building.

"I was told it was just temporary," the chief said. The rest of the operation was then located in the Cohasset Professional Building opposite Cushing Plaza. For a while both locations were used by the company.

Now the phones are disconnected. Callers are referred to the Tampa headquarters.

The Mariner wanted to ask company officials a few questions — but it seemed they didn't want to give away any answers.

Calls to people who had been connected with Energy Exchange all indicated the only answers could come from Florida from someone still employed by the company. Several calls to the Tampa headquarters were referred from one worker there to another.

The person deemed to have available information on how many people were transferred down South and how many were added to the ranks of the unemployed was unwilling to come to the phone or return calls.

So the building is empty today. The nightwatchman no longer keeps the lights on past midnight. The laid off secretaries and other office help keep watch from their homes over the help wanted ads.

The marquee above the old office is blank white, just as it was in the few months Energy Exchange operated there.

The old Cohasset Motors building is empty once again.

Revaluation plagues the budget

The $400,000 deficit for this year's budget still existed when the Mariner went to press this week.

Meetings continue to go on with town and state officials as a way out is sought.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen, and other officials were to go to the state Department of Revenue today (Wednesday) to try once again to reach a compromise.

Thus far the state has refused to move from the position that unless revaluation is complete, the projections may not be the base of the tax rate.

Revaluation isn't complete and officials aren't sure whether it will be done to the state's satisfaction by June 30, the end of this fiscal year.

Still everyone involved in the budget process is moving ahead with the same base for the coming year's budget — that budget is the one town meeting is to vote Saturday afternoon at the high school.

People say the revaluation will certainly be finished by June of 1983, so the figures will hold up.

Selectmen are dissatisfied with the townwide revaluation project. Last Wednesday the board decided to assign town counsel to review the appraiser's contract and recommend any action to insure that the tax rate is set as soon as possible.

Ainslie explained the unanimous vote, "We're asking the opinion of town counsel as to what the liability and responsibility is of the individual, and what can be done to speed up (the process)."

Because the appraiser, Thomas Mahony, did not provide inspectors with enough information to evaluate the reappraisal project, the state's Bureau of Local Assessments has delayed setting the town's property tax rate.

When asked if selectmen were dissatisfied with Mahony, Ainslie responed, "I think it's the understatement of the year. We're dissatisfied, and I think everybody is, that the data hasn't been forthcoming on time."

Ainslie said town counsel would find out what action could be taken if Mahony failed to provide the information. "We have no assurance that he's going to come through at all, and what are our options if he doesn't?" said Ainslie.

The townwide revaluation project, which began in August 1980, was supposed to have been completed by last July. However, Mahony completed work early this year and problems arose when the state recently began reviewing his assessment data.

According to state inspectors, Mahony had not provided, as required, information on how he calculated individual property values, documents supporting his analysis of recent property sales, proper documentation of land values and proof that an acceptable standard was used in valuing second bathrooms, garages and other special features in homes.

Mahoney said he has all the information needed to satisfy the state, but that not all of it is written down.

AFS auction

The Cohasset AFS (American field Service) Chapter needs your contribution to its fund-raising auction evening on May 1.

Look through your attic, cabinets, closets, and cellar storeroom for those items you can't use but someone else might love to bid for. Donate your special talent — hairdressing, gourmet cooking, cleaning, repair work, etc. Or ask your company to contribute its products or services to this worthy cause.

Proceeds of the auction will help provide financial aid for students to participate in AFS international/ intercultural programs. Auction items must be listed soon, so please phone in your donation now. Call Jo-Ann Rossi at 383-6818.

Ready for the Roadrace-By-the-Sea

The Rotary Club sponsored Roadrace-By-The-Sea will begin at 1 p.m., Sunday, April 4 on the Cohasset Common.

Several thousand spectactors are expected to gather on the Common to watch the 800 runners compete in the 6.2 mile race along Cohasset's Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road.

The race will begin on South Main Street, in front of the Cohasset Community Center. It will proceed along South Main Street, up Elm Street towards Cohasset Harbor, follow Margin Street to Atlantic Avenue, past Sandy Beach, merge onto Jerusalem Road, follow Forest Avenue to North Main Street and follow North Main back to the Common, ending in front of the Town Hall.

This year's runners will be easily distinguished by blue and white Roadrace-By-The-Sea T-shirts. This year more than two dozen local businesses sponsored the purchase of these T-shirts, which will be given to each of the runners at check-in. Other local merchants participated by donating everything from 3,200 safety pins to over 100 gallons of Gateraid, provided free of charge to all runners after the race.

This year, Will Cloney, president of the Boston Athletic Association, organizers of the Boston Marathon, to be held this year on April 29, will be the honorary starter of the roadrace and will also award the trophies to the individual and team winners.

Nearly 100 volunteers, including Rotary Club members and other individuals, will work this year to make this annual fund raising event a successful and professional sporting event. To enhance the enjoyment of the spectactors, food and drink will be available at Rotary Club manned concession stands, located at the Community Center.

Race Co-Chairmen this year, Peter Logan, vice-presidlent of the Rotary Club and Roy Fitzsimmons have a special plea this year to residents and spectactors.

All dogs along the race route should be on a leash or restrained in some way. Officials caution that serious injuries could occur with interference with the runners along the course and at the finish line.

Check-in times for the runners who pre-registered by the March 27 deadline will be on Saturday, April 3 from 9 a.m. to noon and on Sunday, April 4, before the race from 9 a.m. to noon at the Town Hall. Runners checking in will receive Roadrace T-shirts and I.D. numbers, which establish their starting position.

There will be no registration for the race on the day of the race.

Recreation fund explained in detail

By John Worley

The Recreation Commission has submitted to the Board of Selectmen and Town Counsel, an article for the 1982 Town Meeting, that will allow the Recreation Department to utilize a Recreation Fund.

An article passed in the 1977 Town Meeting authorized the Recreation Department to establish a "Revolving Account Fund". However, the restrictions placed on the use of that fund are so severe that its general use is precluded. For example, all money accrued may be used only for contracted services.

This means that equipment or salaries, the essential cost of any program, may not be paid through this fund. All programs conducted through the Revolving Fund must be 100 percent self-supporting. This means that all money generated from a specific program can be used only for that program, and all costs incurred by that program must be met from the fee charged.

Further there is a $5,000 limit per fiscal year that can be revolved through the Revolving Account Fund. All in all, the Revolving Account Fund does little to supplement the Recreation Department's ability to conduct programs, pay salaries, or purchase equipment.

The Recreation Commission will propose at the 1982 Town Meeting to establish a new fund, called a "Recreation Fund," that would supercede the existing Revolving Account Fund. The new fund, once approved by a majority voice vote, would allow the Recreation Department the latitude and maneuverability necessary to conduct Recreation programs and services.

The Recreation Fund, would, with approval of the Board of Selectmen and the Recreation Commission, allow the Department to place receipts from fees wholly or partially self-supporting Recreation programs in a special account which would be kep. separate and distinct from any other funds of the Town.

In turn, collected money would be used solely for maintenance and support of recreation services of the town, including purchase of equipment and salaries of employees for conducting various programs or services.

After the approval of the Recreation Commission, expenditures may be made by the town accountant without further appropriation. The town accountant will submit annually, a report of the Recreation Fund to the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Board, and the Recreation Commission.

With this fund the town could also accept gifts, grants of money, and property for the purpose of public Recreation and entertainment.

Cluster thought over

Plans for the cluster development at 100 Pond Street were looked over by the board of health this week.

A formal hearing on a request to waive a regulation on the waste system at the site will be held sometime in April.

Frederick Thayer, who owns the land, brought five experts with him to answer the health board's questions. The group detailed the way the small sewage treatment plant would work.

The waiver of the regulation is being sought because living up to the regulation for a reserve area for the septic part of the system would mean filling part of the swamp.

Cable TV literature is for the asking

As Cohasset proceeds to study the issue of Cable television, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is making available to the public materials on the subject.

David Chittim, chairman of the library trustees, is also a member of the town's cable TV study committee. He has initiated discussion on the library trustee board about the library's role in a local cable system.

Public discussion of cable most often focuses on the entertainment services it can offer. Educational and governmental bodies are exploring the informational uses of cable.

Marilyn Rehnberg, a public librarian in Illinois, writing in Community Television Review, said:

"Cable television is a key factor in the library's survival as a public information utility. The combination of cable and satellite for both data and image transmission may offer an economically feasible way for libraries to share resources among themselves and directly to the public. In much the same way that the library has in the past acted as purchaser/disseminator of print publishing on behalf of its borrowers, it can purchase online publishing and disseminate desired information via public computer terminals and cable TV."

A special display of materials on Cable TV will be on a window sill in the New Book Room for one month. Some of the items in the library's collection are:

Community Programming on Mass. Cable Systems, by the Massachusetts Cable TV Commission.

The Cable Licensing Process in Mass.; A Practical Guide for Municipal Officials and Cable Advisory Committees.

Cable in Mass. 2, by the Founders Annex Public Service Project; a brief review for the layman of the history, technology and applications of community cable.

Cable in Boston: A Basic Viability Report, by Whitewood Stamps Inc. "Will cable expand the economic base and sources of power, or will cable aggravate present distortions in the body politic. The major municipalities are future-makers."

Schools and Cable Television, by the National Education Association.

On the Cable: The Television of Abundance, by the Sloan Commission on Cable Communications.

The Wired Nation: Cable TV: The Electronic Communications Highway, by Ralph Lee Smith.

The Cable/Broadband Communications Book 2, by Knowledge Industry; explores structure and ownership, federal regulations, ascertainment of community needs, public service applications, cable and computers.

Cable Television: A Guide for Citizen Action, by Monroe Price and John Wicklein.

The Here, Now and Tomorrow of Cable TV in Education, by the Massachusetts Advisory Council on Education.

Broadcasting and Cable Television: Policies for Diversity and Change, by the Committee for Economic Development.

Cable TV in the Cities: Community Control, Public Access and Minority Ownership, by the Urban Institute.

The Information Society as Post-Industrial Society, by Yoneju Masuda, Institute for the Information Society, Tokyo. "CATV would not consist merely of multi-channel TV broadcasts," but as a core feature of the "computerized city" would involve "inquiries from individual homes, constituting two-way information services such as local news, shopping and leisure consultation, emergency communication, medical and infant nursing consultation, education."

Future Survey Annual 1981, by the World Future Society, especially the chapter on "Communications."

Guide for handicapped at library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has received "Access to Boston: A Guide for Disabled Persons" published in 1981 by the City of Boston.

The book, which is over two hundred pages long and includes information on over 350 locations, was the idea of a Boston University student who wanted to take a positive approach to eliminate architectural barriers. Boston University students, now organized as H.O.P.E., Helping Other People in Everyway, the Mayor's Office on the Physically Handicapped, the Boston Public Facilities Department, the National Parks and Recreation Service, and the Information Center for Individuals with Disabilities utilized their professional and personal resources to produce a guide which is useful to visitors who may not be familiar with the neighborhoods of Boston, as well as disabled individuals who work and live in the City.

"Access to Boston" is organized by neighborhood, transportation services, day trips, half-day trips, telephone/TTY access for the deaf, and alphabetically. It includes neighborhood information and fold-out maps, categorical listings (restaurants, night spots, museums, fast food emporia, drug stores, optical services, etc.), access symbols, site descriptions and more.

The publication is easy to use. It will be useful to families and individuals planning outings or searching for accessible services in the city of Boston from the Back Bay to the Waterfront and including Coolidge Corner and Harvard Square areas nearby.

Special lists of volume-controlled public telephones, restaurants with Braille menus, museums with touchable exhibits, and sources of hand-controlled car rentals are, according to the experts in the field, the best available.

Legislators back the anti-gamblers

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., and Fred Moran, of Adams, vice president of C.A.C.G., participated in Thursday's meeting of LANCE (Legislators Against New Casino Establishments) at the State House.

LANCE was conceived in December as a regional strike force against casinos. Its membership draws from the six New England states, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset is vice chairman of LANCE and was the official host for its second conference. In her opening remarks Murray pointed out that the very best estimates of revenues to be received by the state from casino gambling amount to only two tenths of one percent of the total state budget.

"The financial benefits of casinos are negligible to all but the casino owners. They may be taking a lot of important people out to lunch now and boosting the restaurant business, but in the end casinos offer no free lunch for the average person. I have to ask just how much this state is for sale. How much are we willing to sacrifice our quality of life for the private gain of Big Money?" Oteri said.

Moran, who is also president of Voices Not Vices, said that casinos are one gamble the legislature should not take, especially when polls indicate lack of support across the state for the legalization of casinos. "The phony lure of easy money would be paid for by generations to come. The consequences are irreversible. We are the knot which ties that which was in the past with that which will be. They say legalize it because it already exists. Because theft, murder and rape exist do we legalize them?"

Sen. Steve Casey of Connecticut is chairman of LANCE. He summed up his feelings with, "I don't consider myself a prude, but casinos are damn awful."

Sen. Paul Doane, who represents the Cape and Islands, said that the issue of casino gambling far transcends the boundaries of any community hoping to establish a casino. He is convinced that casinos would have a diastrous effect on the overall tourist industry in Massachusetts, which is known for its beaches, lakes and history.

Rep. Haden Greenhalgh of Harwich insisted that casino gambling is not the only avenue left for increasing revenues. He felt that several agency changes could create twice the sum of money we could get from casinos.

Rep. Thomas Lynch of Barnstable was called away from the podium before he was able to deliver a formal statement. Lynch has often represented anti-casino forces in debates on the issue.

Lindsay Tait, immediate past president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, described the findings of the Chamber's task force which studied casino gambling and declared its opposition to it in this state. He recalled that the Chamber's goal of economic development also considers quality of life.

Sen. Ned Kirby of the Second Plymouth District said that the casino industry attracts "satellite industries" which are detrimental to all residents. "We don't want the wrong element having undue influence on what goes on in this building (the State House."

Leonard Henson, chief of the Organized Crime Division for District Attorney Newman Flanagan of Norfolk County, relayed Flanagan's opposition to casino gambling. Henson described how money made in illegal enterprises lines the pockets of the lords of crime. "That kind of money buys murder, buys corruption — anything that is anathama to decency. The biggest problem organized crime has is not making money. The problem is to legitimize that money."

Rep. Jean White of New Hampshire referred to the recent promotion of casinos for burned out Rockingham Park. "There are better ways of generating money. Beware the soft sell approach."

Chuck Hardwick, Assistant Whip of the New Jersey Assembly, advised participants that the New Jersey experience is one that every state should look at before considering casino gambling. "Economic problems comparable to those in Massachusetts existed in New Jersey when casinos were being considered. We were told that New Jersey would not be like Las Vegas and a euphoric picture was painted. Visit New Jersey and ask yourself if you would be any different in Massachusetts. Many of the ills created by casinos are all legal — the almost round the clock gambling, the free liquor dispensed by casinos, the people being squeezed off their property."

William Passannante, Speaker Pro-Tempore of the New York Assembly, and Sen. Frank O'Connell of Pennsylvania addressed the gathering via telephone hookup.

Anti-casino leaders Thomas Laverne, Charles Kriss, and Howard Reilly from No-Dice, We Love New York, and Howard Kay of Citizens Concerned About Casino Gambling of Rhode Island also spoke before the group. Sidney Radnor, a consultant to the Canadian Mounted Police and undercover agent for vice squads, opposes casinos because he believes that there is no way a state can possibly police them effectively. "You can talk about the pros and cons of economics, but in the end it is a whole different world."

A long list of legislators and civic leaders from Massachusetts and other northeastern states submitted written messages to the LANCE record. From all indications the March 31 hearings of the casino bills before the Government Regulations Committee at the State House should be even livelier than last year.

Seahawks win another 10 games

The Seahawk Youth Hockey Teams suffered a slight let-down this week as they resumed league play following their tournament and district Playoffs, but still managed to post victories in 10 of their 16 encounters.

Charlie Lersch had a pair of goals as the Bantam A's maintained their hold on Second place in the South Shore Conference with a 5-2 triumph over Quincy. Steve Remedis, Jamie Chisholm, and Bobby Weisslinger also dented the nets for the A's while Remedis, Bobby Salvador, Weisslinger, Matt Glennon, and Jamie Kelly were credited with assists.

The Bantam B's split a pair of games, beating Hingham 5-0 and losing a squeaker to Quincy 2-1. Goaltender Wayne Hollis will receive a "Shutout" patch for his outstanding effort against the Harbormen, and Goalie John Belsan also must be applauded for his superb performance against the "President's City" Icemen, David Cogliano notched the lone Seahawk score against Quincy after being set up by Kevin Richardson.

The Bantam C's receive our nod as "Team of the Week" by virtue of their 4-2 upset of top-ranked Plymouth I coupled with their 9-1 pasting of Whitman-Hanson-Kingston. Chris Baker, John McCarthy, Sean Mayo and David O'Donnell divided the scoring against Plymouth while Baker, Greg Sandonato, Jay Cronin, Andy McCarthy and O'Donnell were credited with assists. "Hat Tricks" were the order of the day against W-H-K as Baker, Mayo and Rick Sparrow all registered triples. Baker and Mike O'Donnell earned "Playmaker" patches with 3 set-ups each while Joey Mahoney(2) and J. McCarthy also earned assists.

The Pee Wee A's, currently in third place in their division, dropped a 6-4 decision to Quincy. Todd Henry, Jason Szep, Billy Resnick, and Jeff Hartwell hit the target for our skaters while Hartwell, Henry, Seth Webb, and Mark Sindone provided the set-ups.

The Pee Wee B's continued to play outstanding hockey as evidenced by their wins over Hingham 4-1 and Quincy 4-3. "Puck-Poppers" against the Harbormen were Brian Curran, John Meschino, James Misakian, and Brian McGovern while assists were doled out to Jeremy Chalmers, Jamie Hoffman, Dickie Chase, Danny Pompeo, Jason Clark and Meschino. Misakian fired a "Hat Trick" to lead the B's to victory over Quincy. John Goffar added the final tally and Pompeo (2), Chase and Todd Fitzpatrick served as playmkers.

The Pee Wee C's were nipped by Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 3-2, James McGowan and Gilbert Rebello lit the scoring lamps and Rebello, John Niland and Christopher Gong added assists.

The Squirt A's tied Weymouth 3-3 and then lost to top-ranked Quincy 4-3. John Galluzzo (2) and Chris Olivieri were the target-busters in the Weymouth affair while John Zimmer(2) and Michael Meers contributed assists. Zimmer (2) and Jeffrey White fired the "laser-beams" against Quincy while assists were metered out to White, Olivieri, Mike Richardson, Chris Sullivan and Billy Hinghston.

The Squirt B's saw their league winning streak end at 10 when they were edged by first place Quincy 4-3 after romping over Neponset 8-2. Brian Pompeo, Michael Dundon (2), John Mahoney, Tony Ventolieri (2), Michael Moog, and Chris Ventolieri were the "Hit Men" against Neponset while Danny Dundon, Pompeo and Pat Glennon fired the "bullets" against Quincy and Mahoney was credited with the lone assist.

The front-running Squirt C's knocked off Plymouth 3-2 and then thumped Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 8-4, Colby Mahoney (the lone female skater in our organization this year) receives our nod as "Player of the Week" as she scored the winning goal in the C's victory over second place Plymouth. Sean Noonan and Brian Burke had notched earlier tallies for the Seahawks while Terence Shea (2), Damon Sparrow, and Eric Fitzpatrick added assists. Sparrow netted a "Hat Trick" and added 2 assists to pace the C's to their win over W-H-K. Shea had a pair of goals and three assists which earned him a "Playmaker's patch in the contest. Steve Boardman, Noonan and Tony Muzzi joined the scoring parade while David Orpen (2) and Noonan also picked up assists.

The Mites out-gunned Duxbury 9-5 and whitewashed the Brewins 7-0 behind the superb goaltending of Matthew Ventolieri. Greg Salmaine takes down this week's "Marksmanship" award with a "Texas Hat Trick." In addition to Greg's four goals, Pat Henderson had a "Hat Trick," and Alfie Rogers and Gary Dunham lone tallies in the Mites shoot-out with Duxbury. Henderson with another "Hat Trick," Rogers (2), Paul Frey and Salmaine were "Barn Burners" in the latter contest.

Senior Bob Donahue keeps his eyes focused on the batter at baseball practice last week, as "Boca," a golden retriever stretches out behind him.

Coach Burnell moves over

By Donna Cogliano

Hockey coach Tom Burnell made the transition from ice hockey rink to baseball diamond within a span of four days. Burnell will direct this year's baseball team in his first year as varsity coach.

Last year the Skippers finished the season with a 2-16 record. Burnell said he knows little about lst year's team.

"I think we have a good group of young athletes. Hopefully the team will be more competitive than last year. Not having coached last year — I don't know what the other teams will be like," said Burnell.

Baseball tryouts began three weeks ago. The squad was recently narrowed to 35 players from which varsity and junior varsity teams will be chosen.

This year's squad will be led by senior co-captains Joe Becker and Kevin Dooley. Becker is expected to play shortstop while Dooley will contribute from the mound with his pitching expertise.

Two heavy hitters have returned for the Skippers. Senior Dana Infusino and junior Richie Evans are expected to swing big bats for the Skippers. Infusino will pitch and Evans will protect the third base area.

Other pitchers who look strong include juniors Bob Meers, Andy Songer, Biff Broderick and Bob Donahue. Besides pitching these players will probably play in the following positions: first base, Meers; second base, Songer; third base, Broderick and outfield, Donahue.

Bill Cuff, Tom Stanford and Lee Wilson are competing for catching duties.

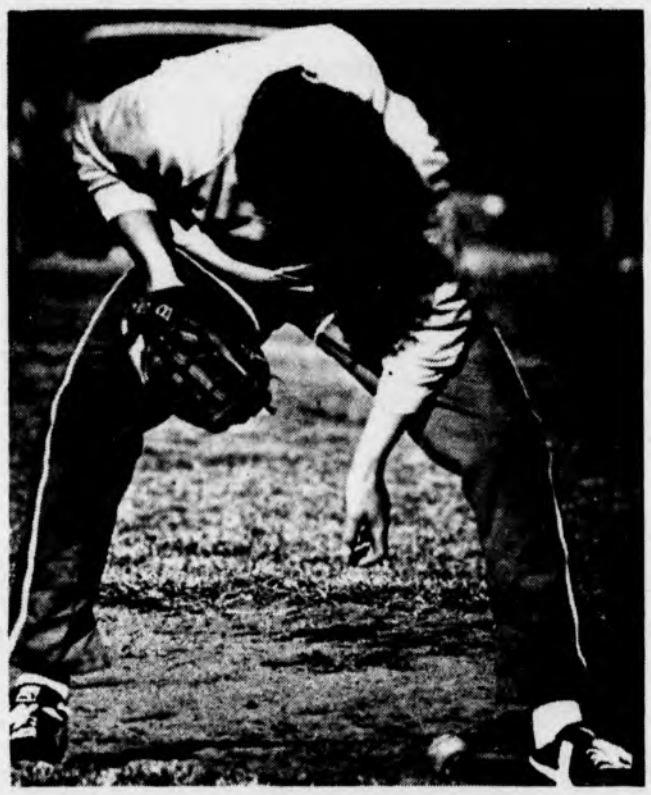
According to Burnell, the rest of the field will include: first baseman, Paul Buckley, a senior; sophomore Lee Reid at second; Jack Maloney in shortstop; Brown at third base; and senior Torin Sweeney and junior Mark Gunnville as outfielders.

This week the Skippers will scrimmage versus Scituate and Hingham. Cohasset will open their season in the South Shore League against Hull at home on Wednesday, April 7.

Hopefully, Burnell's baseball crew will meet with as much success as his hockey team did this past winter. The hockey team won the SSL title and advanced to the quarterfinals of the Eastern Mass. tourney.

Kickball volunteers needed

For the past five years, the Recreation Department has conducted a Kickball program for girls and boys in grades K through 3.



The department would like to offer the program again this spring, beginning in late April, running into early June on Tuesdays for grades K and 1, and on Wednesdays for grades 2 and 3.

There are usually four teams in each division, with about 12 youngsters on each team.

In order to conduct the program this year, they need two volunteer coaches for each team, that is; a total of eight coaches for the K and 1 group, and eight coaches for the 2 and 3 group. A time commitment will be about 1½ hours per week for a six or seven week period, either on a Tuesday or Wednesday afternoon, from 2:45 p.m. to about 4 p.m.

While Kickball remains a very basic type of sport from the coaches point of view, it is an ideal activity for the younger child as the mechanics of the sport develop general co-ordination, small and large motor co-ordination, use hand co-ordination, as well as fun and exercise. The competitive aspect of the program, while present is kept low key, and the emphasis is placed on skill development and having a good time.

If you are interested and can afford to donate 1½ hours a week of your time for your child, please call the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791, between 7 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Shortstop Jack Maloney reaches for a missed ground ball.

Antique show & sale

Plans are underway for the Beechwood Congregational Church to hold their 6th Annual Antique Show and Sale in Cohasset's Town Hall on June 4 from noon to 9 p.m. and June 5 from 10 to 4 p.m.

Antiques such as fine glassware, furniture, clocks, jewelry, dolls and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A snack bar will be available. Admission tickets are available through the antique dealers or members of the Beechwood Church.

Only T.M. can approve a budget

The presence of 200 registered voters is required for the opening and conducting of business at a Town Meeting. This quorum figure, established many years ago when Cohasset's population was much smaller, now represents only 4 per cent of the voter population.

If an annual Town Meeting cannot be held the budget for the following fiscal year — July 1 to June 30 — does not get approved and, therefore, the tax rate cannot be set and taxes cannot be collected. Further, the Town cannot borrow monies to make up for this loss of revenue as only Town Meeting can establish the authority to borrow.

In the past 10 years, the number of registered voters has increased by 21 per cent to 4,886 while the attendance at annual Town Meeting has decreased from a high of 20.3 per cent in 1971 to 7.02 per cent in 1977, 6.24 per cent in 1980 and 7.16 per cent in 1981.

In 1971 only 10 minutes beyond the scheduled starting time was required to reach a quorum for annual Town Meeting. Since then as long as an hour and 18 minutes (1980) has passed before the meeting could be called to order. In fact beginning with 1975, six out of seven annual meetings have required approximately 50 to 60 minutes to reach a quorum.

This year a budget of $7,356,458.00 is being presented at Town Meeting. 200 of 4,886 registered voters, or four per cent, may decide if, how and where this money can be spent.

Harbor regulations discussed

A set of proposed harbor regulations, recommended by the harbor committee, were reviewed and amended by selectmen last Wednesday.

Nothing has been finalized. Selectmen sent proposed regulations back to the harbor committee for further work.

Selectmen had two complaints regarding the regulations: the annual $25 fee for tying tenders to town floats was too high and a charge should be established for commercial tying to private floats.

Board members favored a $15 per year fee to tie a small boat to a town-owned float rather than the recommended $25 fee.

In letter to selectmen in January, the town's recreation commission opposed the $25 tie-up. The recreation commission felt the charge would represent "double taxation" since money is currently used to upkeep the existing floats. The extra fee would be "extremely unjust and controversial," since no extra services like security or specifically assigned tie-up areas were provided.

Though the committee recommended that no fee be charged for private floats moored in the harbor, selectmen want a fee charged for commercially used floats. The board agreed that other privately owned floats should be allowed in the harbor for free.

Selectmen sent back two regulations for revisions and approved four others. The board accepted regulations requiring a mooring decal, inspection of moorings and a change in the waiting list procedure. Selectmen also agreed with the harbor committee's recommendation that the $1.50 per-foot mooring fee remain the same this year.

Annual meeting

The annual nomination meeting of the shareholders of the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank will be held at the offices of the bank, 48 South Main Street, Cohasset, on Tuesday, April 13 at 8 p.m. for the purpose of nominating a Clerk of the Corporation for a term of one year, Directors for a term of three years, and the transaction of such other business as may legally come before the meeting, according to Edward T. Mulvey.

Local exhibitors

Artists from the South Shore have recently built an impressive record of exhibitions in national juried shows in New York.

Margaret Dillon's acrylic painting, "Blue Bottles" was chosen for exhibit at the National Arts Club with the National Society of Painters in Casein & Acrylics.

The current exhibit at the Salmagundi Club in New York features three South Shore artists as prize winners: Constance Flavell Pratt of Norwell won the Jessie Brooke McReynolds award for her pastel portrait; Margaret Dillon of Cohasset won the McConger award for her acrylic "Dean and Deluca's"; Wildfred Loring of Hingham won an award for his print. Exhibiting in the Salmagundi show at the same time are Mary Lizotte and Elaine Wentworth, both watercolorists from Norwell; Virginia Avery, watercolorist from Marshfield; Thompsen Hughes of Cohasset in oils; Sam Barber from the Cape and Betty Savenor from Lexington.

Art Center Critique Day

Margaret Dillon, director of the South Shore Art Center, will conduct a Critique Day on Saturday, April 10, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Art Center, Cohasset. This is a good opportunity for artists working on their own to participate in a discussion of their work as well as that of other artists. Artists may bring along five paintings, either finished or in progress.

Margaret Dillon is an award-winning exhibitor in Boston and New York. She received her B.A. from Pomona College in painting with graduate study at University Guadalajara, Mexico. She studied at Art Institute, Circola Studenti (Rome) and Art Students League.

For further information, please call the Art Center at 383-9548.

Easter Egg Hunt

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the annual Easter Egg Hunt for children age 3 to 11, on Saturday, April 10, at 1 p.m., Deer Hill School Field. The hunt, once begun takes only a short while to complete, hence, you should be on time.

Children will be assigned an area according to age: There will be a 3 to 5 year old group, 6 to 8 year group, and 9 to 11 year old group. Please find the area indicating your age when arriving at the Deer Hill School Field.

Parents are request to accompany younger children. All children will receive candy and there will be a prize for each group.

This year's Easter Egg Hunt is made possible through the auspices of the Cohasset Rotary Club and the George H. Mealy Post-118 of the American Legion.

Gina Haskins enjoys the warm sun and ocean view at Sandy Beach.

Aerobic exercise program that will help you shape-up. The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a fitness workshop on "Rebound Exercise" at the Town Hall Auditorium on Tuesday evening, April 13, at 7:30 p.m.

The workshop will be conducted by Beth Laney of the Vital Corporation who will demonstrate the use of the mini trampoline as it applies to Aerobic exercise. Also, included will be diet and exercise discussions and various forms of exercise regimes.

There is no fee for the 1½ to 2 hour workshop, however, reservations are required. If you are interested please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Reading Clinic speaker

The Cohasset Reading Clinic has invited Mary Chatillon, Director of Reading at Massachusetts General Hospital to speak on Wednesday, Rpril 14 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cushing Room, Rockland Trust Co., Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A Cohasset.

Mrs. Chatillon will discuss specific language disabilities and the Orton-Gillingham approach to remediation. The approach is a highly structured multi-sensory program for teaching children and adults who have not been successful in learning to read, spell and write with conventional classroom methods despite possession of average or above average intelligence.

Questions concerning dyslexia and services available to both children and adults will be included. This is an informal meeting open to interested parents and educators on the South Shore.

Following the meeting, the Cohasset Reading Clinic will discuss its annual six week summer program in reading, spelling and writing open to all students in area towns. A brochure is available upon request. For further information call Marcia H. Murphy at 383-0839.

Local merchants generous

Merchants in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell are being generous with contributions to the Auction to be held for the benefit of the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

For 20 years, this non-profit organization has brought natural science programs and activities to people of all ages throughout the South Shore. The Center has no funding — state, federal or town — and relies entirely on funds raised from memberships, donations, special events such as the upcoming auction, and a gift shop.

The Auction is to be held on Sunday, May 2 at 4 p.m., at Derby Academy, Burditt Street, Hingham. Already, contributions have been received from the Music Circus, Sevigny Candies, Alvin Hollis Co., Frank Krauth Co., Fabricare House, Hingham Car Wash, Steve Mehl's Boat House and A.J. Tomasi Nursery.

Any person, organization or merchant wishing to donate to this benefit, please call the South Shore Natural Science Center at 659-2559. The Center is located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell just off Route 123 and is open seven days a week from 9 to 4 weekdays and 1 to 4 Sundays and most holidays.

60 Plus Club to meet

Cohasset 60 Plus Club will meet Thursday, April 15, at the Unitarian Parish House. Coffee hour will be at noon.

At 1 p.m. the Consignment Shop of Cohasset will give a fashion show with styles for all ages. These outfits will be for sale.

There will be a boutique with a variety of items.

All proceeds will benefit the Consignment Shop.

Gypsy moth clinic

Mark your calendar! Free gypsy moth clinic, open to the public.

On Tuesday, April 6, Kennedy's Country Gardens, Inc. of Scituate (Rte. 3A) will sponsor a Gypsy Moth Clinic at Furnace Brook Middle School, Forest Street, Marshfield.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Bert Quisumbing Director of Research and Development, from the Health-Khem Corp. A panel consisting of the tree wardens of Marshfield, Walter Bartlett; Scituate, Carl Chessea; and Norwell, Wes Osborne will be there to answer your many questions.

The voter's guide for April 10 election

The League of Women Voters asked all candidates to answer two questions:

Question No. 1: What experience and/or special qualities do you have that would help you perform the duties of the office you seek?

Question No. 2: What are the most significant problems and opportunities you see for this position during the next term of office?

The answers appear under the candidates' names. Candidates are presented in the order in which their names will appear on the ballot.

Results of the questioning were released at town affairs night Tuesday at Town Hall.

MODERATOR

1 position - 2 years (to fill vacancy)

William D. Weeks, 130 Border Street (Appointed to fill a vacancy)

No. 1: The office of Town Moderator requires fairness, impartiality and integrity in the conduct of Town Meetings, and a thorough knowledge of the rules governing those meetings. I have been a practicing attorney for 26 years, and have served in the Massachusetts Senate, and as President and Presiding Officer of a variety of organizations, both public and private. I have presided at numerous meetings and throughout the years am familiar with the rules of parliamentary procedure, and feel that my background and experience fully qualify me to perform the duties of Town Moderator.

No. 2: One of the most serious problems our Town faces lies in the low turnouts at Town Meetings. Decisions are being made today at Town Meetings by less than 10 percent of the registered voters that affect the entire community. Town Meeting is a unique form of government, in which every voter has a right to participate, and we must expend every effort to preserve and strengthen it. I shall do all in my power to increase attendance at Town Meetings and to make the meetings interesting and worthwhile for all our citizens.

The Moderator also has an important role to play in making appointments to town boards and committees, and I look forward again to sharing in that process. The Moderator can do much in this way to ensure the continuation of volunteer participation in the ongoing public concerns of our community.

SELECTMEN

1 position - 3 year term

Rocco F. Laugelle, 18 Norfolk Rd. (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: For the past fifteen years I have held an elected office — the last three as Selectman. During this span of time, I have been involved in numerous decisions that have helped Cohasset remain one of the most financially secure towns in Massachusetts. I have always strived to make decisions that were in the best interests of the Town.

Cohasset has also been able to keep its characteristics as a wonderful place in which to live and raise children. The time I spend in Cohasset, both in my job and as an elected official, has made it easy for people to keep me aware of problems and to find quick solutions to their troubles. I am proud to serve Cohasset, and look forward to continuing to serve the Town to the best of my abilities.

No. 2: One of my major concerns as Selectman is finding qualified people to serve on the various committees for the Town of Cohasset. Many people believe that the elected officials can serve all the needs of the Town. This is not the case.

A lot of the committees are very time consuming and involve a considerable amount of research and study.

One of my main objectives during my next term of office will be to find qualified residents of Cohasset who are willing to serve these various committees.

James W. Lagrotteria, 104 Howe Rd.

No. 1: Founded, owned and managed a commercial printing company of over 50 employees for eleven years.

Owned and managed two liquor stores for three years.

For the past ten years, and presently, the business manager for Glastonbury Abbey. This included the negotiations to purchase, finance and build a $2,750,000 housing for the elderly project, "Lincoln School Apartments."

Vice-chairman and three year member of the Advisory Board, Town of Cohasset.

No. 2: The single most important concern for us all is the implementation of Proposition 2½, and its effect on town department budgets. The Selectmen's Office must provide the leadership to see that the implementation of 2½ on department budgets does as it was intended to do:

1. eliminate careless spending
2. reduce costs if and wherever possible
3. live within the Proposition 2½ guidelines

More importantly, however, they must provide the leadership to see that the fulfillment of Proposition 2½ on department budgets does not:

1. reduce services without regard to the proper completion of any job or function
2. indiscriminately eliminate the expenditure of money on maintenance, thereby creating havoc in years to come as equipment and buildings wear out
3. reduce personnel in any department to an unsafe level

The voters of Cohasset soundly approved the referendum instituting Proposition 2½ and I feel it is the solemn duty of the Office of Selectmen to fulfill the promise of 2½.

ASSESSOR

1 position - 3 year term

Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd. (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: — 16 years in home construction

—completed appraisal courses at Burdett College and Boston Center for Adult Education

— 12 years as assessor for the Town of Cohasset

No. 2: — to maintain equitable assessments in a fluctuating market.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

2 positions - 3 year term

Irene E. Brown, 35 Norfolk Rd. (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: My five years positive experience as a member of the Cohasset School Committee qualifies me to serve for another term. During these past years, I have weighed all issues objectively and have tried to act in the best interests of the taxpayers and the children of Cohasset. My accounting background and business experiences, I am the office manager in a manufacturing firm, have assisted me in evaluating and approving the school department budget. Being a mother of four also qualifies me as a budget-stretcher in these inflationary times.

For 15 years I have given volunteer service to the people of Cohasset in various capacities. During that time I have met many of you and have listened to your thoughts and ideas. I would continue that dialogue so that we might together work for an ever-improving school system.

No. 2: Maintaining the same quality of education for present and future students in the Cohasset school system with a declining enrollment and the constraints of Proposition 2½, will be the top priority of the School Committee in the future years. While on the surface declining enrollment would seem to limit the educational offerings of the schools, it will instead be the vehicle for our professional administrators and staff to show their expertise and innovative thinking to produce challenging curricula and positive learning opportunities for all students.

Proposition 2½ is a burden on a town like Cohasset that has been fiscally responsible for many years. While double digit inflation has been the norm, the School Department budget has risen only 20 percent in the past 7 years. Clearly this shows the responsible attitude of your elected committees. If re-elected, I would continue this responsiveness to the taxpayers of Cohasset, while working with the staff in a positive manner to maintain the quality education for which Cohasset is well known.

Martha K. Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd. (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: Since being elected 3 years ago, I have attended all meetings of the School Committee. Currently, I am Cohasset's representative on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. I also served as elected member and secretary of the Cohasset Planning Board, and on the Capital Budget Committee. Formerly, I was chairman of the Senior High and Junior High Communications Councils. I have also served as School Committee secretary, 2 years as School Committee delegate to the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, 2 years as School Committee representative on the sick bank, as well as on the secretarial and cafeteria collective bargaining sub-committees. School volunteer work has been in the math lab, and also as an original Cohasset Booster member. Formerly I was an appointed member of the School Committee sub-committee to study Health, Athletics and Physical Education for grades K-12 in the schools. Some of my community activities have included Well Baby Clinic, Bloodmobile, and member and Membership Chairman of the Cohasset Community Center for 3 years.

Born in Boston, I was educated in the Boston Public Schools. A graduate of Simmons College with a B.S. in Chemistry, I also attended Harvard University at the graduate level. I have lived on Old Pasture Road in Cohasset for 21 years, with my husband, Arne, and our 4 children, all educated in the Cohasset public schools.

My professional background includes: several years as executive member and officer of a Boston corporation; researcher in cancer at Children's Hospital and in the Department of Nutrition at Harvard Medical School, and special training in the legal aspects of collective bargaining.

My special qualities for the office include being a good listener to parent concerns, striving to treat all members of the community equally in my decisions, using common sense in weighing goals and priorities, and finally believing in the rights of an individual to speak, while treating that person with respect and responsiveness.

No. 2: Addressing the curriculum in regard to the declining enrollment is paramount this year. A long range plan must be prepared for the Jr./Sr. High School, incorporating an innovative curriculum. This is especially important, since there will be a decline of at least 111 pupils in the Jr./Sr. High by 1984. We must keep our high standards in biology, math and language; a full music program; as well as our excellent after-school offerings in athletics, and activities like the Dramatic and Math Clubs. We should identify and improve methods by which our schools can better prepare our graduates for careers in new employment fields, such as computers and communications. Our college bound students need more career information, and non-college youngsters need more marketable skills. We must utilize our find Special Needs Program to give students the maximum help. Since Federal assistance to schools in areas such as the 94-142 special needs assistance and lunchroom food supply funds are being curtailed, innovative ways to use block grants must be devised. We should use zero based budgeting instead of level funding to achieve more fiscal responsibility. Finally, in these troubled times, we need to retain the best teachers through proper use of our evaluation instrument.

Joseph R. Nedrow, 21 Fairoaks Lane

No. 1: As a businessman with three children in the school system, I feel I will bring a different perspective, background and set of experiences to the School Committee than is presently represented.

My educational background, work experience and many years involvement in a wide variety of educational activities have been excellent preparation to represent and serve Cohasset residents and parents as a member of the School Committee.

Additionally, as a General Motors executive responsible for activities in six states, I am intimately familiar with the problems, challenges and opportunities in creatively managing resources in a difficult economic climate.

I am confident I can make a contribution to improving the quality of our educational program through a common sense approach to this very difficult job.

No. 2: I think the greatest challenge facing the School Committee is to accept the realities of Proposition 2½ and to shift the focus of the entire community (including parents, administrators, teachers, staff and others) back to the children of Cohasset.

The School Committee should take the leadership role in this endeavor. Their decisions and actions can create a climate and spirit of cooperation that could bring the resources and talents of our entire community together in a way that will insure every child the opportunity to develop his skills and abilities to his maximum potential. This will not be an easy task, but if a way can be found to get everybody thinking about the children and not each other, we will find some pretty creative ways to get the education job done, in spite of 2½.

TRUSTEES OF COHASSET FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 positions - 3 year term

David Chittim, 130 Linden Drive (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: I have served one term as Library Trustee and am a candidate for re-election. The past three years, including one year as Chairman, have brought me considerable experience in the operations of our library and in familiarity with the concepts and objectives we share for the years ahead. My experience has also included participation in the budget process and in controlling the spending of the town's money. My long experience in business has been helpful in this regard.

No. 2: During the next three years Library Trustees

Cohasset Community Center: from crafts to karate

The program committee of the Community Center of Cohasset is very excited about its new offerings. Registrations for the Spring-Summer semester are now taking place at the center and will continue through April 9.

Classes will begin the week of April 12.

Membership in the community center is open to all with a minimal additional charge for non-residents. In addition to our mailing, programs will be available at local libraries.

Courses for youth include: bowling, children's crafts, creative drama, story book ballet, classical ballet, jazz, tap, gymnastics, karate, a nature program, modeling and fashion and soccer.

The center dance classes will be taught by Claire Gavrin Berman and Joan Kenney. Claire received her master's degree in Dance Education from Columbia University, has had extensive teaching experience and is well known for her performances and choreography. Her Story Book Ballet will offer three to six year olds a chance to discover movement, rhythms and coordination through routines following their favorite stories. In classical ballet, children aged six and up will learn basic positions, grace and discipline in routines done to traditional classical themes. Jazz will offer teens and adults an opportunity to learn snappy rhythms and steps to Broadway songs from Chorus Line, Fame, Hair and West Side Story.

Joan Kenney trained in Rhode Island with the Martha Graham Dance Company. She has appeared in summer stock and has had several years experience in choreography with such groups as the Hingham Civic Theatre. In separate classes for both children and teens and adults she will teach beginner and intermediate tap techniques choreographed to music.

The center's popular gymnastic and karate courses will continue on Saturday through the Spring.

Staff from the well-known Carole McCole Fashion Models School will come to the center to teach a modeling and fashion course featuring hair styling, posture and exercise, skin care, good grooming, poise, modeling techniques and social graces on Mondays after school.

Soccer for children aged four to six will be offered on Saturday mornings in a continuation of last year's successful program.

Adult courses include aerobics, basic bookkeeping, basic typing, basketweaving, calligraphy, cooking with food processors, creative needlepoint, contract bridge, creative writing, exercise for total fitness, beginners fitness, French literature, introduction to investments, introduction to forged silver jewelry, introduction to small boatbuilding, Italian, nature studies, pottery, quilting, western dance and country swing, weaving, whittling, tennis and yoga.

The Tuesday and/or Thursday evening aerobics course has been specifically designed to meet all levels. Basic bookkeeping and typing continue on Monday evenings for the spring semester. Both coil and reed basketry will be taught on Tuesday evenings by Donna Kelly who has a B.S. in Art from State University in New York and has been teaching and weaving since 1975.

Jane Doherty, who has been teaching adult education classes in the area, will introduce the food processor and the best procedures and techniques to use with it. Her classes will cover hors d'oeuvres and dips, sherberts and ice cream and salads and dressings.

Christina Allen who received her M.A. from the Rhode Island School of Design and has had extensive experience in art and teaching will teach those with some experience in needlepoint how to design their own originals, to match the type of stitch to the design, shade and achieve a three dimensional effect in her creative needlepoint.

Every aspect of writing from plays to poetry will be covered in Rhona Post's creative writing course. Rhona who is a Ph.D. candidate at New York University also underlines that each participant will be required to submit his own writings.

In addition her popular exercise for total fitness program, exercise specialist, Joanne Shepperd, this spring, will offer an additional course on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings in beginners fitness.

Douglas Guarino, who has a B.A. in economics from University of Mass. will provide insight into the mechanics of the market in this introduction to investments on Wednesday evenings.

A chance to design and enjoy a very creative hobby will be offered in introduction to forged silver jewelry with Matthew Nelson who has had over eight years of experience in the field.

Italy, her past, beauty and language will be offered in Filippo Tacano's course, Italian.

Victoria Smyth, who has a B.S. in Zoology from Michigan State University, and has worked as a park ranger will lead a nature studies course for teens and sults on Saturday mornings with field work done in the Cohasset area.

Mary Struzziero's popular quilting course will continue with a time change to Thursday evenings.

Weaving will be taught by Donna Kelly who will use a frame loom to be made by class members and will cover both tapestry and off loom techniques.

Christina Allen will teach whittling where students will learn familiarity with tools, an understanding of wood and will work up a piece of their own design.

Yoga with Claire Berman will concentrate on a slow stretching workout ending with a total relaxation.

Workshops include an introduction to archeology, basketweaving, a beauty workshop, childcare, cooking with a food processor, CPR, knitting, a puppet workshop, a tax seminar and quilting.

A trip to the Decorator's Showcase home, Elm Bank, in Wellesley will be offered on April 28. Other trips include Cappriland Farms in May and a family whalewatch in June.

For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

will have to provide as complete and qualitative service as possible within the constraints of Proposition 2½ and the steady growth of salary and operating costs. We hope to progress toward computerization of some library functions within the sub-region of libraries on the South Shore. We expect to be responsive to Cohasset people and their needs and designs regarding excellent library services.

Elizabeth F. Eaton, 30 Beach St. (candidate for re-election)

Did not respond.

Nancy M. Gilmore, 34 Summer St. (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: Libraries have always been of special interest and concern to me because they provide the materials essential to a literate, informed society. I worked as a page for three years in my town library while in high school. During my college years, I worked in the research department of the school library. I served on the Board of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for seven years acting, for the major part of that time, as chairman of volunteers. I worked as a volunteer at the library each week for seven years. I am currently completing my third term (nine years) as a trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

No. 2: The most critical problem facing municipal libraries today is adequate funding. It is essential that the high standards maintained by this public service not be jeopardized. A collection of books and other materials sufficient for the community's needs must be supported. The library must be open to the public enough hours to satisfy user requirements. This requires careful assignment of staff that has been limited by monetary cutbacks and whose duties are numerous.

Management of a public service operating under financial constraints is a challenge that must be met. Those responsible for this management must be knowledgeable and decisive in employing the monies available and, consequently, supplying the library's priorities. In these critical times, fiscal soundness is of primary importance. It will insure the continued functioning and progress of a public library dedicated to superiority.

BOARD OF HEALTH
1 position - 3 year term

No candidate filed.

PLANNING BOARD
1 position - 5 year term

L. Christine Bassett, 20 Westgate Lane

No. 1: During the last fifteen years, I have had experience in both the private and public sector. As a former college instructor, I developed organizational and communication skills essential to that profession. For the past twelve years, I have been in a managerial position in the operation of health care facilities. My present position is Director of Operations of a health care management firm, responsible for three long-term care facilities in Massachusetts. Part of my duties have involved facility project development from inception through construction and operation. This experience has given me familiarity with numerous town and municipal boards and agencies responsible for project approval.

No. 2: During the next five years, the community will face challenges that will dictate whether the essential character of Cohasset, as a single-family residential community, can be preserved. The Planning Board is in a position of determining whether new modes of development and usage are consistent with this traditional character.

For the future, as in the past, the Planning Board must address issues such as the proper sub-division of undeveloped lands, the potential conversion of single-family units to multiple-family dwellings, and the newly approved concept of cluster housing comprising both single-family and multi-family units. These and other issues must be dealt with in a manner that is consistent and equitable.

In these issues, the board must maintain its position, not as a legislator or creator of by-laws, but rather as the guardian of standards which reflect the consensus of Cohasset residents as well as the guidelines of state and local codes.

SEWER COMMISSION
1 position - 3 year term

Joseph M. Gwinn, 145 Beach Street (candidate for re-election)

No. 1: Two years as a member of the Board of Sewer Commissioners including the last year as Chairman.

Registered Professional Engineer.

No. 2: Overhaul the Sewer Department administrative procedures for more efficient operation.

Direct the development of plans and specifications for the new sewer plant at Jones Site by Metcalf & Eddy Engineers.

Upgrade the present sewer facility to insure continued reliable operation.

COHASSET HOUSING AUTHORITY
1 position - 5 year term

Kathleen M. Conte, 650 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Did not respond.

Ralph Perroncello, Pleasant Lane

No. 1: I am now retired after 32 years on the Cohasset Fire Department. I have seen the Housing for Elderly go from a piece of ledge to its finish as it stands now. I've been stationed at the Fire Headquarters since the complex for the elderly began. I've seen problems first hand at the onset, and I believe that I could help solve these problems. I am in town at all times and could be consulted at all times.

No. 2: I believe we need more low income housing in the town. I think more expenditures could be saved by having more scrutiny on the work that has to be done. I have seen work being done at the complex that is very shoddy and more supervision could be done. I know what has been done, as I've been at the Fire Headquarters in front of the Complex since its inception.

LAW CLASS REVIEW

Seniors in Mrs. Dorothy Wondolowski's Law elective course are receiving first hand experience on what the "due process" clause in our Constitution actually means.

Included as part of their month-long unit on due process is a film "Your Rights and Responsibilities." Produced by the Poloroid Corporation, this excellent film on judicial procedures is sponsored by the Massachusetts Association of Law Related Education (MALRE). The Association is made up of lawyers, judges, teachers and school counselors. The film presents an overview of all the steps in due process.

According to Mrs. Wondolowski, "our young people do not comprehend the realities of the American legal system." She went on to state that "in exposing my students to accurate information and practical experiences in American jurisprudence, I can hopefully bring about renewed interest in and knowledge of our system of justice."

To further add to their knowledge of and appreciation of the law the seniors have participated in a simulation unit provided by the Middlesex County Jury Commissioners. Playing the roles of jurors the seniors each received mailed summonses, filled out juror questionnaires, and read and studied the trial jurors' handbook. They also listened to a jury orientation talk recorded by Judge Lynch of the Middlesex Court.

The highlight of their eventful and educational unit was an "in-house" trip to the high school library to watch a 90-minute cassette on a criminal trial. With an actual judge and lawyers playing the key roles, the trial simulation challenged the interpretive abilities of the student jurors. The seniors were then asked to render a verdict. Their task was not yet completed as the students had to fill out three questionnaires dealing with different aspects of their decision-making process. The detailed questionnaires asked the students to analyze how they reached a verdict, their views of the credibility of witnesses during the trial, and the effectiveness of the cases presented by the defense and prosecution attorneys.

To prepare themselves for this arduous task, the "Law" students were assigned textual and outside readings as well as being asked to view an in-depth Channel 5 TV report on the subject.

Art Center registration at hand

Sunday, April 4 from 3 to 5 p.m. is the time to come to the South Shore Art Center to enroll in Spring classes and attend the opening of the Young Artists Exhibit in the Gallery.

Highlights of the afternoon will be a chance to meet the instructors and a chance to enjoy a printmaking demonstration by Albert Abany, a new teacher at the Art Center.

You need not be an accomplished artist to enjoy Art Center classes; ability levels range from absolute novice to professional artist. Some classes carry optional college credit through the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education Program. Enrollment must be made in advance for the classes, most of which continue for eight weeks.

For young artists, Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman will teach two classes. They are Mixed Media Workshop for high school age and Children's Art Workshop for children ages 7 to 11.

In the area of photography, Paul Fortin will teach Intermediate Photography and Linda Wasko will teach intermediate Darkroom Photography, for which students must have basic darkroom knowledge. Individual Darkroom is also available, which includes use of the darkroom for two hour sessions. Peter Anderson will conduct Photography Field Trip and Critique on two separate Saturdays for photographers of all levels.

Beginning and Intermediate Basic Drawing will be offered by Virginia Moore. Advanced Portraiture will be taught by Constance Pratt and Intermediate and Advanced Portraiture will be taught by Clement Micarelli. Techniques of Watercolor Painting will be offered by Mary Ann Patrick; Introductory Painting by David Tandy; and Creative Drawing and Painting by Louise Kalish. Uninstructed Studio provides a good opportunity to use the Center studios for your own work.

Some special one-day workshops will be offered for the Spring II term. The Experimental Workshop by Joseph Burbank is a workshop of mixed media. Joseph Burbank will also conduct a lecture-demonstration Matting and Framing Workshop. Artists may bring five finished or in-progress paintings to Margaret Dillon's Critique Day.

Syma will lead an exciting exploration of special relationships in Introduction to 3-D Design. Fashion Illustration drawing for publication will be offered by Clement Micarelli.

For further information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

Hazard in soil

Even making mud pies can be hazardous to your health. Children who live and play near soil containing high concentrations of lead may be unknowingly inhaling or ingesting the toxic element, according to Dr. Clark Nicklow, specialist for the University of Massachusetts Cooperative Extension Service Suburban Experiment Station in Waltham.

According to Dr. Nicklow, many homeowners are unaware of the high lead content in soil surrounding their homes.

Most soil contamination resulted from years of weathering, scraping and sand blasting of lead-based paint from area buildings, Nicklow says. High lead levels may also appear where a structure has been destroyed by fire. Lead can remain in the soil for hundreds of years, he adds.

The lab performs soil sample analysis for lead as well as 14 other elements such as cadmium, arsenic and aluminum.

If you are creating a new bath or redoing an existing bathroom, choose the color of your fixtures with care. They must not only be colors with which you will feel comfortable but colors that can also be worked with decoratively. While blue, beige, green and yellow are relatively safe colors, pink and grey require some deliberation. Pink imparts a feminine quality that men do not always easily acclimate to. Grey can make a bathroom appear somber, especially if it receives little sunlight. It may also be important to consider the color of an adjacent room or hall. For example, it is also a good idea to decorate the master bedroom in tandem with the master bath. Consult a professional. You will live with your bath a long time.

Decorators are stressing the freshness of the new pastel colors that for years have been confined to little girl's bedrooms. Here at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE we are pleased to feature Kyanize interior finishes which come in numerous shades and can be mixed to match any color scheme you desire. We're easy to find in No. Scituate at 763 Country Way where we are open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 and our phone is 545-3624. No matter how difficult the problem we enjoy the challenge of finding the solution.

Advisory Board recommendations for Saturday

The Warrants for the 1982 Annual Town Meeting, mailed to each household, contains the Advisory Committee's explanation of its approach to fiscal planning this year and reports the recommendations on departmental budgets as listed under Article 4 (the Budget).

The committee has noted the special problem this year of attempting to recommend total expenditures that complied with Proposition 2½ guidelines without having a certified property valuation base for the town.

Department heads and committees have accepted the recommendations even though in many instances these fall short of ideal expenditures. "We truly believe this cooperation is in the best overall and long-range interests of the town," the committee said.

The uncertainties this year again made it impossible for the Committee report recommendations on the other special articles before press time for the Warrant despite twice-a-week meetings since Jan. 1.

Following are the Advisory Committee's recommendations on most of the remaining articles as completed by Thursday, March 25:

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Articles 1-5: Recommendations on the Landfill articles will be made after a decision by the Board of Health.

Article 6: Authorization to collect parking fines. RECOMMENDED. No longer handled through courts.

Article 7: Enlarging Woodside Cemetery, $6,500 RECOMMENDED. Space is needed and funds will come from the sale of lots.

Article 8: Final bond principal payment on police and fire station. $10,000 RECOMMENDED.

Article 9: Budget deficiencies in snow removal, bonds and insurance expenses and interest. $38,158 RECOMMENDED. These are firm obligations, some of them occasioned by delay in setting tax rate.

Article 20: Acceptance of bargaining agreement with police. Agreement not reached as of March 25. RECOMMENDATION FROM FLOOR IF AGREEMENT REACHED.

Article 21: Authorization of contracts with state and county for road work. RECOMMENDED. Routine authorization.

Article 22: Road re-surfacing, $50,525. RECOMMENDED. Continues annual program of road re-surfacing. To be used to complete center of town Depot Court, Summer St., Rilpley Rd. All money available from State.

Article 23: Replace Doane Street culvert, $52,000. RECOMMENDED. Culvert which carries water from new reservoir is severely eroded. Money to come from Stabilization Fund.

Article 24: Gunite and repair walls and tidal gate carrying James Brook into Cohasset Harbor, $12,000. RECOMMENDED. Walls in poor and dangerous condition.

Article 25: Purchase of new street sweeper, $40,000. RECOMMEND appropriation of $6,000 to replace engine in present sweeper.

Article 26: By-law change to exempt certain employees covered by special contracts (Police, Fire Chiefs, Executive Secretary) from Personnel Classification and Compensation By-law. RECOMMENDED.

Article 27: Amend Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan to cover rules on Saturday and Sunday holidays. RECOMMENDED.

Article 28: Powers of Sewer Commissioners. RECOMMENDED. Will give Sewer Commissioners authority to establish regulations and rates without Town Meeting approval. This is similar to powers of other town boards such as water, health and library.

Article 29: Sets maximum of $300 on Sewer Department penalties. RECOMMENDED. Brings regulations in conformity with statute.

Article 30: Increase minimum sewer rates to $10.50 and $14.00 per quarter. RECOMMENDED. Sewer revenues are still only a fraction of operating costs.

Article 31: Matching funds for Leak Detection Program, $10,500 RECOMMENDED. Work is necessary and state has approved matching grant.

Article 32: Rehab Border Street water mains, $127,087 NOT RECOMMENDED. Work is needed but state has not approved grant of matching funds.

Article 33: Rehab Atlantic Ave. water mains, $243,912 NOT RECOMMENDED. Work is needed but state has not approved grant of matching funds.

Article 34: Establish more flexible Recreation Revolving Fund. RECOMMENDATION FROM THE FLOOR.

Article 35: Enlarge Regional Vocational School District. RECOMMENDED. Should open the school to larger number of students and thus share costs more broadly.

Article 36: To accept land on Black Rock Road. RECOMMENDED. Land is said to be unbuildable and acceptance of gift will be simplest form of acquisition by town.

Article 37: Alarm System Regulations. RECOMMENDED. Present unregulated situation causes expense, overloading of telephone lines, and danger in responses to actual and false alarms by police department, and often nuisance to neighbors.

Article 38: Acquisition of easement for drainage pipes. RECOMMENDED. Easement needed to correct drainage problem.

Article 39: Discontinue public vehicular traffic on a part of Highland Ave. RECOMMENDED. Section of road is narrow and hazardous to traffic. Has been closed for several years.

Article 40: Increase fees for sealing of weights and measures. RECOMMENDED. Fees have been unchanged for many years.

Article 41: To add to Stabilization Fund for harbor work, $10,000. NOT RECOMMENDED. While desirable to build Stabilization Fund, present finances do not permit. We are drawing on Fund for expenses this year.

Article 42: Unpaid bills, $116.04. RECOMMENDED.

Article 43: Authorize Assessors to assign street numbers. RECOMMENDED. Clears up uncertainty and designates agency responsible for function.

Article 44: Seven day notice period for Special Town Meeting. RECOMMENDED. Present 14-day requirement can be burdensome. Annual Meeting requires only seven days.

Article 45: To rescind reversion clause in authorized sale of Independence Building to Cohasset Historical Society. NOT RECOMMENDED. Existing vote seems to give Historical Society wide latitude in use of building.

Dr. Equi flosses Pack 38

Dr. Michael Equi, a Cohasset dentist, spoke to a group of 24 Cub Scouts from Pack 38 on Tuesday, March 23. He explained how to keep teeth and gums in a healthy condition. He showed the scouts where harmful plaque can be hiding in their teeth by the use of a pink disclosing tablet. (The tablet colored the plaque a darker pink.) Those areas need more concentrated cleaning.

Correct brushing and flossing were emphasized. The scouts asked many questions. Each scout received booklets and a new toothbrush.

Cub Scouts on the Move

The Old Mills District (includes the towns of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman), held their "Hike-a-thon" at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham on Saturday, March 25 at 10 a.m. About 100 Cub Scouts, including some Boy Scouts, met at the Park.

The Cub Scouts walked a total of five kilometers (approx. three miles). The Boy Scouts hiked six miles. The boys obtained sponsors prior to their hike. The money collected will be distributed to the district, the den, and the participant. The Cohasset Cub Scouts from Pack 38 who successfully completed the hike are: Randy Read, Christopher O'Connor, David Farrag and Sean Gallagher. At the end of the hike, the District Executive William Roberts and his helpers distributed refreshments to the boys for a job well done and mission accomplished.

The Pinewood Derby will be held Wednesday, March 31, at 7 p.m. at Deerhill School. Each Cub Scout has designed his own race car.

The Cub Scout bowling will complete the first session on March 24. A new session will begin for eight weeks on March 31 from 3 to 4 p.m. at he Cohasset Community Center. The cost is $10 for the eight weeks including bowling shoe rentals. All scouts are welcome. For registration call the Center at 383-0088 after 3 p.m. to speak to Bill O'Connor.

The Tom Sawyer play will be on April 21 at 2 p.m. at the New England Life Hall Boston. Tickets must be purchased in advance.

Lost: One Bear Cub Scout book. If found please call David Farrag at 383-9519.

Look for the coming April Cub Scout registration soon to be announced. We plan to see all our present scouts and hope to have new members enroll so they too can share our new 1982-1982 Cub Scout year.

Health Clinics available

A Tuberculosis Detection Clinic will be held at the Social Service League office, 16 Highland Avenue. The Mantoux tests will be administered on Wednesday, March 31, 10 a.m. to noon.

No appointment is necessary. The tests will be read on April 2 between the hours of 10 a.m. and noon. Those who are allergic to eggs or egg products will not be tested. If there are any questions call 383-0771.

A Hypertension Screening Clinic will be held on April 3, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Annual Town Meeting. Take a few moments of your time to check your blood pressure. Hypertension literature will also be available.

If you are unable to attend the clinic, the Board of Health office hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday 8 to 9 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m. No appointment is necessary.

Urine and blood testing are also available at the office. All Board of Health Nursing services are conducted at the Social Service League, 16 Highland Avenue. These services are available to Cohasset residents.

Town meeting approves $7.3 million, retains dump, nixes gypsy moth spray

A town budget of $7.3 million won town meeting approval despite the financial confusion created by the lack of firm assessments.

The figure is far beyond the allowable tax levy of $5.6 million but Jean Cotton, chairman of the advisory board, said that the town expects revenue will come in to offset the difference.

Talk of suing the professional appraisor peppered the discussion of the fiscal plight.

In other action the meeting:

—voted to keep open the dump.

—granted six percent raises to most town workers.

—resolved that the town not be subjected to aerial spraying by the chemical Sevin. A special town meeting last year authorized $50,000 for the project.

—put up $6,500 to enlarge the Woodside Cemetery on town-owned land.

—resolved that the United States and the Soviet Union should immediately stop the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and of the aircraft and missiles designed to deliver the weaponry.

—dissolved the town office space needs study committee, the work having been done.

—allowed a zoning change to provide for a one year occupation of a mobile home on a site destroyed by fire.

—allowed a zoning change designed to tighten up the shape of some development lots. The change requires the minimum frontage to be kept from the street to a house. John O'Toole of the planning board said there is nothing in the present bylaw to prevent the lot from dwindling to eight inches at a

Winter's last gasp

Just when lawns were turning green and focus had shifted from snow removal budgets to gypsy moth spraying, mother nature dropped a considerable amount of snow over New England.

Those who were dreaming of a white Christmas, might get to enjoy a white Easter. However, most commuters who battled Tuesday's wind and snowfall probably consider an unseasonable storm as more of a nightmare than a dream.

But for Cohasset school children it was surely a dream come true as they were released early from their classes on Tuesday morning. School dismissals started at 11 a.m.

Town elections Saturday . . . so vote!

John Kornet of 29 Nichols Road jumped into the candidate's ring just Tuesday.

He is seeking the three year position on the board of assessors.

His last minute candidacy began at town meeting as the story of the revaluation program unfolded.

The polls, located at town hall, will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 10, as voters spill out for the annual town election.

Kornet, who is married to School Committee member Diana Kornet, said he was approached at town meeting by several people. He and his family will be standing in front of town hall Saturday handing out stickers to be used on the ballot.

Until Tuesday Assessor Michael Patrolia was unopposed. Patrolia's name will be the only one on the ballot.

Polls close at 6 p.m.

The new candidate said he isn't in the race as someone against Patrolia.

"It is the business of the town to see that this town is run as a business," Kornet said.

"Economically turbulent times place a premium on efficiently, timely management of fiscal affairs. We can no longer afford the luxury of continually ignoring state regulations.

"More importantly the taxpayers deserve prompt and accurate calculation of their tax rate on which the entire budget process is based.

"Voters should have a choice between the status quo or responsive and efficient fiscal management."

Kornet has had 15 years experience in various

B.C. student wins Cohasset Road Race

By Donna Cogliano

Two 25 year-olds won the sixth annual Roadrace-By-The-Sea Sunday.

David Ezersky, of East Sandwich finished first in 31 minutes. The hometown favorite, Sarah Linsley of Nichols Road was the first woman to complete the 6.2 mile course.

Ezersky emerged from a pack of seven runners near the one-mile mark and led the way, uncontested, for the remainder of the race. He finished the first mile in 4:38.

He completed the course in 31:08.5 which was 24.5 seconds faster than the second place finish of J. Kolb of Concord, New Hampshire.

Linsley placed 14th overall, and crossed the finish line four minutes after Ezersky's winning time.

Ezersky, a Boston College senior, who ran the Cohasset race for the first time, said he enjoyed the course and found it interesting. He had never been to Cohasset prior to Sunday and said the town was very attractive.

Temperatures dipped to a low of 34 degrees on Sunday. Many runners jogged through the center of town among snowflakes during their warm-up prior to the race. The Roadrace was founded six years ago by Roy Fitzsimmons. Will Cloney, president of the

Sensible control

Citizens for Sensible Gypsy Moth Control will meet with the Board of Selectmen at their meeting, this Wednesday, at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Members of the group are concerned about the hazards of spraying with Sevin as has been proposed and question its effectiveness. A resolution supporting their recommendation of B.t. instead of Sevin was passed at the town meeting. All residents are invited to attend.

An invitation

Though it may seem quiet on your street, there's an air of celebration on Main Street in Marshfield. That's where the Mariner Newspaper office is, 58 to be precise, near the Fairgrounds on Rte. 3-A, next to Reed's Ark.

The reason is, come next week, Wednesday, April 14 the Marshfield Mariner, the flagship of the company and the starter of the set of hometown weeklies owned by Publisher David Cutler, is celebrating its 10th anniversary.

And we invite you to join us at an Open House on the premises Friday, April 16 from 4 to 7 p.m. We're having the first of other 10th anniversaries. By the time the Cohasset Mariner has published for 10 years, we'll know how to do the 10th for this town up brown.

Commuter boats

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce has presented testimony before the Commonwealth's Transportation Committee supporting the concept of two pieces of legislation filed by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset: an act authorizing the Department of Transportation to purchase commuter boats for use by cities and towns on the South Shore; and an act providing $150,000 to continue the Hingham commuter boat service.

The Chamber, as in the past, continues to support the concept of commuter boat service linking communities and commuters of the South Shore with Boston and Logan Airport.

The Chamber has requested a full hearing on commuter boats with the Joint Transportation Committee, chaired by Rep. Louis Nickinello and Sen. Joseph Walsh, in order to discuss the most feasible means of continuing a service which has proven its value to South Shore commuters.

McKinnon office hours

Senator Allan McKinnon, D-Weymouth, has office hours as listed below.

If these are inconvenient, please call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

Cohasset — Thursday, April 15, 9:30 a.m., Town Hall.

Hingham — Monday, April 26, 7:30 p.m., High School.

Scituate — Tuesday, April 13, 7:30 p.m., Town Hall.

Donate to AFS auction

Got any attic treasures to donate to a worthy cause? Will you or your company contribute a special product or service? The Cohasset AFS Chapter is looking for your help to make its May 1 auction evening a success.

Republican Antoon withdraws

Doug Antoon who was reportedly a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress pulled out of the race this week.

Antoon, who is from South Yarmouth, issued a statement Tuesday morning at press conferences he and Jack Conway, now the only Republican in the race, set up in Plymouth, New Bedford and Hyannis.

Antoon will be campaigning for Conway against U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds.

Common victualler license

A common victualer and Sunday license were renewed by selectmen last week for J.J.'s on Route 3A. The board's vote was unanimous.

Happenny still waiting

Leo Happenny may have waited a year for approval of his plans for Hull Street.

The board of health has decreed he will wait longer.

Happenny owns five lots on Hull Street. Four are buildable. That's what he plans to build — four lots. One of the four will not get Mariner approval until an easement is granted on the old lot on the river.

How's the Easter Bunny gonna look in a red suit?

Sewer changes to increase by 40%

In July sewer service charges will increase by 40 percent. Voters at town meeting on Monday night approved the hike which is the first increase since 1973.

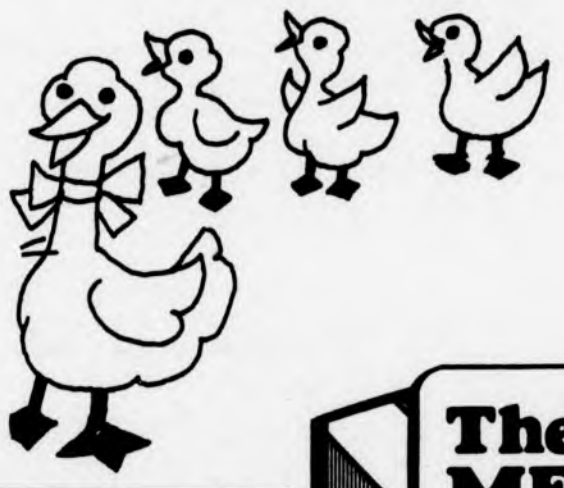
There are 291 sewer connections in town. Since 1973, residential customers have been charged a minimum of $7.50 each quarter.

Commercial and industrial users will pay a minimum quarterly charge of $14 which is $4 above this year's rate.

According to sewer commissioner Jan Dagget, both the residential and commercial rates are based on water consumption and not the actual water bills. Rates for excess volumes of 10,000 gallons of sewage from buildings were also increased by 40 percent. The resulting increase amounts to $1.05 per thousand excess gallons (residential) and $.140 per thousand gallons for commercial and industrial users.

Dagget said the 40 percent hike should bring the billing revenue up to 25 percent of what it costs to operate the sewer plant. In 1973, rates were based on this 25 percent revenue level which would amount to one-fourth of the sewer operations cost.

Spring book fairs coming to Osgood & Deer Hill



The Osgood and Deer Hill Schools will both be celebrating books and reading at a festive Spring Book Fair.

The Osgood Fair will be held in the library at the school on Thursday, April 29, and Friday, April 30. The Deer Hill Fair will be the following week in the Deer Hill Library on Thursday, May 6, and Friday, May 7.

Each class in the schools will be assigned a time slot when they will be attending the Fair. Parents are invited to attend the Fair at any time, and schedules of class visit times will be sent home so that parents can visit the Fair with their children if they wish.

During the week before each Fair, parents will also receive a flyer describing the books that will be sold at the Fair. There will be many childrens' classics and quality paperbacks to choose from. There will also be some hardcover items and books that would make wonderful gifts.

Members of each school's Communication Council will be manning the Fair along with the Library staff. Proceeds will benefit the school libraries and projects of the Communication Councils.

financial areas including portfolio management, computer software development and investment counseling. Currently he is Regional Director and senior consultant with Miedniger Asset Planning Services, a subsidiary of a Kentucky-based employee benefit consulting service.

There are few choices available this year.

In fact in the case of the board of health, no name will be listed on the ballot. Marilyn Sweeney, the incumbent, found herself left off the ballot by mistake. She is running a sticker campaign to return to office.

Last week the Mariner ran the questions and answers compiled by the League of Women Voters for their guide. Sweeney's positions weren't included in the list since her name isn't on the ballot.

For a time there was some talk of another sticker candidate materializing for the one three year post. People named in rumors denied any intention to seek or accept the office.

The selectmen's race has been fought more seriously than is usual for a Cohasset election. There are bumper stickers about, political signs in various front lawns and there has even been some advertising in the paper.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle is ready to face off with James Lagrotteria. There is one three year opening on the selectmen.

Laugelle is campaigning on his record. Lagrotteria is business manager for Glastonbury Abbey. He is also vice chairman of the advisory board. His campaign talks about the selectmen taking more leadership on issues affecting the town.

Another race is for school committee seats. There the game will be more like musical chairs than like a roadrace. There are two positions available with three year terms. There are three candidates.

Two of the candidates are incumbents. Irene Brown, school committee chairman, and Martha Gjesteby, board member, are up for re-election. They face Joseph Nedrow, an executive with General Motors.

Brown is proud of the Cohasset system. She talks about the 10-year accreditation the high school received recently, the successful hockey, wrestling and gymnastics teams, the four National Merit finalists. She's been on the committee for five years.

Gjesteby is concerned about the effect the declining enrollment may have on curriculum. She talks about zero based budgeting instead of level funding. She talks about laying off teachers on merit rather than seniority. She's been on the committee three years.

Nedrow has been involved in school committee related work in other communities. He talks about shifting the focus back to the children of Cohasset as the committee deals with Proposition 2½. He suggests the backing of the community could develop alternatives that would help education. His thrust is creative management in times of a poor economy.

There are two candidates for one opening for five years on the Housing Authority. Kathleen Conte is up for re-election, facing the challenge of Ralph Perroncello, a retired fire fighter.

There are no more races.

Bill Weeks, who was appointed as moderator last summer, is unopposed as he seeks his first two year elected term.

Michael Patrolia, assessor, is unopposed for reelection to a three year term.

Three trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library are on the ballot for reelection. They are David Chittim, Elizabeth Eaton and Nancy Gilmore.

Christine Bassett is unopposed in her bid for a five year term on the planning board. Pat Facey decided against running for reelection.

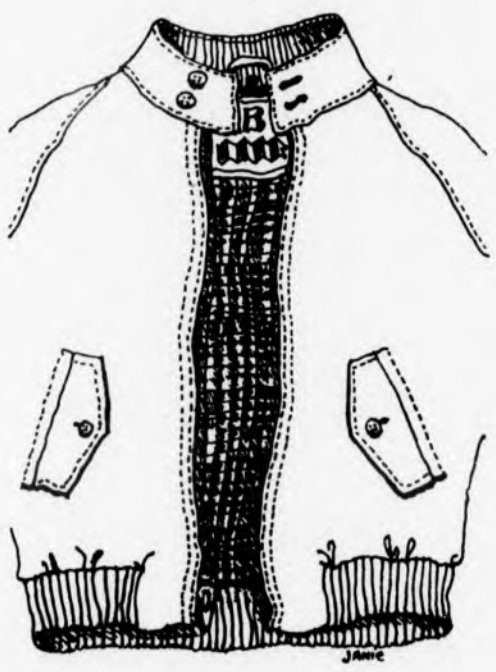
Lot Bates is a candidate for reelection to a three year term on the water commission.

Joseph Gwinn is a candidate for reelection to a three year term on the sewer commission.

Three recreation commission members are up for election. No one is opposing the slate which includes Eugene Price, Nancy Sladen, both incumbents, and Mary Muncey, who is not presently on the board.

Harbormaster hours

Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary wanted the harbormaster's hours explained more fully since townspeople have been questioning the situation.



The harbormaster will be working in the harbor on a daily basis. The hours listed last week are office hours so people who need to can get in touch with Harry Ritter.

Those hours are again:

April 15 to April 30 on Saturdays from 10 a.m. til noon. May 1 to September 15 on Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. till noon. September 15 to November 15 on Saturdays from 10 a.m. till noon.

Greek Easter April 18

Western Christian Church will celebrate Easter, Sunday, April 11. However, some 250 million Orthodox Christians throughout the world will not commemorate the Feast of the Resurrection of Our Lord until Sunday, April 18.

Father William S. Kehayes is a Greek Orthodox Priest. The Executive Director for Development at Hellenic College, he is serving on Sundays as Chaplain of the newly established South Shore Parish, The Greek Orthodox Church of the Panagia — The Blessed Mother of God and Ever Virgin Mary, located on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

This building, also known as the Pope Memorial, serves the Greek Orthodox Faithful of the South Shore.

Asked to explain why all Christians do not celebrate Holy Easter on the same day, Father Kehayes said that next year, Easter will be commemorated Sunday, May 8, a date which will be approximately five weeks after Latin Easter. "It will not be until April 22, 1984, before Our Lord's Resurrection, Holy Easter, is celebrated on the same day for all Christiandom: East and West."

When asked to explain 'Why?' Father Kehayes responded as follows: "The date for Holy Easter was defined by the First Ecumenical Council of Nicaea in the year 325 A.D. The entire Christian Church of the East and West was represented by 318 Bishops. No authority or Church could oppose or change this unanimous decision unless through another Ecumenical Council. The Christian Church, at that time, was ONE.

Certainly it was centuries before the Great Schism between East and West in 1054 A.D. or the Reformation in the West years later. Emperor Constantine sought an Ecumenical Council ro resolve some serious Theological and Liturgical questions which troubled the early Christian Church. The Council of Nicaea in 325 A.D. entertained the question of the Date of Easter to regulate its calculations for the whole of Christianity that it might celebrate Easter together, without confusion, every year. These regulations of the First Ecumenical Council are as follows:

1. "Easter must always be celebrated on a Sunday" (At that time, there were Christians who celebrated Easter on Friday, the day of the "Crucifixion" rather than on Sunday, the day of the Resurrection).

2. "Easter must never be celebrated on the same day as the Hebrew Passover." (According to Holy Scripture, Christ was crucified during the week of the Hebrew Passover, was taken down from the Cross on the Eve of the Sabbath, and arose on the following day after the Sabbath).

3. "Easter should never be celebrated on or before the vernal equinox (Spring) of any year."

Services at the Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset, according to Father Kehayes, will commence Saturday, April 10, with the commemoration of the resurrection of Lazarus from the dead by Jesus Christ. The resurrection took place just prior to Our Lord's Triumphant Entry (Palm Sunday) into Jerusalem. The Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom will be celebrated by Father Kehayes at 10 a.m. He will be assisted by Seminarian Chris Margarites. Palm crosses will be woven for Palm Sunday Services, immediately following Saturday's Liturgy. Orthodox Christians throughout the world will commemorate Palm Sunday, April 11. Orthros, or Matin Services will commence promptly at 9:30 a.m. with the celebration of the Divine Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom commencing at 10:30 a.m. There will be a procession and blessing of the Palms and its distribution to the Faithful.

At 7 p.m. Palm Sunday, Holy Week services will commence with the Icon of the Nymphios Porcessional. The Nymphios Services will be repeated Holy Monday and Holy Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. On Tuesday night, the Service of the Mymphios (Bridegroom) concludes with one of the most moving and dramatic hymns of liturgical poetry. The morning of Holy Wednesday, is offered for the last time, at 9:30 a.m. The Sacrament of Holy Unction is offered to all Orthodox Christians on Holy Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Holy Unction is administered at any time during the year for those who are physically or spiritually ill. It is administered to all Greek Orthodox on Holy Wednesday in anticipation of their preparation for Holy Communion on Holy Thursday and at Easter.

On the morning of Holy Thursday, we commemorate the washing of the feet of the Disciples and the institution of the Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist at the Last Supper. Holy Thursday evening, the 12 Passion Gospels are read. After the reading of the Fifth Gospel, a procession with the Cross takes place within the Church Nave signifying the Crucifixion of Christ.

This is only a brief summary of events which are a part of the celebration of Easter in the Orthodox Christian Church. Some of the services discussed here are among the most ancient in form and content. We welcome all to take part in this most Holy observance at the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, Cohasset.

around town

☐Over 140 area residents from South Shore Hospital are now soliciting local merchants and businesses for donations of merchandise and services to be sold at a large auction on October 2 to benefit the hospital's children's unit.

Auction volunteers from South Shore Hospital have begun contacting merchants and businesses in Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate, Whitman and Weymouth for tax deductible donations to the auction.

Louis Cook, auctioneer, will conduct the auction, for all goods and services collected, at the Old South Union Congregational Church in South Weymouth on Saturday, October 2.

☐France has its Grand Prix, Indiana, its Indianapolis 500 and Cohasset has its Pinewood Derby.

A popular tradition for cub scouts in town, the derby is described by Richard Silvia, the father of one of the participants, as a "real gentlemen's activity where everybody helps out." In December each scout is given his kit and with parental supervision carefully crafts his entry for the big race.

Part of the fun is decorating the racing car and many of the entries the night of the race were indeed works of art — such as number 56 which was silver with a blue star and white and gold number 4.

Although it's critical that each entry be exactly five ounces, last minute adjustments are permitted. Old timers have also learned a few tricks such as using graphite on the wheels rather than oil, since oil causes sticking. It was difficult to tell who was having a better time at derby night and although competition at times was keen, the spirit of cooperation and good fun was the outstanding feature of the event.

Cubmaster, Jeff Forsdick, officiated. Winners were: in age 8 category, first-Michael Cisneros, second-Stephen Almeida and third-Linc Marsac; age 9, first-Richard McLoughlin, second-Sean Gallagher and third-Matthew Corbett; age 10, first-David Zaloga, secondd-Troy Haase and third -Michael Figueiredo.

SINGING WITH STYLE — Rob Tis gives the notes of the senior play all the oomph they need. The play last weekend was considered a success by all. (Derr photo)

☐It was standing room only for the senior class play, "Li'l Abner" and for good reason — it was terrific. Beth Goff is well known about town for the enthusiasm she brings to whatever activity she undertakes and "Li'l Abner" which she produced and directed was definitely no exception. The play is a long, demanding one but the cast under Beth's direction, managed to carry it along at just the right pace.

Abner and Daisy are two characters which could have been easily overdone, but Diarmuid 'O'Connell and Kerry Crehan handled their parts wtih just the right amount of country hillbilly and down to earth wisdom and humor. Stephen D'Onofrio as Marryin Sam handled his part and enormous amount of lines exceptionally well and Suzanne Bird played Mammy just as Al Capp would have wanted.

☐It actually snowed in Boston the day of Cohasset's big Roadrace by the Sea and the weather down here wasn't much better but once the event got underway, nobody seemed to take much notice of it.

Over 600 runners had registered for the event which is becoming a tradition in town, which even has its own "Heartbreak Hill" — at the foot of Forest Avenue. It's impressive to realize that the majority of participants finished the almost seven mile course in less than one hour.

The amount of work and careful planning by members of the Rotary was clearly evident and obviously the main reason for the success of the event. Above all, everyone — whether running or watching, had a good time. Bill Kelley was happy with his time — "I'm a year older but a minute faster," he pointed out. And, Ann Colocousis can't wait to tell her chiropractor. A popular activity after the race was the refreshments and the instant replays.

Murray opposes new casino bill

I am unalterably opposed to Casino Gambling in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

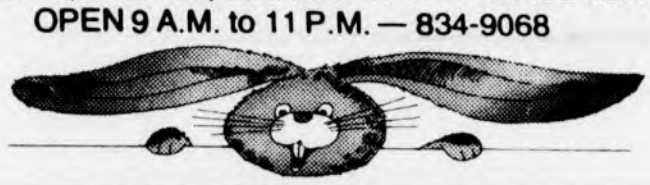
I have avoided the aspects of casino gambling because these obviously are in attendance with such activities and when there are great numbers of people in an area. Needless, to say these are some of my objections to this type of gambling. However, at this time, I will quote from the Fordham Urban Law Journal study, "Gambling can create problems not only for players and their families, but for the surrounding community as well. Pauperization and gambling addiction, loan sharking and robbery, prostitution and suicide are all endemic to areas of wide-open gambling. A correlation has been shown between the availability of gambling and severe personality disorders. In Nevada, for example, the percentage of compulsive gamblers, suicides and alcoholics is highest in the United States. A state, despite its need for additional revenue, must face the moral dilemma: to what extent should the state promote an activity that could cause harm to many of its citizens and communities?"

A source of new revenue for a state or community are simply excuses, lame excuses for casinos in any state. Experience has shown that the promised revenues are always exaggerated and promises of increased prosperity for any state or community do not come to fruition. Let's face it - the only persons who reap any rewards in this business are the casino owners and investors. Again from the Fordham Report, "The revenues promised by proponents represent large amounts of money in absolute terms. However, the amount of money raised by gambling revenue is far less than might be expected. Gambling profits represent on the average of two or three percent of the annual state-level revenue in states where one or more forms of gambling are legal. In addition, the typical legalized gambling game shows a period of slow growth in revenue for the state followed by a rapid decline." And "Political and economic considerations obviously dictate against revoking casino licenses once a casino opens."

The one casino concept sounds good to some people. Let's face the fact that you and I know, and that is, our legislature could not restrain the one casino aspect anywhere in Massachusetts. This is another excuse for the casino owners and investors to gain a foothold here!

Speaking of investors, the rank and file union members probably do not realize the large amount of money unions have invested in this type of business. "The Teamsters Central States Pension Fund has been a great source of investment capital for Nevada casinos. According to figures released by the fund's Director at the close of 1976, a total of $269 million was invested in Nevada casinos out of $1.4 billion in total fund assests." Only the good Lord knows how much if any, has been invested since 1976 in Nevada and Atlantic City as I have been unable to obtain any figures.

One thing I want you to understand is the fact that these bills are not "Home Rule" bills. As legislators you know that a Home Rule petition covers only one municipality. These bills before you include two towns, not one.



I want to present some facts to you. My statements are a result of investigations by my office and myself. As a matter of fact, my feelings as far as casino gambling were innocous. My strong stand against casino gambling is the result of our studies.

This type of business destroys other business. From the Philadelphia Bulletin, "According to Gladys McDonald, merchantile tax supervisor, more than 500 businesses have ceased to operate in Atlantic City since 1979." The argument that there will be a spin off for communities doesn't seem to hold water. The casino-hotel facilities have clothing

No spraying

Let's hope the selectmen were able to hear the resolution on the gypsy moth spraying.

Town meeting said quite clearly and after much debate that it did not want the chemical Sevin used for killing off the gypsy moths.

Now the selectmen do not have to listen to the words of town meeting. There has been more than one instance where a board of selectmen decided to ignore the resolve of the meeting.

But the information detailing the importance of using utmost care in applying Sevin wasn't detailed at great length last December when the special town meeting came up with $50,000 for the spraying.

The state has suggested a biological approach be used. There is a baccilus thuringeniesis which is preferred by state officials to the cheaper and deadlier Sevin.

Selectmen will be meeting with concerned residents at their meeting tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. at town hall. From what Henry Ainslie said last Saturday, the board was listening to the vote. He pointed out that cancelling the contract with the company hired to spray the town would carry a penalty price — he pointed out that there isn't enough money to spray the whole town with the other method.

By tonight more information about costs should be available. Charles Gainor suggested the town follow the example set by Wellesley and only spray the trees along the roads and on town property.

Hingham planned to spray Sevin by air over the community. A citizens group there seems to have turned the situation around.

Scituate doesn't plan to spray anyway — except the trees on town property.

Even if Cohasset sprays the gypsy pests with the chemical, the moths hatching in Scituate and Hingham are sure to blow across the borders of the town.

It seems there's no way to win the war with the squiggly little beasts.

As Gainor explained to town meeting, the chemical also wipes out natural predators of the gypsy moths making it easier for the survivors to multiply.

We oppose gypsy moths and we wish we knew a way to eradicate them. We've been assured that's impossible.

Now we'd like to assure the pets and children of Cohasset won't suffer ill affects because of attempts to destroy the coming plague.

Pleasant quorum

Town Moderator Bill Weeks called the annual town meeting to order Saturday with a slip of the tongue.

"The chair is informed that a quorum is pleasant," Weeks smiled as the words spilled out, adding by way of correction that besides being pleasant a quorum was present.

The question of a quorum has been plaguing town business in recent months. But there was no question that more than the 200 required voters stayed with the business at hand until 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

If not for the need to set up the stage for the Cohasset High School senior class play, the meeting may well have gone on another hour.

Concerned with gypsy moth spray

Letters

To the Editor:

As a resident of the South Shore I am extremely concerned about the issue of aerial spraying of a chemical pesticide on the gypsy moth.

Have people given any real deep thought to the effects of aerial spraying of Carbaryl (Sevin) or Sevin-4 oil?

Have people explored this broad spectrum pesticide and just what it destroys? Read the label of a Sevin bottle at your nearest hardware or garden center and find that both good and bad insects will be destroyed. Note the caution on the label — this is a toxic substance and should not be swallowed, inhaled nor come in contact with skin. For aerial spraying an oily substance is mixed with Carbaryl to make it adhere to whatever it touches. How long will it last? Can it be washed off easily? And if washed off where will that residue go?

What kind of control does aerial spraying provide? All spraying should be carried out under weather conditions providing maximum effectiveness of the spray material, but what does that mean?

What areas are to be sprayed? Public parks, playgrounds, schools, water supplies, water sheds, wetlands, salt marshes, private homes and grounds?

We have heard some warnings about keeping pets inside, removing bees from area to be sprayed and delayed opening of schools on the day of spraying. But, when and if Carbaryl is sprayed, what safeguards are being forwarded to the public and how will the information be adequately relayed to the public so that everyone is prepared to take steps to minimize exposure to this broad spectrum chemical pesticide?

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Environmental Management, Division of Forest and Parks, in a letter dated January 19, 1982 mailed to Mayors and Boards of Selectmen, All Massachusetts Communities, has strongly recommended that Bacillus thuringiensis (B.t.), a bacterial spray, be used as the control material to be considered in spraying. In their opinion the use of B.t. most responsibly addresses both the documented concerns of a need for nuisance control and protection of the public.

Note the word nuisance. There have been reported cases of skin rash and heavy leaf defoliation of trees caused by the gypsy moth but is that reason enough to take a toxic broad spectrum chemical, no matter how low the toxicity, and spray it aerially over our town?

I believe there are too many unknowns in the broad and long term use of toxic chemicals and we should carefully weigh the health of trees against the health and well being of humans.

Demise of the Coast Guard Band

To the Editor:

Coast Guard Lt. Lewis J. Buckley, Director of the 49 person U.S. Coast Guard Band, turned to the audience at Hull High School and accepted for himself and the band the applause of a ten-minute standing ovation.

The crisp military unit had just finished the benefit concert with the exciting cadences of John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

It had been a great evening — Francis Scott Keyes' "Star Spangled Banner," several of Sousa's marches including one of my favorites "Riders for the Flag," all mixed in with refrains like "Dixie Moon" and "Daddy Won't You Please Come Home." This night had been nostalgic and a bit sad in spite of the great music we had heard.

You see, Jack Conway Company and the wonderful people at the Hull Lifesaving Museum had sponsored this visit of the Coast Guard Band as a public service venture, and the evening had a sad note because it was to be the last appearance anywhere of the big Coast Guard Band. "This is the end for us," Lt. Buckley told me after the concert. "The big budget cuts affecting the Coast Guard begin on April 1."

"Our orders are to cut the band down to 21 members — a 57% cutback — and I think it's sad, because this band has been so much to so many people over the years," he added.

I could not help thinking that somewhere along the way some bureaucrat had made a really dumb mistake in ordering the dismemberment.

Had the budget cutters been with us and had they heard the blood pumping refrain of Sousa's "Semper Fidelis March" and if they had heard and felt the reaction of the crowd, I wonder if the penny pinching meanness could have been tempered.

Our great government wastes millions to the right, wastes millions to the left, all with a blustery flourish and with what sometimes seems to be a wanton disregard for the true meaning of money.

But why do Stockman's faceless little bureaucrats have to tear apart the little Coast Guard Band — a band that plays the songs of America so loudly and proudly?

The Coast Guard — Semper Paratus.

Good coverage on the casino issue

To the Editor,

I personally want to thank you for the extensive coverage published in the Cohasset Mariner regarding the casino gambling issue.

I am grateful for your continued support in bringing this information to the Cohasset readers. This campaign could not succeed without your help.

A special "thank you" should also be extended to the many residents of Cohasset who supported the anti-casino movement from the initiation of the petition drive over fourteen months ago - to those who spent Wednesday (March 31, 1982) at the State House when the Government Regulations Committee heard pro and con testimony on the many bills filed this session to legalize casino gambling in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

I am enclosing a copy of my testimony and the article printed in the September 2, 1981 issue of the Cohasset Mariner which was given to each member of the Gvt. Regs. Comm.

In my message to the legislators, I included my strong feelings about how presumptuous Mrf. Fred Benninger is when questioned by a legislator about M.G.M.'s concern for the Hingham and Cohasset residents - and I quote - "We admit it will change the lifestyle. We believe the changes are positive and all for the betterment of their lifestyle."

I hope the citizens in Cohasset realize that the casino issue is alive and on-going -- and will be with us for many months to come.

Peace a local issue

Dear Citizens of Cohasset:

I read in the papers you are having trouble getting people to town meetings. I believe if you try getting a nuclear weapons freeze article on your town warrant it would help greatly. One determined citizen can initiate the procedure. Peace is a local issue along with leash laws and budgets. Our country's nuclear policy is a matter of life or death to each of us. How local can you get?

'Li'l Abner' succeeds

To The Editor,

As representatives of the Cohasset Junior and Senior High Communications Councils, we would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the senior class on their outstanding performance of "Li'l Abner." It was exciting to see the senior class working enthusiastically together to produce a spirit felt by all.

We want to especially thank Mrs. Beth Goff for the untold hours of love, care and directorship that went into producing this spectacular event. In addition to Mrs. Goff, we want to recognize the Fire damages storage shed at Gaffey Yachts

FIRE FIGHTING — Men work to contain damage at Gaffey's Yacht Yard on the Mill River. Yards and yards of hose was used to bring water to the fire, still under investigation. (Derr photo)

Scituate helped with firefighters & water

It took firefighters one hour to contain a multiple alarm fire at Gaffey Yachts on Border Street, Monday morning.

The small quonset type building which is in between the repair and storage building and the main office building, had visible flames on the roof as firemen arrived shortly after the first alarm rang at 10:10 a.m.

The Cohasset fire department responded to a box alarm which was pulled at Border Street and Mill Bridge Road by an unknown passerby. As Cohasset firefighters were responding, the Scituate fire department was also enroute because the caller had said the fire was on Border Street in Scituate.

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said Scituate's early arrival on the scene was a tremendous help. Mutual aid was also provided from the Hingham and Hull fire departments.

A second alarm rang ten minutes after the first one, at 10:20 a.m. In all, about 18 Cohasset firefighters battled the blaze. There were 12 permanent firemen and six call men at the scene.

Two problems arose at the fire. One Cohasset firefighter was treated on the scene for smoke inhalation and returned to work.

Lincoln said, "It took about an hour to bring the fire under control. At one point we were ready to draft water from the harbor due to the low water pressure problem on Border Street." He referred to the problem as a dead end main.

Fortunately, the Scituate department laid a half-mile line of hose from a hydrant which was just over their town-line. The Scituate water brought the water pressure up to the necessary level.

Lincoln said most of the burned structure consisted of corrugated metal while the two end walls were wooden.

It was estimated that more than $15,000 worth of contents were burned in the fire.

According to Lincoln the building was used as a small workshop and for storage of paint and lacquers. For the most part, it was not used for boat storage, although two new sailing boards were recently delivered to the building and were lost in the fire.

The cause of the fire is undetermined and currently under investigation, said Lincoln.

Monday's fire was the first multiple alarm fire in Cohasset this year. It was aiso the first major fire in which Lincoln directed his force since becoming acting fire chief on March 3. Lincoln replaced Charles Piepenbrink, who retired last week.

Also accompanying the chilly winds as firefighters hosed down the cove building was a rainbow which was viewed in the spray mist just above the harbor water next to the burning building.

Cast picked for 'Strange Bedfellows'

By David Wadsworth

Director Denise Ripley has chosen the cast for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's spring production of the three-act comedy, "Strange Bedfellows."

This light-hearted spoof of women's suffrage and politics is set in the 1890's in San Francisco. The three performances will mark the grand finale of the Dramatic Club's 61st season. Play nights will be May 20, 21 and 22 at the Cohasset Town Hall, curtain time is 8 p.m.

The cast of characters for "Strange Bedfellows". includes several new club members, as well as veteran Cohasset performers, and is as follows:

Ling - Carter Hill of Hingham; Senator Cromwell - Joseph Coyle of Scituate; Julia Cromwell - Barbara Elliott of Cohasset; Nellie, the Maid - Ellen Kelley of Weymouth; Addie Hampton - Joan Appel of Cohasset; Lillian Hampton - Jackie Fahey of Cohasset; Mickey Hampton - Mathew Kuhn of Cohasset; Mrs. Gimble - Florence Kelley of Cohasset.

Also, Mrs. Worley - Betty Miessner of Scituate; Gifford Hampton - Bob Parsons of Pembroke; Vincent Pemberton - Gerard McNabb of Cohasset; Matthew Cromwell - Bennett Driscoll of Cohasset; Clarissa Cromwell - Julia Jordan of Cohasset; Mrs. Sparker - Delynn Gilboe of Cohasset; Mayor Tibbet - David Wadsworth of Cohasset.

Lighting effects will be produced by Arthur Paquette of Duxbury, and Alice Daunt of Cohasset will be the prompter. Stage Manager will be Ellen Kelley.

Cast and production crew of "Strange Bedfellows" are already at work preparing to wind up the Dramatic Club's 1981-82 season with a rollicking good time for all. Be sure to plan ahead to witness the goings on at the Cohasset Town Hall when lines are drawn between the sexes, as women seek the right to vote

The 'Li'l Abner' cast says thanks

To The Editor,

We the class of 1982, would like to thank all the people who supported us with our production of Li'l Abner. We extend our sincere gratitude to Beth Goff, JoAnne Fichtner, Scott Ketcham, Helen Ketcham, Jean Birmann, Jeff Dodge, Grace Wilkin, Sally Ann Chatterton, Jo Shooshan, Barbara Conte, Karen Crehan, Clark Young, Janet Ditmar, and all those who helped with make-up, props, backstage, and costumes. From the beginning, these people met many difficulties. Yet, in spite of all these conflicts, we managed to bring the class of 1982 together and produce a very successful show. Over one hundred students were involved and all enjoyed it thoroughly.

Thanks again for your support and encouragement.

Jump ropers raise $4,000 for Heart Fund

The jump rope fundraiser which featured some 270 participants of the Cohasset schools collected $4,000 in pledges for the heart fund.

The three hour jump rope marathon was held at the High School on March 3. A group (team) of sixth graders from the Deer Hill School collected the most money, $342.20.

A team of fifth graders raised $337.70 while a fourth grade group accumulated $319.20 in donations.

A High School team of four participants raised $307.50. Members of the High School winning team were: Theresa Lennon, Lisa Mercurio, Jennifer Thompson and George Schulzinsky.

The four top teams were awarded with sweat suits for each team member.

The other teams winning that earned more than $300 included: Grade 6: Maribeth McNamara, Lisa Harris, Abigail Adams, Anna Hurley, Heather Ripley and Heather St. Onge.

Grade 5: Felicia Bartow, Katy Horn, Vanesa Goode, Ali Redfield, Melissa Northnagle and Leticia Linsley.

Grade 4: Dawn Fitzgerald, Kerry Anglin, Erin Chase, Kate Jackson, Michelle Hartley and Carrie Ripley.

Obituaries

Charles Jason

Charles Leo Jason, 77, of Shalimar and formerly of Cohasset, died last week in Fort Walton Beach.

He was born and had lived most of his life in Cohasset. He was a graduate of Wentworth Institute, Boston. He was a retired Civil Service accountant and was employed at Dillon and Reed, Boston, and the United Fruit Company in Central America. He also was a diplomat, at one time, for the Air Force in Spain.

Husband of the late Mary Lou (Caceres) Jason, he leaves two sons, Charles L. Jason, Jr. of Shalimar and Robert E. Jason Grand Isles, N.Y.; two daughters, Mary Lou Magsby of Fort Bragg, N.C., and Marilyn Towers of Holbrook; a brother, Harry S. Jason of Cohasset; six sisters, Frances Jaccobucci and Ann Wheeler, both of Scituate, Dorothy Tobin of Vermont, Mary Martin of St. Petersburg, Alice Carr of Hingham, and Catherine Jason of Quincy; nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

George Jason

A memorial service was conducted recently in the Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. for George S. Jason of North Port, Fla., and formerly of Cohasset. He died in Florida, where he had lived since he retired 12 years ago.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

He leaves his wife, Bernice (Cates) Jason; a son, Norman S. Jason of Middlefield, Conn.; two brothers, Otis R. Jason of South Dennis and Ralph R.Jason of Clifton Park, N.Y.; and four grandchildren.

around town

☐There are so many reasons for attending town meeting that it's always a puzzle why more people don't. First of all it's a chance to be directly involved in making those decisions that will determine the direction the town will take. It's also a great way to learn about town government and the process which controls it. Finally, it's entertainment — often with a very New England flavor. Like the remark of one well known speaker at town meetings whose views are not always those of the majority. After last Saturday's meetng, he laughingly observed, "I would be the only one that town meeting would offer a resolution in recognition of and no one would vote for."

☐Koren A. Lipsett of Cohasset, has received honors for the fall term at Skidmore College, a coeducational liberal arts institution with approximately 2,100 students. Ms. Lipsett, a freshman, is a daughter of Mrs. Valerie A. Lipsett of 85 Elm St.

C-H-S NEWS — Calendar . . . Elections . . . Booster Club

Calendar

Thursday, April 8, 3:15 p.m., track, Middleboro at Cohasset; 7 p.m., meeting for parents of all incoming seventh grade students, high school cafeteria.

Friday, April 9, Good Friday, no school.

Monday, April 12, 3:15 p.m., baseball at Middleboro; softball, Middleboro, home; tennis at Middleboro; girls tennis, Middleboro, home.

Tuesday, April 13, 3:15 p.m., track, Hull, home.

Wednesday, April 14, 9:30 a.m., Jr./Sr. High Communication Council Meeting, Room 106; 3:15 p.m., baseball, Duxbury, home; softball at Duxbury; boys tennis, Duxbury, home; girls tennis at Duxbury.

To the Parents of Students of the Incoming Seventh Grade

On Friday, March 26, Mr. Narklewicz and Mr. Streeter met with the sixth grade students to start the process of scheduling for 1982-83. They distributed a program of studies and a course selection sheet.

All incoming Grade 7 students must be enrolled in English, mathematics, science, social studies, physical education and health education. Their choices are then limited to a foreign language and/or Living Arts electives.

The program booklet is self-explanatory. However, there certainly could be questions from the parents for the school. For that reason, an information session has been planned for Thursday, April 8 at 7 p.m. in the Junior/Senior High cafeteria. Department heads, administrators and guidance personnel will be present to answer questions and/or to clarify items in the program booklet. This is not a required meeting.

At last week's assembly, the students were instructed to return the pink course selection sheets on or before Wednesday, March 30. Those sheets will be available on the evening of April 8, so that a confirmation of selections or changes may be made if desired.

To Beth Goff and the Class of '82

The typist of the C.H.S. News would like to take this opportunity to say "Congratulations" to all those who worked so hard on the production of "Li'l Abner." Luckily, I bought my tickets ahead of time as Saturday's performance was sold out and many people did not get in or were standing. I might add, the entire audience was standing for the curtain call and the ovation ws well-deserved.

This writer was also one of the fortunate theatergoers who saw the original production in N.Y.C. - not once, but twice. (I guess this will date me). Beth Goff and company have earned a big "pat on the back" for tackling a musical with so many scene changes, difficult music and dance routines and doing it all with such ease and excellence.

The time had come to make the senior class play into a project which follows what the name implies. "Li'l Abner" accomplished this by involving every senior who wanted to participate and at a time of year when the class could devote the energy necessary to do it justice. It was obvious to the audience how much fun the cast was having on stage and this feeling of fellowship is what a class play is all about. Long may this concept continue!

Mrs. William Henry

School Elections Beginning

School elections for the two representatives to the School Committee will be on April 16. Nomination papers may be taken out now. Students from Grades 9-12 are eligible and one boy and one girl will be elected. Nomination papers for Student Council representatives and class officers can be taken out after April vacation.

Seventh Graders Choosing Courses

The Seventh Grade students are in the process of choosing their courses for next year. Parents who have questions should call the guidance department.

Communication Council Meeting

There will be a joint Jr./Sr. High Communication Council meeting Wednesday, April 14 at 9:30 a.m. in Room 106. The new Parent Organization by-laws will be presented and discussed and so will the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Policy.

Booster Club

There will be a meeting of the Booster Club at the home of Rosie Duffy on Wednesday, April 14 at 7:30 p.m.

Ride-A-Bike May 2

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the Eleventh Annual Ride-A-Bike from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, May 2. This is a state-wide effort to raise funds to help the 160,000 retarded citizens through the work of the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens and its local affiliates.

All ages are welcome to participate either by riding, sponsoring a rider, or helping man checkpoints on the day of the ride.

Riders solicit sponsors from within the community who pledge the cyclists a predetermined amount of money per mile. After the ride, the contributions are collected by the participants from their sponsors.

Interested riders may obtain forms from Mr. Plante (high school), Miss Beatson (junior high), Miss Kent (Deer Hill), and Mrs. Tewksbury or Miss Volpe (Osgood School).

The Ride-A-Bike route will be published next week.

Jr. High Council meeting

The Cohasset Junior High School Council will meet next Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. in room 105 at the high school.

The proposed by-laws and reorganization of the council will be discussed at this meeting. All are invited to attend.

Squirt Cs win Hobomock hockey crown

"Chief" Frank McGovern's Squirt C warriors sent a pair of opponents to that "Big Teepee in the Sky" this week and in the process clinched the Hobomock Regular Season Crown.The C's massacred the Brewins 14-2 and scalped Plymouth 5-2 to add yet another "Championship Feather" to their Tribal Headdress. Stephen Boardman notched 7 "Coups" with his tomahawk (2 goals and 5 assists) to lead the "War Party's" raid against the Brewins. Terence Shea, David Orpen, and Damon Sparrow added "Hat Tricks" to the attack while Tony Muzzi (twice) and Sean Noonan also found the range with their arrows. Filling the "Medicine Man's Bag" full of assists were Sparrow (3), Muzzi (2), Dan Cuddahy, Shea, and Eric Fitzpatrick. Noonon, Orpen, Shea, Boardman, and Muzzi all dropped "Buffalo chips" into the nets against Plymouth while Orpen, Sparrow, Boardman, and Noonan provided the set-ups.

Coach Mike 'Powers' Bantam C squad rolled over Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 5-2 to nail down 2nd place at the Hobomock rink. Jay Cronin (2), Mike O'Donnell, Matthew Cox, and Andy McCarthy dented the nets for the victorious Seahawks while Eric Wurzel earned a "Playmaker's Patch" with 3 assists. McCarthy, Chris Baker and Cox also were credited with set-ups for the high-flying C's.

Coach Larry Keating's Pee Wee C's were the lone Seahawk losers this week as they bowed to Duxbury 5-4. Jamie Langmaid, John Niland, Gilbert Rebello, and Michael Leighton were the "puck Poppers" while assists were registered by Peter Buckley and Paul Ahern (2).

Coach Tony Ventolieri's young Mite skaters continued to hold the top spot in the A-2 skating at Hobomock Arena. The Mites blanked Easton 7-0 behind the brilliant cageminding of Matthew Ventolieri and downed Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 5-2 as Gregg Salmaine notched a "Texas Hat". Salmaine also had a "Hat Trick" against Easton while Kevin Townsend had a pair of tallies, and Patrick Henderson and Gary Dunham added single scores. Henderson,Alfie Rogers, Tim Getto, and Paul Frey registered assists in the Easton Contest and Henderson provided the final tally in the W-H-K affair.

Seahawks prepare to finish up season

The Seahawks Youth Hockey Teams saw limited action this week as their season begins to wind down after a highly successful year.

The Bantam B's lost a squeaker to Weymouth by a score of 2-1. Michael Cooney netted the lone Seahawk tally.

The Bantam C's outslugged Pembroke 9-5. Chris Baker was the offensive star as he knocked in a Texas "Hat Trick" and added a pair of assists. Andy McCarthy popped in two markers and Joey Mahoney, David O'Donnell and Matthew Cox closed out the scoring. O'Donnell (4), Mahoney (3), Gregg Sandonato and Rick Sparrow were credited with assists.

The Squirts A's blanked Canton 3-0 behind Goalie Joshua Goulart's brilliant shut-out cageminding. Michael Richardson, Jeffrey White and John Zimmer lit the scoring lamps while Chris Olivieri (2) and Erik Steverman furnished the set-ups.

The Squirt B's were crushed by Weymouth 8-2. Jon Mahoney notched both of the B's scores while assists were doled out to Kevin Quinn, Danny Kessinger and Pat Glennon.

The Squirt C's continued their dominance of the Hobomock League with a convincing 7-2 triumph over Hanover. Damon Sparrow with a "Hat Trick," Sean Noonan with two "Bullets," and Terence Shea and Eric FitzPatrick with single tallions provided the Seahawk scoring. David Orpen (2), Noonan (2), Sparrow and Steve Boardman contributed assists.

Cohasset's cleaning day

Saturday, April 24 is Anti-Litter Day in Cohasset by town meeting dictate.

Charles Piepenbrink, Jane Nash and Merle Brown initiated the idea and will head the town's cleanup drive.

Piepenbrink, who officially retired from the fire chief's job last Wednesday, introduced selectmen to the project idea on that same night. "It's just something that I've been annoyed with...every day there is something in my yard," said Piepenbrink. "I walk almost every morning and I come home with an armful (of trash). This has been going on for a long time and finally it got to the point where we decided something ought to be done about it."

It is hoped that the town-wide cleanup will attract both adults and youngsters as volunteers.

Selectmen said they would encourage town public works employees to volunteer in driving trucks to pick up full trash bags. The board agreed to support the project. Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said, "I think it's a great idea."

Most of the litter seems to build up in isolated areas where there aren't any homes. The trash problem is also heaviest at the beaches and in parking lots, said Piepenbrink.

The fact that most bottles and litter are dumped on roadsides where there are few houses, "indicates that people feel guilty about doing it," said Piepenbrink.

"That seems to be the pattern," he said. "In front of people's property — it's not that bad. But in these areas that are isolated, why that seems to be where the build-up is."

The cleanup effort is scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., but if enough people turned out, Piepenbrink said it might not take that long. Aluminum cans and glass will most likely be separated for recycling purposes.

Piepenbrink, who acted as spokesperson for the three sponsors, outlined a plan for the Anti-Litter Day as follows:

— To divide the town into areas and streets that need the most attention. (A survey is being done to assess these areas.)

— To recruit coordinators for each area or street who will in turn recruit helpers.

— Meeting spots will be arranged by coordinators to pick up trash bags.

— Disposal spots will be decided so that trucks, vans, wagons can pick up trash by 3:30 p.m.

— To seek donations from clubs, individuals, and businesses to buy trash bags.

— To promote publicity for this campaign through the local newspapers, churches, schools, posters, clubs, and at the town meeting.

Decorator's Show House

Three Cohasset decorators will be displaying their ideas in the Decorators' Show House sponsored by the Junior League of Boston.

The house this year is in Wellesley at 900 Washington Street. It will be open from April 25 through May 16.

Forty designers are doing 40 different rooms in the mansion.

Philip Smith will decorate the library.

Benson and Getner Interiors are designing a young girl's sitting room.

Marie Johnston of Johnston Interiors is creating a public bath.

Profits from the project finance the charities of the junior league. The house, when open will be public seven days a week including Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Tickets are $6 before the opening and $7 at the door.

McKinnon hits new casino legislation

[Editor's Note: This is a copy of a statement read by Senator Allan R. McKinnon, D-Weymouth, before the hearing of the Government Regulations Committee last week on the institution of legalized casino gambling in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Good morning. My name is Senator Allan R. McKinnon and I am the state senator representing the Norfolk/Plymouth District, which includes the Town of Hull.

I am opposed to legalized casino gambling in Massachusetts and opposed to the passage of the bills before your committee that would provide for casino gambling in Massachusetts.

Legalized casinos would, I believe, undermine the quality of life — not only in towns such as Hull, the host community, but also throughout the entire South Shore and would, in fact, have negative ramifications for citizens throughout the Commonwealth.

The social and governmental costs resulting from the establishment of legalized casino gambling would far outweigh any benefits that might accrue from its institution.

This has been the conclusion of a thoughtful and extensively researched study on casino gambling, "Gambling in America," an objective report in 1978 by a congressional commmission which concluded, "Compared to the costs of government, to say nothing of the potential social costs, the revenues that could be made by taxing or operating casinos . . . would be trivial."

The litany of social costs and ways in which casino gambling would impair our quality of life is extensive.

Casinos breed an increase in crimes of all sorts, both violent and non-violent. Robberies, muggings, purse snatchings, aggravated assault, prostitution, drug dealingd, rape and murder have all increased in Atlantic City at a rate that has been described by observers in such terms as "devastating," "a tidal wave," and "staggering." In addition to a crime wave, the advent of casino gambling in New Jersey was accompanied by debilitating effect on the community and its citizens, particularly the elderly, who often must live in constant fear.

Casino gambling has been described as "a magnet for organized crime." I believe that its infiltration and eventual control of any Massachusetts gambling casino would be inevitable, however tightly drawn the legislation to establish it is and however stringent the regulation. Casino observers have seen New Jersey laws yield to what has been termed "the irresistable pressure of huge sums of money invested in casinos." Former New Jersey Attorney General John Degnan has been quoted as saying, "Despite the fact that we have a big division of gaming enforcement and a whole group of State Police (overseeing casino gambling) the money and sophistication the casinos can muster is just overwhelming."

The Christian Science Monitor stated in the first in a series of special reports on casinos on March 29, 1982, that "When New Jersey's Casino Control Act was passed in 1976, it was hailed as the 'toughest in the nation.' But a close look at the state's efforts to regulate its gambling industry forces a different conclusion. Important provisions of the law have been ignored and regulations stemming from it have been repealed in the face of intense political pressures to license casinos and keep them operating."

I am concerned that legalized casino gambling would inject a further element for corruption into the Massachusetts political environment.

New York Attorney General Robert Abrams has pointed out that "Influence peddling and official corruption in New Jersey has heightened the public's awareness of the extraordinary power of the casino industry to contaminate the political process and to influence government at all levels."

The Congressional Commission further stated in its report, "Gambling in America," that legalized gambling is a regressive way to collect tax revenues, as the lower income gambler tends to lose a higher proportion of his income than the wealthy one.

In considering casinos as contributors of tax dollars to the public coffers, the Commission found that it is more expensive to collect revenues from casino operations that through other methods of taxation.

Casino gambling has failed in Atlantic City as a mechanism for urban renewal and has, in fact, caused staggering housing crises, cancerous growth of slums, tax and rent increases and the upheaval and dislocation of the poor and elderly. Unemployment is still a serious problem due to seasonal layoffs and the great influx of thousands of job seekers.

Casinos produce substantial and overwhelmling drains on community and regional service facilities. Water supply and quality, sewage, hospital and health facilities, fire protection, parking, traffic and transportation (as yet we are unable to adequately meet our current transportation needs of the South Shore) will all be severely impacted and strained by the enormous burden caused by the influx of people — tourists, visitors and job seekers.

Crime of all sorts, corruption, community disintegration, housing and rental crises, unemployment, strangling traffic congestion, infiltration and influence of organized crime, loss of control by local government over public services and facilities, social ills such as compulsive gambling, prostitution, alcoholism, suicide, drug proliferation — these are the costs of casino gambling. The irreparable damage to the quality of life, not only in Hull and the South Shore, but also throughout the entire Commonwealth are too great. I urge the Committee to reject all the bills before it proposing the legalization of casino gambling in Massachusetts.

More testimony against casino bill

(The following was testimony given last week.)

My name is Maria Plante.I was born in Massachusetts - lived on the North Shore of Boston for more than 20 years - and for over 22 years I have been a resident of Cohasset. My husband (a high school teacher) and I have a small piece of land where we have built our home and are raising our six children.

I have brought with me a map to familiarize the members of this committee with the area that I refer to. The three towns of Hingham - Hull - and Cohasset meet at the points of Route 228 - Rockland Street - and Jerusalem Road. I am not a stranger to the town of Hull. As a member of St. Mary's Parish in Hull for over 22 years, I have taught religious education and served on the parish council. I have many friends in Hull - and care deeply about what is happening in our area. In November 1980, land was purchased by MGM Grand for a proposed casino-hotel complex. Granted - I do not live in the same town in which this land was purchased - nor in the same county - but since this parcel is located only three-tenths of a mile from my driveway - I feel that I have to defend the value of my property and family - as well as the families of those who are here to support me today. Knowing little - or nothing - about casinos I decided to research what casinos would mean to our state, as an "industry" and to our beautiful seashore resort as an entertainment complex.

What I have found is not the "end-of-the-rainbow-pot-of-gold but a serious threat to the quality of life in this area. MGM's land is not "isolated" as the proponents so often mention, but in a residential - heavily populated - family-oriented community on the South Shore. In the town of Cohasset - which is not in Plymouth County, as are Hingham and Hull - there are 345 families within a one mile radius of the first proposed casino site. Casinos would merely provide an atmosphere of social disruption that is self-evident and documented by the testimony presented here today. There is no way to measure the hidden costs of social destructrion.

Nevada is a company state - it belongs to the casinos. Atlantic City is a company city - it belongs to the casinos.

Those of us who treasure the quality of life in Massachusetts do not want to sell out to the "Company Store". The price is too high for us to pay.

Town meeting chugs to a close Monday

The 1982 annual Town Meeting finished with some quorum questions Monday night.

But it ended with passage of a new bargaining contract with the firemen, burglar alarm regulations, a flexible recreation commission revolving fund and a resolution calling for the immediate freeze on nuclear arms buildup.

A little over 200 voters came out to conclude the 45-article town meeting which began Saturday afternoon. But after 10:45 p.m. residents began leaving and by midnight's end, barely 50 people were left.

But no one voiced the question to Town Moderator Bill Weeks and the articles were completed without protest.

NEW FIREFIGHTERS CONTRACT

A collective bargaining agreement between the town and the 21-member Cohasset Firefighters union was reached with the resulting cost of $28,349.

The agreement, ratified by town meeting, calls for a two-year contract to run from July 1 through June 30, 1984. The contract's cost represents an annual increase of 6 percent over the current contract.

A base salary for a firefighters has four steps, $14,921, $15,292, $15,679 and $16,030. Under terms of the new contract, the firefighters will receive $15,518, $15,904, $16,306 and $16,671.

Firefighters will receive a pay increase of 4 percent during the first six months of the contract and an additional 2 percent from Jan. 1, 1983.

The contract calls for a six percent increase paid from July 1, 1983 to the conclusion of the contract in 1984.

A bonus payment will be paid to Emergency Medical Technicians for required education training and they will receive a 5 percent pay bonus, as will firefighters with an Associate Degree in Fire Science.

A new bargaining agreement with the police is still under negotiations.

ALARM REGULATIONS

The town accepted new alarm system regulations proposed by Police Chief John DeBassio. The chief proposed the recommendations of a new system, because of concerns to overloading of telephone lines, danger in responses to actual and false alarms by police officers and nuisances to neighbors.

The regulations call for provisions for automatic dialing devices, direct connections to the department control, curtailment and penalties.

Users will be assessed $25 as a false alarm service fee for each false alarm in excess of three occurring within a calendar year. The town rejected an amendment increasing the number of free false alarms from three to six.

In addition, failure to establish and maintain an emergency list of at least two persons or employees suitable for notification constitutes a $50 fine.

ZONING BY LAW

The meeting opened with a 35-minute debate of a zoning bylaw requiring a special permit for conversion of pre-1955 single family houses to two-family homes.

Residents voted 144 to 117 against the planning board backed recommendation.

John O'Toole of the planning board, said the regulations would allow all abutters to be notified about any change from a one to a two-family residence.

He was criticized by Max Mayer of Elm Street when he said the proposed regulations would prevent "four hippies from moving in."

Mayer replied, "It is very expensive to decide if I'm a hippy or not." ZBA special permit applications were estimated between $300 and $500.

Seven years ago, a survey found that over 400 houses in Cohasset had apartments.

Harry Ritter said, "Every year we make amendments. From what I've seen, they move out and we're left holding the bag. How strict are you going to be? Are we to legislate ourselves out of town?

Diane Sullivan of Jerusalem Rd. said the proposal was valuable because all abutters will know if the conversion is legal. "They should have a right to know what's happening."

A two-thirds approval was needed to approve the article.

RECREATION VOTE

Under the stipulations of the new Recreation Commission revolving fund, salaries can be paid from the account. The entire department does not have to be self supporting.

Commission members stressed the flexibility of the fund. Money can be used for the maintenance and support of recreation services including purchase of equipment. Previously the fund was limited to $5,000.

Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said the special account could set a precedence for other departments. He said all departments generating revenue should receive equal treatment under the fiscal constraints of Proposition 2½.

PEACE PETITION

The town accepted with a majority voice vote to support Doris McNulty's resolution calling for an immediate freeze on testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons.

The resolution has already been approved by other South Shore Communities and is being considered in more than 250 New England Communities.

Selectmen are due to deliver a copy of the resolution Congressional delegates.

Arguments brought against the petition focused on the U.S.'s inferiority in arms capability compared to Russia, and the need for the U.S. to be on an equal footing with the U.S.S.R.

Mrs. McNulty said, "The arms race is not working. A nuclear war is not winnable. Why do we need more before we talk about less?"

CAPITAL BUDGET ITEMS

Money was transferred from the stabilization fund of $112,435 to replace a culvert on Doane Street. Twenty-three homes are located on the street. Harold Litchfield, Highway Surveyor, said the culvert, which carries the water from a new reservoir, has eroded and is dangerous.

The Sewer Commission is also quite concerned about the two tidal gates into Cohasset Harbor. Town meeting appropriated $12,000 for guniting to maintain two stone walls which channel water from James Brook through the tidal gates. The walls were described as poor and in dangerous condition.

The Capital Budget Committee reported, "the two walls that channel the water under the roadway near Kimballs is starting to collapse. If the gunite repairs are made now the walls can be saved and protected from further change. Recommendation: complete this job immediately."

SEVEN-DAY NOTICE

With less than 50 residents attending, town meeting approved a seven-day notice for a special town meeting instead of the 14-day requirement which was described "as burdensome."

Terms of the petition to the Legislature call for selectmen to call a special town meeting upon written request of 200 registered voters and 45 days after receipt of a request.

Selectmen will insert any article in the warrant upon written request by 100 registered voters. The article must be received by selectmen within seven days after the call for the special town meeting.

Dump will stay open . . . with changes

The dump question is settled — the town dump will remain open with improvements in the operation designed to please the state.

The special town meeting within the annual town meeting stepped right into action at 1:30 Saturday afternoon, amenities, prayers and flag ceremonies having opened up the process.

Dr. Michael Bliss, chairman of the board of health, explained that the first article in the warrant of the special (printed after the 45 articles in the regular warrant) meant $175,000 to cap and close the old dump operation at the Cedar Street landfill.

He detailed all five of the dump-related articles before any action was taken.

The first three addressed the continued operation of the dump. They were all recommended by the advisory board and board of health. Two articles were alternatives involving town-wide trash pick-up or a system of transferring trash to the Cohasset Heights landfill. Neither were recommended by town officials. No one spoke in favor of the alternatives.

The $175,000 to cap the dump means a layer of clay will top the existing trash heap to prevent continued contamination of Rattlesnake Run.

"We are in violation of state law," Bliss said.

Bliss explained that back in 1977 the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, DEQE, told the town the capping was necessary. Early in 1980, the Attorney General's office was in the process of getting a court order against the town.

"We are faced with the possibility of fines almost on a daily basis if we don't proceed," Bliss said.

The problem is that rain trickling through the trash becomes polluted then seeps into the water feeding that stream.

The vote on capping the dump was unanimous.

The meeting also voted unanimously to approve a borrowing of $65,000 for the work needed to expand the landfill area.

The vote on capping the dump was explained as something that had to be done whether the operation was to close down or expand.

The second vote for $65,000 was to keep the dump open. Gravel will be used to fill an area to bring it four feet above the groundwater.

Bliss said there are estimates the work will keep the dump open another five years.

"I personally think there are at least 10 years up there," he said.

A separate article asked for $10,000 to purchase three bins to be used to move trash around at the landfill. It also received unanimous support.

Bliss said the problem with using the Barry Bros. operation at Cohasset Heights would be a limitation on hours at the dump and that it appears the cost of operating a town dump versus transferring the trash to the private dump would be about the same over a five year period.

"If it goes 10 years, a town dump is cheaper," Bliss said.

He discounted the third alternative town-wide pickup since only people living on private roads and those with long driveways would have to bring the tax to the public road.

"The reason is that after arduous review of the numbers, it's been confirmed that the cost of operating the dump over the first five years would be at worst the same as it would with an outside contractor," Keane said.

He pointed out there may be some traffic problem created by turning the town dump into a transfer operation.

The capital outlay committee also backed the plan to keep the dump open.

The dump operation will cost the town about $200,000 a year, according to Bliss.

point between the street and the house. He said the clause was in the zoning bylaw back in 1968, but in the process of codifying the bylaw several years ago, the requirement was omitted.

—allowed notice should go out to abutters when a single-family is converted to two-family use.

—put in regulations for burglar alarms.

—appropriated $100,000 for a reserve account.

—postponed any appropriation for Plymouth County Mosquito Control until more is known about the operation. The town used to belong to the now defunct Norfolk County Mosquito Control project.

—gave selectmen the authority to sell the Beechwood and North Cohasset fire stations.

—raised the sewer use rates.

While next year's budget is already appropriated, this year's tax rate has not been set. The town has until June 14 to get the tax bills out.

Cotton told the town meeting that last year the budget was based on a town valuation of $225 million, a figure higher than the state equalized valuation for the town. The amount was set according to the revaluation estimates.

"If the final valuation is below $225 million, we would have to absorb a deficit," Cotton said. She added that officials are confident the figure will be higher than the $225 million.

The same figure — $225 million — was used to calculate the budget just voted on by town meeting.

Last week town and state officials met to discuss the situation. The town's figures for assessing are not acceptable to the state. There is no back-up information.

However just last week John Keane of the advisory board was able to arrange that a Hingham company, Data National, will work out the needed computer data to back up the valuation figures.

Warren Pratt, chairman of the assessors, told the voters there were no specifications for the job, nor any bids. He said the professional appraiser, Thomas Mahony, was hired after seven applicants were interviewed.

"The duties are so vague," Pratt said. He added that Mahony would not continue to work for the board after revaluation is complete.

Brian Wilkin, another assessor, said the board is working with Mahony since he has the information needed to complete the process.

shops, hairdressers, restaurants, lounges, etc., and people who go to this type of complex rarely leave because everything they want or need is right there.

There is always great promise of jobs for people in the areas where casinos are located. Fact - in Atlantic City originally, there were 15,000 casino related jobs! But wait -- only 300 people in the whole of Atlantic County (not the city) obtained jobs. Why? Unemployed from all over the area flock to new casino areas seeking work. Those who are not hired have nowhere else to go; therefore, once arrived they stay, go on the unemployment rolls and welfare. You know that Massachusetts hands out the best rules and regulations for welfare in this country along with unemployment compensation. Add to our present rolls, the cost of maintaining those who come to our state hopeful of obtaining work in the casinos and not finding employment. Another facet of this problem is the fact that some of these people seeking jobs have been uprooted from their families.

Next, Massachusetts has more severe winters than New Jersey. This business in New Jersey is a seasonal one and we would most certainly find this to be true in Massachusetts. A news story in the Atlantic City Press dated 9/12/81 stated, "Layoffs of casino employees this fall and winter could cost anywhere from $13 million to $65 million in unemployment insurance benefits, lost taxes and unemployment insurance contributions, according to a group of casino workers. Kenneth Arthur, head of the Association of Atlantic City Casino Employees said the city's eight casinos will lay off anywhere between 1,000 and 5,000 employees for varying lengths of time this fall and winter. The result would be a drop in personal earnings of $6 million to $31 million, he added."

We have water shortages in the Commonwealth and it is anticipated we will be faced with more severe shortages soon and will continue in the future. The Mayor of Atlantic City has used water as one of the economic problems which has been increased and costly due to the casinos. Services other than water which have increased government costs both state and municipal are repair and maintenance of roads and highways, disposal (services) sewage and other related services. Public safety is another factor of increased taxes. The taxes in Atlantic City are higher now than before casinos and they need a tax increase to keep up with the increased costs of government.

I firmly believe that there is not one casino owner who truly plans to build in the town of Hull! As I said earlier, they want to establish a beach-head in Massachusetts and will go anywhere and everywhere they want once that is accomplished. The owners can well afford to wait out the legislature. We cannot allow that to happen either!

B.C. student wins road race . . .

Boston Athletic Association, was the honorary starter of the race.

The Rotary Club sponsored the race for the first time. In previous years, the Jaycees had coordinated the annual event.

Ezersky said the 2 mile stretch down by the water was extremely cold (and several spectators can attest to that). Runners were heading into the wind.

Ezersky prefers running uphill as compared to downhill. "I'm not a downhill runner and I'd rather run a race completely uphill." said the business management major of B.C.

Linsley, a 1979 Harvard graduate, swept her sixth consecutive first place medal on Sunday. Two years ago, she tied for first with her younger sister Kristin.

Linsley took time out from her law studies at Northwestern University in Chicago, Illinois to run among some 630 registered participants. She said the hills hurt more than usual this year because there were no hills to train on in Chicago.

Linsley's sister Karen, 27, and brother Joel, 17, finished together with 45 minute times. Joel Linsley ran for the team, Mad Dogs, of Cohasset, which finished second in the team category.

The Cohasset group finished with the following places: Chris McNabb, 13th; Paul Scott Johnson, 63rd; and Joel Linsley in the 174th spot.

A Hingham group of teenagers, Ryan's Raiders won the team event with finishes of: John Magill, 18th; Scott Swenk, 25th and Jim McCormack in the 35th spot.

McNabb was the first Cohasset resident to complete the course. He finished in 35:08.5 which was just seconds ahead of Sarah Linsley. McNabb won second place in the men's 18 and under class. Hingham's Joseph Beale captured first in that class with an overall tenth place finish.

More than 137 Cohasset residents completed the race with 44 finishers from Scituate and 33 of Hingham. Participants came from cities and towns throughout the state with a few runners of New Hampshire, New York and Connecticut.

Hundreds of spectators gathered at the common for the finish and throughout the course. It seemed as though the youngest and eldest of runners received the most applause from the crowds.

At the finish line, some comments from runners consisted of: I'm happy as hell to finally beat my brother," said a Cohasset man; a Hull man said everytime he started running up a hill, he wished he had trained harder. Other runners complained of wearing too much or too little clothing for the race.

For most runners, it was their first race of 1982 and they were content with having finished the course.

One 23-year old woman said she had never run Forest Avenue before, "It was a killer."

Cohasset's Village Sports donated a ten speed bicycle which was won by Ellen Milligan of South Boston. All runners were eligible to win so long as they were in attendance at the awards ceremony at Town Hall. Milligan was the first number chosen.

Cohasset's Rod Rumble of Nichols Road won the men's masters class with a 32nd place finish. George Delaney of Scituate and Dan Facey ofCambridge were second and third respectively.

Rae Hynes of Scituate and Maureen McDonnell, both of Scituate, along with Mary Cowan of Cohasset, finished atop the women's masters class.

In the men'a 18 and under class, Joseph Beale was first, with McNabb less than a minute behind. Scott Schwenk of Hingham was third.

For the women's 18 and under category: Kerri D'Arrigo of Scituate placed first with Cohasset's Mary O'Brien in second and Scituate's Amy Goodwin in third.

Dillon Painting Critique

Enrollments must be made in advance for a Painting Critique morning with artist Margaret Dillon to be held Saturday, April 10, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Artists who are working on their own or anyone painting on a beginning, intermediate or advance level who would like supportive feedback on either finished work or work-in-progress will find this a helpful morning. Each person may bring no more than five works for criticism.

Ms. Dillon is a well-known artist and instructor of summer workshops at the Center. She recently exhibited in a one-woman exhibit at the Helen Shlein Gallery in Boston and just received the Francis Vandeveer Kughler award at the Salmagundi Club National Annual in New York. She has exhibited in New York with the National Society of Artists in Casein and Acrylics, in Boston at Copley Society, Boston City Hall and Prudential Center. She received her BA in painting from Pomona College, California and studied at the Art Students League, Art Institute Boston and the Circolo di Studenti in Rome.

Parents Anonymous

The Coastline Council for Children is happy to announce its organization of a Parents Anonymous Chapter meeting weekly and serving the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

The self-help group starts Tuesday, April 27, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Child care and transportation are provided. Ellen Feingold, M.S.W., will serve as sponsor.

Parents Anonymous is a self-help group devoted to breaking the destructive actions of abusive parents. Members of PA attend weekly meetings where they discuss in a supportive, non-judgmental atmosphere the pressures and problems they are attempting to cope with on a day-to-day basis.

There are no dues or fees and members may elect to remain anonymous, being known on a first-name basis only. Shared information among members is held in strict confidence.

PA meetings are led by a chairperson, a parent who has successfully dealt with his or her own abuse problems. Each group also has a sponsor, a person with professional training and skills to answer technical questions, as well as to provide emotional support to the chairperson.

Further information about the new forming Parents Anonymous Chapter is available by calling Parents Anonymous at 1-800-882-1250.

Community Center classes

Registrations are currently being accepted at the Cohasset Community Center for Spring and Summer Classes.

Classes for youth include Bowling, Ballet, Jazz for teens and adults, Tap for children, teens and adults, Gymnastics, Karate, Soccer, Children's Crafts, Creative Drama, Modeling and Fashion and a Nature Program.

Adult classes are Aerobics, Exercise for Total Fitness, Exercise-Beginners Fitness, Western Dance, Yoga, Sunday afternoon Couples Softball, Basic Bookkeeping, Basic Typing, Basketweaving, Calligraphy, Cooking with Food Processors, Creative Needlepoint, Contract Bridge, Creative Writing, French Literature, Introduction to Investments, Introduction to Forged Silver Jewelry, Introduction to Small Boatbuilding, Italian, Nature Studies, Poetry, Quilting, Weaving, Whittling.

Workshops include an Introduction to Archeology, Basketweaving, Beauty Workshop, Childcare, Cooking with a Food Processor, CPR, Knitting, a Puppet Workshop, a Tax Seminar and Quilting.

On Wednesday, April 28, the center will sponsor its popular trip to the Decorators Showcases house which, this year, will be Elm Bank in Wellesley. The cost of the trip is $10 which includes transportation and entrance fee.

All courses begin next week and must be registered. Membership in the center is required and is open to all with an additional charge for non-residents. For further information, call 383-0088 weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

'Camelot' production

Hingham Civic Music Theatre's production of "Camelot" has been cast and is in rehearsal. Performance dates will be April 23, 24, 30 and May 1 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, April 25 at 2 p.m.

The large cast hails from Hingham and many of the surrounding communities. The part of King Arthur will be performed by Richard Jensen. Sally Saplin will be Guenevere and Zach Michaels will be Lancelot. The other major parts were cast as follows: Pellinore, Charlie Thomas; Mordred, William Gardiner; Sir Lionel, Jerry Brandenberg; Sir Dinidan, Ron Herzberg; Sir Sagrimore, Kevin Keneally; Merlyn, Norman Shaw; and the part of Nimue will be sung by Sylvia Hawe and danced by Claire Berman.

"Camelot's" directors are well known in the area for their varied talents and show credits. Bob Champagne is the stage director, Joan Kenney is the choreographer and Salvatore Bartolotti is musical director.

Tickets are available at the Hingham Library and Book Store as well as from cast members. Ticket prices are $5 for evening performances and $3 for the Sunday matinee. For ticket information call: Sandra Moore, 749-6419 or Ellen Bartolotti, 749-7894.

Crime prevention

This is Dick Fairbairn, crime prevention officer for the Cohasset Police Dept. You can help prevent burglaries by locking all doors and windows. In over 50% of home burglaries, the burglar entered the home through an unlocked door or window. Connect one or more lamps to an automatic timer, to turn lights on and off. Keep shades and drapes in a normal position. Make the house look like someone is home, even when you are away. For further information please call or visit me at the Cohasset Police Dept.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. IV, no. 28 | wednesday, april 14, 1982 | 30 cents

A triumph for Laugelle, Nedrow & Gjesteby

The mood at the Legion Saturday night was triumph, victory and heartfelt relief.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, dressed in an outlandishly plain suit, gave a party for his family and friends that was the social event of the month.

It's always more fun to go to a winner's party. Rocky had been joking about his future all week. There was last Wednesday at the selectmen's meeting when he moaned that Henry Ainslie should have let him be chairman just for the night.

"It may be my last night," he said straight-faced.

At the polls, Rocky in straw hat and the inevitable cigar, had been watching the vote with some gloom. He knew the numbers would be relatively close.

"Apathy was the problem," his wife, Dotty, said at the celebration. "There was a lot of people who promised to vote..."

Apparently many of the firm Laugelle votes had been away for the weekend.

Rocky had worked hard through the campaign. His signs went up twice before the election. (The first time they had been taken down by unauthorized people.)

There were bumper stickers, ads and quite a bit of time and energy sunk into the campaign.

Rocky's win with 1,164 votes to 891 for Jim Lagrotteria was something insiders had been predicting. The word, ahead of time, was the win would be a squeaker.

Attempts to get several prominent local political observers to guess the winners ahead of time for the Mariner failed.

At the party, high above the harbor, you could have found most of the winners.

Marilyn Sweeney, the Board of Health incumbent, who ran for reelection with a sticker campaign was there, talking with the crowd, looking fine despite her long day at the polls handing out her gummed labels.

Martha Gjesteby, the School Committee member who made it back on the board for another three years, arrived after her own victory party had been put to sleep.

Martha wore a hot pink velour pants outfit and golden slippers, hardly the sort of attire she sports at school committee.

She and Rocky looked like they should lead off a Cinderella waltz, seeing as how they were the only two fashion plates in the room.

Martha said something about her costume being appropriate for the win. Rocky said his suit had only been worn once before and that was three years ago. He had had to have the suit tailored just for the occasion.

"I'm happy that I won,' he said when words of

Petition growing to ban Sevin spray

There's a petition with 158 signatures opposing the use of Sevin for aerial spraying of the town.

The group hopes some interested lawyer will come forth to handle a suit against the town aimed at stopping the planned spraying.

They are talking about hiring a lawyer if a volunteer can't be found.

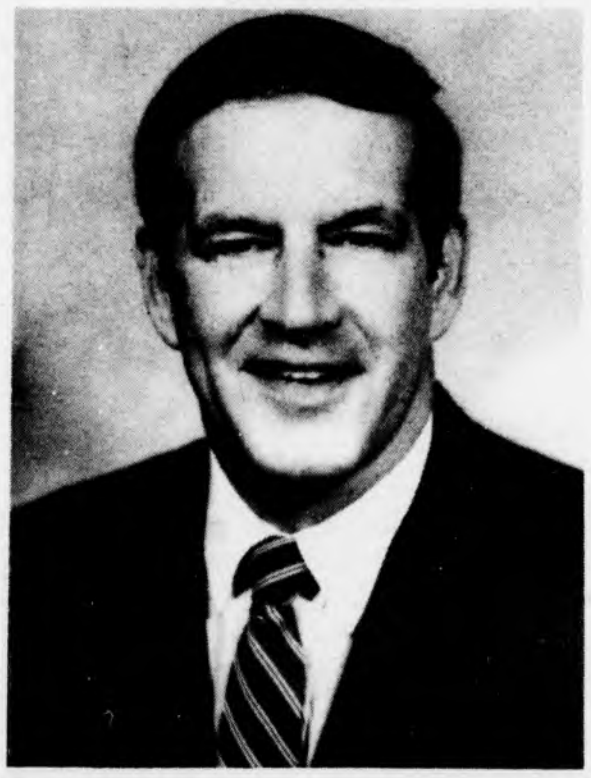
About a dozen residents went to the selectmen's meeting last week to ask the board to halt the gypsy moth spraying.

The board did decide to ask town counsel whether the residents received sufficient notice in the December town meeting warrant on the fact that there would be aerial spraying.

In December the special town meeting appropriated $50,000 to kill gypsy moths.

Anyone interested in working with "The Citizens For Sensible Gypsy Moth Control" can call Martha Hurtig at 383-0530 or Billie Berrents at 383-9535.

Tree and park superintendent Peter Laugelle said this week there are applications at town hall for people who do not want their property sprayed.



Selectman Mary Jane McArthur pointed out that the contract, already signed with Ag-Air of Halifax, does not call for spraying the entire town. There is a price per acre written into the contract.

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie said the company could hardly be expected to come to spray a few acres.

McArthur said they could do half the town instead of the whole.

The Trustees of Reservations have already requested their property be exempted from the spraying. Laugelle told town meeting the trustees property would not be sprayed when the money was

Cohasset's Laura Young dances

Rudolf Nureyev's prima ballerina

By Patricia Desmond

When Laura Young moves inside her ballet slippers she looks six feet tall.

The word graceful doesn't begin to describe her delicacy, majesty, presence, technique and wonder. Watching her perform is like eating a piece of homemade fudge or drinking champagne.

It's heady and rich. An experience that deserves to be savored quietly.

When I walked into the home of the Boston Ballet on Clarendon Street, I wondered how I would recognize Laura. I'd been told she would be dancing until half past noon — that if I could arrive ahead of my scheduled interview, I might watch her perform.

Beyond the dim lit lobby, there were two picture windows looking into practice studios.

The sound of a piano playing a tune I couldn't recognize, but knew I should know, could be heard over the voices of the young dancers in the lobby.

A huge sign by the door stated that absolutely no one would be allowed into a class without handing over an admittance ticket.

Beyond one picture window a group of thin and lithe ballerinas were going through a series of steps — arabesque, en point. Most of the young women wore the traditional rehearsal uniform of a ballet dancer, a simple black leotard.

But at the front of the group, a woman in a lilac leotard and matching tights moved like a lily blown by the summer breeze.

Of course that lily in the wind was Laura Young. The dance mistress, sitting at the front of the studio, motioning her directions, smiled wildly as she watched Laura do things with her feet the other dancers can only dream of.

"That's it," the dance mistress said again and again as Laura whirled on one toe in ultimate precision.

Laura has been a principal with the Ballet Company since finishing her course of study at Cohasset High School.

The piano stopped exactly when the press office said it would. Laura slipped silk gathered pants over her tights and came out into the lobby.

Cohasset's week ...

No zoning changes

Town Meeting did not adopt a zoning change giving abuttors the right to notice when a one-family house, built before 1955, is converted to two-family.

The vote was 144, no to 117, yes. It would have required a two-thirds majority since zoning was at issue.

An invitation

Though it may seem quiet on your street, there's an air of celebration on Main Street in Marshfield. That's where the Mariner Newspaper office is, 58 to be precise, near the Fairgrounds on Rte. 3-A, next to Reed's Ark.

The reason is, come next week, Wednesday, April 14 the Marshfield Mariner, the flagship of the company and the starter of the set of hometown weeklies owned by Publisher David Cutler, is celebrating its 10th anniversary.

And we invite you to join us at an Open House on the premises Friday, April 16 from 4 to 7 p.m. We're having the first of other 10th anniversaries. By the time the Cohasset Mariner has published for 10 years, we'll know how to do the 10th for this town up brown.

King plan takes local aid

Cohasset would lose local aid under the current plan of Gov. Edward King.

It seems that since the town might be entitled to increase its tax levy by $141,988, the formula would dictate a loss in state aid amounting to $49,943.

Sierra Club reception

The Sierra Club will hold a wine and cheese reception to thank U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds for his outstanding leadership in protecting the environment and particularly for his concern about the effects of off-shore oil drilling on Georges Bank.

The reception will be held on Saturday, April 24, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at the Cape Cod Conservatory in West Barnstable.

Kornet new chairman

Diana Kornet is the new chairman of the School Committee. She replaces Irene Brown, who lost her seat on the Board in Saturday's election.

Kornet was voted unanimously, 4-0, by School Committee members on Monday to serve as chairman. Martha Gjesteby abstained from the vote. The Board decided to present Brown with an engraved gavel at a future meeting.

Both school board members John Langmaid III and Richard Conley were re-elected as vice-chairman and secretary respectively.

Gjesteby nominated the newly elected Joseph Nedrow to serve as chairman. But Nedrow declined the nomination due to his inexperience on the Board.

Stouffer may run

Caroline Stouffer is thinking about running against Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

But she has yet to make a commitment to the campaign. Meanwhile, the Cohasset Republican has been working toward re-election.

There isn't much time left for the former representative from Hingham to make up her mind. The deadline for signatures is April 17.

B & E at Osgood

A break and entry at the Osgood School this weekend sparked an executive session of the school committee on Monday night for discussion of system-wide security.

Police learned of the break at 1:45 a.m. on Sunday, and presume it occurred sometime Saturday night.

Two windows were broken at the Osgood School and some milk cartons were tossed around in the cafeteria. Police report that some juice was taken. Two fire extinguishers were recovered on and near the school grounds.

Senior shuttle schedule

Reservations for trips to the Malls may be made one week prior to the trip by calling the office telephone: 383-0821 (8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.)

BRAINTREE MALL 9:30 a.m. - Wednesday, April 21.

BRAINTREE MALL 9:30 a.m. - Monday, May 3.

HANOVER MALL 9:30 a.m. - Wednesday, May 5.

There is no shuttle bus locally on Wednesday afternoon, or on any afternoon that the bus leaves for the malls.

Armed robbery at Kimball's

The Easter weekend brought a gunman to town for the town's first armed robbery of the year.

The robbery happened at Kimballs By The Sea early Saturday morning. Police responded to a call at 12:35 a.m.

According to police, deskman David Pickwick, 41, heard the front door open and went to investigate. Pickwick was met by a man with a long barrelled gun.

Police said the masked robber ordered Pickwick to open the cash drawer and then to lie down on the floor. The man left through the front door with an unknown amount of money.

The suspect was described as about 5'9, 160 pounds, brown hair and 18 or 19 years old.

Selectmen want 2 firefighters

Selectmen want to hire at least two firefighters from the civil service list. None of the 16 on the list live in town.

The Board voted unanimously last week to make a requirement that the men appointed move within a 12-mile radius of town after their probationary period.

The Board plans to interview the interested candidates using questions supplied by Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln.

The appointments are expected by April 21. Candidates on the list live in Randolph, Weymouth and various sections of Boston.

School action tabled on teacher cuts

The school committee postponed their annual re-election of tenure and non-tenure teachers for next September. The Board voted to table the matter and to act on it no later than May 17.

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell said the Board's action would cause anxiety among the teachers. He spoke of preserving the good morale among teachers and their trust in the system.

Crowell said, the teacher cuts must be made with dignity, within the statutes and with timeliness.

A member of the audience at Monday's school committee meeting asked — when will the Board address the $84,000 reduction which was mandated by town meeting.

Crowell said tackling the issue before June would be premature.

"I do not feel that we will be making further staff cuts between now and then," said Crowell. It was Crowell's personal opinion that further reductions should be delayed until the recertification attempt is clarified by the town-side.

School board chairman, Diana Kornet, concurred with Crowell, saying it would be a wasted effort. "It's a waste of time for the school committee to spend anytime working on this...until there are some answers," she said.

voted.

After the meeting the board's secretary, Arthur Clark, said he had been told by town counsel the residents had proper notice on the issue of spraying.

Some experts believe Sevin, which is a chemical with some side effects, should not be used for aerial spraying against the gypsy moths. The State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering is recommending the use of a virus that attacks only caterpillars including the gypsy moths.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he's heard both sides and doesn't know which is right.

"What can you do when there are experts on both sides," he said.

Ainslie said since the publicity the selectmen's office has been getting calls from residents who want their property sprayed.

"There are two sides to this," Ainslie said. "There's alot of people who want it done."

Saudi princess floats in & out of Cohasset

A Saudi Arabian princess floated into town with an escort that kept the curious at bay.

The princess was operated on at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary several weeks ago, according to hospital officials.

Her name and illness was kept secret by officials, on the request of the Saudis, who for whatever reason don't seem inclined to part with any information on princesses.

Sgt. John Rhodes, who was called to escort the caravan to the home of Dr. MacKenzie Freeman at Whitehead, said he still doesn't know what the princess looked like.

She was wearing a veil.

Saudi Arabian security workers and private security workers accompanied the princess. Boston police as well as the lone Cohasset police guard traveled with the group.

Sources say Dr. Freeman had operated on the princess twice. The first operation was three years ago.

There were wild rumors circulating Saturday as the limousine sped out of town. One rumor said the princess wore more than $1 million in jewels as she went sightseeing along Jerusalem Road on the way to the doctor's estate.

Another rumor said there were FBI officials and security workers with automatic weapons guarding the royal personage. Sgt. Rhodes said he didn't see any jewelry when the Mariner found him on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift.

The princess involved in the trip is said to be the sister of King Khalid and the crown prince Fahd.

After her 20 minute stay in Cohasset by the sea, the princess left for Logan Airport to return to the Middle East.

Crowell predicts school will end June 24

If the school calendar year were tightened to include fewer days, schools would close earlier in June. This year, School Superintendent Eugene Crowell predicts a closing Thursday, June 24 at noon for Cohasset schools.

After Crowell presented the School Committee with his recommended school calendar proposal, board members John Langmaid III and Martha Gjesteby asked if decreasing vacation time could be considered.

The school calendar year is scheduled to be a topic of discussion at tonight's (Wednesday) meeting of the Communications Council.

Crowell's tentative proposal for 1982-83 includes a Tuesday, September 7 start, and a June 15 finish for school children. Teachers would report to school on Thursday, September 2 and 3. The official school closing would be June 23 which provides for five snow days.

Crowell said he would poll school superintendents at their next Lighthouse District meeting to see if anyone is in favor of an early closing with less vacation time. Crowell said 18 different calendar proposals were considered by area superintendents last year. All the proposals were disregarded and Crowell said he doesn't know of a school system that adopted a schedule with less vacation time.

Langmaid said, "Nobody wants to make the first move," toward eliminating vacation days. He said superintendents are under pressure, politically for budgets and that they probably would not favor a calendar change.

Discussion focused on eliminating the traditional February or April vacations. One woman in the audience was opposed to cancelling the April vacation because it is a good time for juniors and seniors to visit colleges.

Studies show that elimination of February vacation would only increase fuel consumption on a state-wide basis. Crowell said, with children at home the thermometers would be pushed up, lights would be turned on and more electricity consumed, and gasoline usage would increase as teenagers borrow the family car. Crowell said the school needs to be heated in February regardless of whether school is in session.

Crowell said there are educational reasons for the breaks - youngsters get tired when vacations are delayed. Vacations are scheduled to eliminate the strain of school studies.

February vacation can also serve as a week to recover from winter's flu season. Crowell said the high rate of recent absenteeism is currently winding down.

School board member Richard Conley was concerned that elimination of April vacation would be tough for the younger school children to handle. He suggested two long weekend vacations in April, which would amount to a savings of three or four days at the end of the school year.

☐Bob N. Maki of Cohasset has recently been appointed Chief of General Engineering at the U.S. Army Corps of Engineer's New England Division Office in Walthm. The General Engineering Section comprises five separate engineering units; Structural, Mechanical and Electrical Design, as well as Construction Specifications and Estimates.

Bob is a graduate of Northeastern University, a registered professional engineer, Chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Commission, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Toastmasters International and a part-time real estate salesman with the Jack Conway Company.

He resides on Doane Street in Beechwood with his wife Clare, son, Eric, and daughter, Kristin.

☐Holly Chase, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Chase of King St., has just been named to Phi Beta Kappa at Holy Cross College in Worcester.

Holly will graduate in May with a major in sociology and has been on the Dean's List for all four years. She plans to attend the School of Communications at Syracuse University for her Masters in Telecommunication. Holly is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Somehow I managed to miss the fact that Margie's Seafood reopened for the season. Everyone's traditional favorites will once again be available, including chowder base, stuffed clams and lazyman's lobster, which, according to Margie, is quite popular. Also, Margie says, the haddock and cod are starting to run so that should mean a greater availability of those delicious fish.

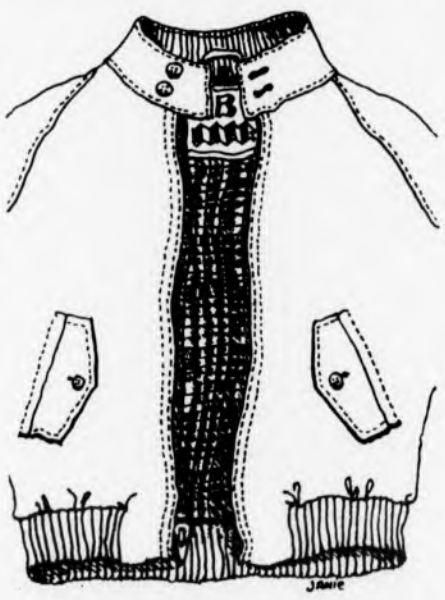
☐The weather was a major topic of conversation this past week, for obvious reasons. Kindergartener Jason Zaloga of Pond St. said he was not happy with it — "Snow just makes you catch cold." Nevertheless, his sister Kerry, he said, was still planning to wear her new pink Easter dress.

One unhappy discovery that many people made this Easter was the unbelievable increase in the price of candy. Several mothers said that they were finding it less expensive to substitute small gift items in the traditional Easter basket.

☐Did you know that Peg Ramsey, secretary to the Board of Selectmen, has a very unique car — it whistles — but only when she wants it to.

☐It was great to see such a turnout for Election Day and many people wondered why. There really didn't seem to be any really hot issues and yet over 2,000 residents took the time, Saturday, to go to the polls to vote for the candidate of their choice.

With this turnout and the noticeable increase in participation at our recent town meeting, it's been suggested that perhaps people are just becoming more interested in taking a part in the government of their town. That certainly goes without saying for all those who made the commitment to stand for election.



Whether they won or lost, our community is certainly the richer for having residents with the interest and the ability to stand up for what they believe in. We thank you.

☐From dolphins to witches, plant life to icebergs, information on all of these and a wide variety of other subjects will be available at the Deer Hill School Science Fair, this Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. The sixth grade classes have spent the past months compiling their information and each student has set up a display in individual booths.

The fair is well worth attending — it's an invaluable learning experience but it's also fun.

wisdom were demanded by the Mariner.

"I had a terrific opponent, it was a good race, a good clean race."

He said his opponent had been a gentleman all the way. "I hope he stays on the advisory board. He does well there."

"The children are happy, the grandchildren are happy. I'd like to thank my wife, the children, everyone that helped."

"I'll continue to do the best I can."

There had been some talk, quietly during the campaign, about members of the Laugelle family who work for town government. The discussion never reached the press release stage.

But the fact is the Laugelle's who work for the town all had their jobs before Rocky went on the board three years ago.

All the candidates found the day at the polls to be chilly. While sunshine made the campaigning less bitter than it might have been, the wind was raw and piercing.

The entire Kornet family worked giving out stickers as John Kornet attempted a write-in campaign to unseat Assessor Michael Patrolia. Kornet earned 537 votes, not enough.

Diana Kornet, school committee member, said they hadn't expected a win.

"But it's good groundwork for next year," she commented.

The new school committee member, Joseph Nedrow, acknowledged the help of the woman his win defeated after the election.

Nedrow sent a Mariner a letter (which appears on page 8) thanking both Mary O'Brien and Irene Brown for help.

The high number of ballot votes in the school committee race is said to be part of the reason the former chairman is out of office.

The race was best two out of three.

The closest thing to an incident at the polls happened when Arndt Gjesteby, husband of the school committee woman, complained to officials that Mrs. O'Brien was campaigning inside the polling place.

Assistant Town Clerk Frances Marks said there had been a complaint but no one was kicked out of the polls.

"There was a question about whether she was campaigning and so just to be sure, she was asked to leave the lobby. She wasn't ordered out. She left herself."

Editorials

Congratulations

Some nice people won and some nice people lost in the annual town election held last Saturday.

In some ways they are all winners. Certainly there's no one in office today who isn't concerned about the state of the town.

From the turn-out of voters, something between 40 and 50 percent of the town's total of registered people, it is clear there is interest in the community.

From the reseating of incumbents, it seems likely that there is dissatisfaction with the way things have been going in the school system — and little dissatisfaction elsewhere.

Irene Brown went to the polls on election day as chairman of the school committee. By the time the parties began, she was out of office, replaced by Joseph Nedrow.

We think Mrs. Brown deserves the town's thanks for the five years she spent working for the betterment of the school system.

It happens that two years in a row the voters have chosen to replace the school committee with a newcomer. If that is a trend, perhaps the new chairman, Diana Kornet, will be able to analyze what the voters are trying to say and make some changes before her reelection campaign gets underway next year.

Mrs. Kornet is to be commended for being brave enough to accept that gavel and the crown of thorns that has been its accompaniment.

We wish the will of the voters were more clear. What is it the successive ousters mean? We'd be more than pleased to run commentaries or letters to the editor from people who think they have a clue.

Is it that there is a general feeling the school system could or should be tougher? Is it that there is a general feeling that the school system could be run with more economy? Is it that there is a general feeling of discontent with no specific disease?

Certainly the members of the school committee should ponder the results of the election carefully.

From the results of the election, it also seemed that townspeople are pretty much in favor of government as it is.

Selectman Rocky Laugelle will be returning to town hall for his second three year stretch. The former state senator Bill Weeks managed to outpoll everyone else on the electronic ballot, pulling in 1,734.

Of course Weeks was unopposed. The second most popular vote getter was Lot Bates with 1,597. Of course he was also unopposed.

We want to wish all the winners good luck. We reserve our condolences for the families of the winners who thought campaigning was unfair to their lives.

Anti-litter

Cohasset is literally a mess.

Saturday, April 24, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., has been declared anti-litter day.

Volunteers are needed to help groups and coordinators pick up litter on the streets and in the areas where there is the most traffic.

Trash bags will be provided to groups and coordinators participating.

If you wish to volunteer, or for more information, call the Cohasset Community Center 383-0088 or Jane Nash 383-9165.

Improve the sewer plant . . .

Letters

To the Editor:

Now that Cohasset has temporarily settled one waste problem, the disposition of the dump, it is time to turn our energies to our other waste problem, our sewer system.

However, the town's problem here is not the processing of sewage, but rather its incredibly extravagant proposed solution. For example, according to Cohasset Health Department figures a total of "seven" homes in the combined area of the hillside and veterans sections of town had some sort of mechanical septic problem in a three year period from 1976 to 1979! This is the same area that we have been beseeched to save from pestilence and probable doom.

Our proposed plan to correct perceived deficiencies in our present system is a three phase megabuck construction nightmare. The first phase alone (assuming planned Federal and State participation percentages hold up) is projected to cost the town $4,000,000 1980 dollars! This would cost the town $550,000/year just to service the debt over a 20 year period assuming a 10 percent construction bond! This figure is just debt service. It does not include operational and maintenance expenses nor does it include the $3,000 average homeowner hook up expense to the system.

This plan was a financial burden before Proposition 2½. With the passage of Proposition 2½, which was overwhelmingly supported by the citizens of Cohasset (2482 For, 1651 Against), it becomes totally irresponsible, a financial catastrophe for the town. Remember, that under Proposition 2½ a town can raise its taxes only 2½ percent over its prior year's revenue. Thus, the $550,000 debt service plus related expenses would have to be taken from other departments in the town. In other words, we may be able to produce a lot more sludge, but we will probably be unable to run our schools.

Folks, the solution to our sewer problem is not a construction boondoggle for Metcalf and Eddy, but rather an inexpensive upgrading of our present limited system, together with diligent adherence to our zoning and health regulations is in order.

Fortunately, the present administration in Washington has the wisdom to withhold funds for such foolishness. However, administrations change. Thus, we must act now to throttle back our sewer plans. We can not afford waste dollars for waste water.

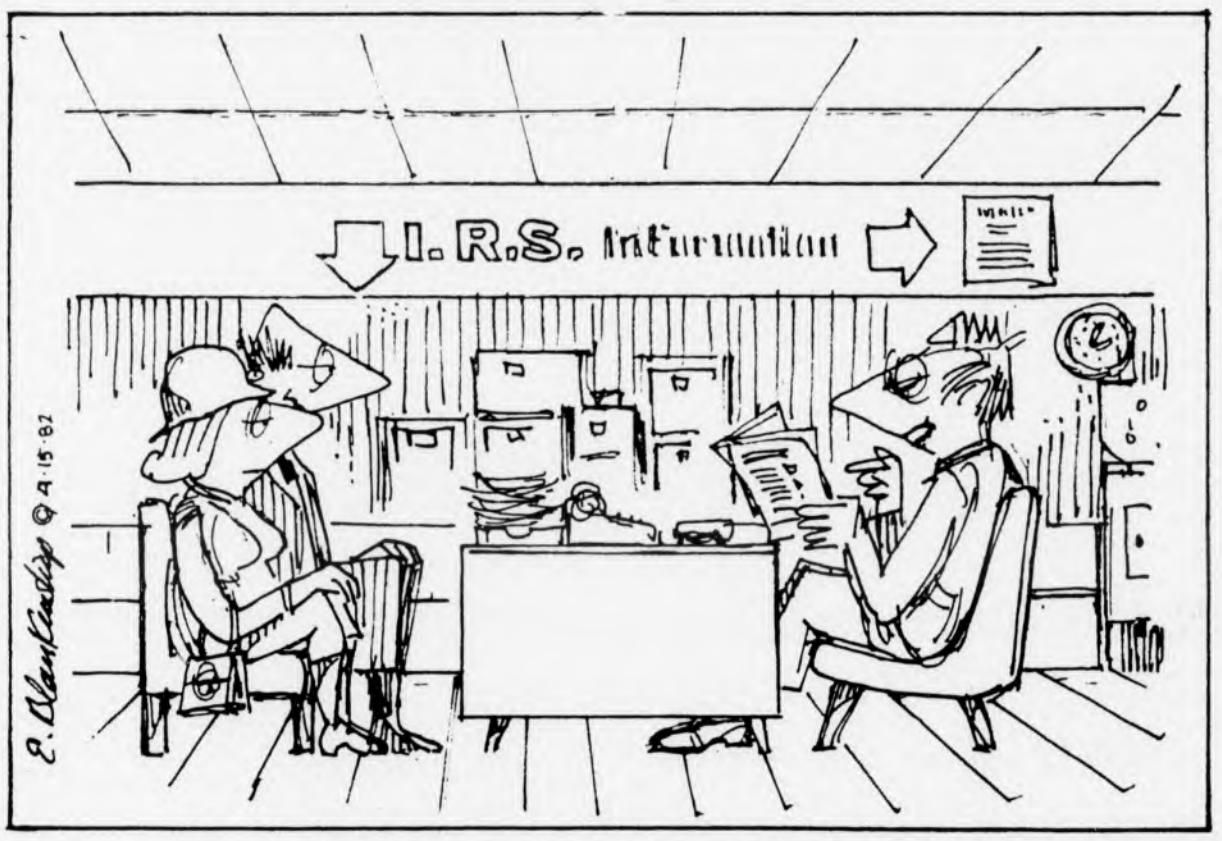
Joe Nedrow thanks Mary, Irene & others

To the Editor,

I would like to express my appreciation to all who have supported my candidacy for school committee.

I recognize and accept the responsibility of representing the town on this most important committee. However, I think it is important to recognize our school committee is made up of five fellow residents who are all dedicated to doing what they think is best for the children of Cohasset.



There no doubt will be many times when the committee will individually disagree on specific issues, but even in those cases, I am sure our positions will be determined by our individual opinions as to what is best for the entire educational program.

During my campaign, I indicated the need to refocus the efforts of the entire community on what's best for our children. There is no elective body in Cohasset any more representative of our entire community than the present school committee. To parents and concerned citizens, I encourage your interest, participation and support. Our decisions can only be as good as the information on which they are based. The community's input is critical as we make decisions in these trying times.

I especially appreciate the efforts of Mrs. Mary O'Brien for her diligence and those who hosted coffees and worked in my behalf. A very special thanks goes to Mrs. Irene Brown for the courtesy and assistance she provided.

Pilgrim Co-operative director schedules annual meeting

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank will be held at the offices of the Bank, 48 South Main Street, Cohasset, on Tuesday, May 11, at 8 p.m. for the purpose of electing a Clerk of the Corporation for a term of one year, Directors for a term of three years, and for the transaction of such other business as may legally come before the meeting, according to Edward T. Mulvey, Clerk.

Laura Young

Her size astounded me. I had been watching a giant dance not more than 10 feet from the window. The giant wasn't even five feet tall.

"You must be..." she greeted me with a warm handshake.

"But you seem so tall when you dance, how do you do that?" I countered following the prima ballerina into the dancers' lounge.

Laura smiled.

"That's the whole idea," she said. "That's what I work for."

There had been six other dancers in that studio going over the same movements. There was only one ballerina whose artistry demanded attention.

We sat in the lounge under the warmth that poured through smoke or soot marred windows. Laura rubbed her left ankle. Injuries are the bane of all people of bodily skill. She explained she finds the blood jams in that ankle from time to time.

"Ice massage," she said. "We used to be told to use hot soaks but that's all wrong. Ice massage and maybe warm soaks."

She keeps dixie cups in her freezer, filled with ice, just waiting for the need to massage.

Laura Young didn't find herself dancing Swan Lake with Nureyev by chance.

Her career began at age seven. Her mother, who had been involved in the dance herself, chose Cecily Baker as Laura's first teacher. In those days that meant a trek to Milton for lessons.

"I found I loved it," Laura said.

In time Miss Baker began teaching in both Cohasset and Hingham. The classes were at Rotary Hall in Cohasset and the Sons of Italy in Hingham. Laura increased her classes from one to two to three times a week.

"When I was 12 she said she'd taught me everything she could and told me to go to Boston."

From there Laura became a student of Ballet mistress Sydney Leonard. At 13 she became part of the New England Civic Ballet which turned professional when she was 16. Now that group has grown into being the Boston Ballet.

Laura Young, who has been a principal dancer since her graduation from high school, has acquired a repertoire of 55 leading roles in classic, modern and contemporary ballets.

She is a charter member with the Boston Ballet. She was there in the days when the company moved from place to place in Boston.

"We felt like a wrecking ball was following us," she jokes, with little humor.

Now the ballet has a home at the Metropolitan Center.

She was one of the 350 Grand Bostonians during Boston's 350th Jubilee back in 1980.

She has other honors but interviewing her isn't the way to find out about them. The press office of the company can provide that sort of information. Laura talks about how nice it would be to move back to Cohasset one day, about how she keeps up her friendships with her best friends from high school, and drives back into the town occasionally.

"Yes, I grew up in Cohasset, I went to the Ripley Road School."

Laura said what she misses most about Cohasset is listening to the waves.

She talks about the brevity of a dancer's career as she sips something — could it be broth — from a thermos that was in her bag.

Her muscles show sitting close by. They are achieved through work and strain. Her dancing shows none of the effort, although she assured me effort was truly there.

"I've found that I can't take time off anymore," she said, quite seriously. "I can't give up practice for more than two or three days without finding it really hurts to return."

She added that what that means in the end is that she must spend at least an hour-and-a-half at bar every day, vacation or not.

When she is getting ready for a program, the day becomes extended. It begins with an hour-and-a-half class and then there's six hours of rehearsal.

When performances are actually underway, rehearsal is cut to an hour-and-a-half.

She now sees new ways to handle roles she did 10 years ago.

"As you approach bigger roles, there's a challenge. The more you know, the more you understand the nuances of the role, the special ways the feet can move, the more you can bring..."

Which role does she enjoy the most?

"The one I'm playing at the time. No, Don Quixote. It's one of the most challenging roles."

She plays Kitri-Dulcinea opposite Nureyev in the production.

What does it feel like to dance with a legend?

"He's a very good partner," Laura said of Nureyev. "I felt a little of the pressure in London. But he doesn't make me feel ill at ease."

By the time this paper is in the mail and at the newsstands, Laura will be beginning a tour that will take the Boston Ballet Company to Mexico and the South and West.

Stops are scheduled in Atlanta, San Antonio, New Orleans, Mexico City, Los Angeles and Knoxville. The stop in Tennessee marks the opening of the World's Fair.

And does she still find the dance as satisfying as she did before becoming one of the acclaimed greats.

"More," she smiles with the sort of smile only happy people understand.

PRIMA BALLERINA Laura Young executes her art with perfection for the Boston Ballet Company.

School briefs . . .

The following appointments were made by the school committee on Monday night:

School board members Richard Conley and Joseph Nedrow were assigned to the sub-committee for custodial negotiations.

Conley and John Langmaid III will serve on the sick bank sub-committee.

School teacher Jane Corry, of Cohasset, was denied a continuation of her maternity leave by the School Committee on Monday. On the advice of counsel, Alan Miller, the Board voted, 5-0, to disapprove the request for a second year (83-84) of maternity leave.

The Coca-Cola production of "I'm special - You're special" will be viewed by grades 6, 7 and 8 tomorrow (Thursday) at the High School.

The production focuses on educating and mainstreaming the handicapped. School board chairman Diane Kornet invited the community to attend the show. The assembly was originally scheduled for last Tuesday but was postponed due to snow.

Community Center trip

The first in the Cohasset Community Center's Spring bus trips will be held on Wednesday, April 28 to the Junior League of Boston's Annual Decorator Show House, Elm Bank, in Wellesley.

The trip will run from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. and will include the cost of transportation and admission. For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Greeks to sponsor 'Cohasset in the Spring'

By J.A. Marshall

"Yes, Athena, there is a spring!"

This year, on May 1, the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association will sponsor its "Cohasset in the Spring" event — a house and garden tour of a few of the town's lovely homes, as well as two of its landmarks, the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, Pope Memorial building, and Castle Hill, constructed from 1928-1930.

The other homes featured on this springtime outing are also historic in nature, as three of them were built by Colonel Albert Pope during the turn of the century, and one, on Nichols Road, was constructed in the Edwardian Style in 1904. The houses will be decked out in their springtime finery (no snow for May 1), the gardens will be in bloom, and our featured garden on Jerusalem Road combines flowering trees and shrubs with delicate blossoms of annuals and perennials.

Tickets are now available for "Cohasset in the Spring," so dig out from our Easter snow-blanket, and get ready to enjoy to the fullest our house and garden sojourn through one of Massachusetts' prettiest towns. Honorary chairman, Eve Sedell of Scituate; chairman, Demosthenes Syrmopoulos of Cohasset; co-chairman, Jane Marshall of Cohasset; hospitality, Mary Menakos of Scituate.

Times: 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 to 8 p.m. For tickets and further information call Mrs. Syrmopoulos, 383-9071 or Miss Marshall, 383-9236.

School Board nixes jazz ensemble trip

The School Committee denied a request for some 90 members of the Jazz Ensemble group to travel to Newark, New Jersey in May for the "Big Apple Music Festival."

The trip would cost students $40-50 per night, plus a transportation fee.

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell recommended that the School Committee disapprove the trip. The Board concurred with Crowell and denied the requested trip by a 5-0 vote.

A color accent may be likened to the pinch of seasoning that a cook adds to a dish to give it "PIZZAZZ." It is often an herb which stands out in contrast to the primary flavor. So, too, is it with decorating and design. An accent differs from the main color scheme in a way which adds enough stress and difference to create a vitality. An accent may be a subtle catalyst or a diametrically opposed, contrasting color. Its position in the room must not draw attention to its out-of-place stance. Rather, it should be that subtle something without which the room does not quite come alive.

How many times have we seen a picture and decided that that's just what we want our living room, den, bedroom, etc. to look like? Oftentimes the colors may just be all wrong! When you have a color scheme in mind, why not see BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE before you start? We can help you with even your most difficult decorating problems. You will find us in N. Blizzard delays spring debut of CHS teams

The blizzard interrupted spring sports at Cohasset High School last week. The many weeks of preparation and training were supposed to lead into opening games in the South Shore League for several teams last week.

Boys' tennis coach Toni Gillson spoke of the season's delay, "We were all disappointed with the late start. The team has to keep their enthusiasm and conditioning at a peak."

BOYS TENNIS

This year's squad will be led by co-captains Rob Tis and Shannon Collins. Last year the team finished second in the SSL. The Skippers advanced to the tournament and were eliminated in the quarterfinals by Silver Lake.

Tis, a senior, owns the third single's position while Collins, a junior, and senior Mike Brady have been battling several weeks for the top singles spot. Both Brady and Collins are well-known in local competition and participated indoors over the winter at the Old Colony Tennis Club in Hingham.

The boys have a new coach this year, Toni Gillson, who is also an eighth grade special needs teacher in Cohasset. She is an accomplished tennis player from Scituate and is looking forward to a winning season.

Though the team is relatively young with only three seniors, Gillson said, "I feel that the team has good depth which can lead to a successful season."

"They are a group with a lot of energy and a positive attitude. They've been working hard to prepare for their first match," she said.

In addition to three sophomores and two freshmen, there are two seventh graders on the squad. Both Curtis Erikson and Todd Henry are fighting for starting positions on varsity.

Though the roster is always changing with new challenge matches, it looks like sophomore Brian Ramsey and junior Paul Riley will team up for the first doubles spot. Second doubles will probably include: junior Billy Davenport and freshman John Colocusius.

GIRLS TENNIS

The Skipper squad will be under the direction of second year coach Peggy Lynch. Last year, the team finished with a 10-4 record for third place in the SSL.

The team qualified for the state tourney and beat Seekonk in their first round of action and then lost to Attleboro.

Leadership will be provided this year by senior co-captains Karen Murphy and Susan Dalrymple. Both co-captains are expected to start in single's positions.

Top players on the squad are: senior Kate Cowen; juniors Mia Graham, Joy Pratt, Krissie Ralff and sisters Diane and Elaine Mullen; sophomore Jenny Mitman.

Looking for information on the Washingtons of Cohasset

By David Wadsworth
Historical Society Curator

In Cohasset's Woodside Cemetery, there is a gravestone commemorating the names of members of the Washington family in Cohasset; John, James, and their descendants.

The name Washington, while familiar to all American schoolchildren, is not found in Cohasset's Genealogical books. It is not one of the old Colonial family names running back to the founding of the town; nor is it any of the Portugese, Italian or Irish families who made Cohasset their home during the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Instead, the Washingtons of Cohasset belonged to a family which had arrived in America as part of the forced exodus from Africa. Their ancestors had been among the trans-Atlantic human cargo called slaves, and had been settled in Fredericksburg, Virginia.

John Washington, who died in Cohasset, was born in Fredericksburg on May 20, 1838. He and his parents were slaves of one Thomas R. Ware, Sr. As he grew up, John was educated by his mother as time permitted. From her he learned to read, and importantly, to write.

Later in life, John Washington was to write a book of memoirs which still exists. In it he described in detail his service from 1861 to 1865 in the Union Army during the Civil War. During 1861, Washington had left Fredericksburg, his pockets full of papers containing information describing Confederate military movements and locations around the city of Richmond, Virginia. Upon his arrival in a Union Army camp, after a hazardous crossing of the Rappahannock River, Washington presented this invaluable information to General Ambrose Burnside, the Commanding Officer of the Northern Army. Subsequently, the Confederates learned of Washington's escape from Fredericksburg with the vital information, and they placed a price upon his head.

John Washington was forced to flee the war zone to escape capture and execution. Settling finally in the District of Columbia, he found employment with the newly-formed Freedman's Bureau.

In years following the Civil War, John's son, James Washington, arrived in Cohasset and established a home here. The exact date and reason for his arrival here are not known. It is clear, however, that the family resided in the town for many years during the last 19th and early 20th centuries.

Older Cohasset residents recall the Washington family as residing on North Main Street. In later years, James Washington is remembered as having been a Crossing Attendant for the New Haven Railroad at the old Black Rock Station, once located near the intersection of King Street and North Main Street. Eventually James' father, John Washington, the old Union Army veteran, came to Cohasset to spend the last years of his life with his son's family. John died here, and his name appears on the Woodside stone.

Recently, Professor Alice Jackson Stuart of Plainfield, New Jersey visited Cohasset. Professor Stuart's late close friend Evelyn Washington of the District of Columbia, had in her possession the original book of John Washington's memoirs. This book and the information it contained has become the subject of a major research project by Professor Stuart. She has received a federal grant to explore the historical significance of John Washington's lifetime as a slave, then a freedman, within the cultural context of the times in which he lived. Professor Stuart's visit to Cohasset was for the purpose of gathering information relating to John and James Washington and their family in this town.

Though she found much information in the town's public records and from members of the Cohasset Historical Society, two of Professor Stuart's most important questions remain unanswered; when did James Washington first come to Cohasset, and why did he choose this particular town as his residence?

To assist Professor Stuart in her research, the Cohasset Historical Society is appealing to Cohasset residents who knew the Washington family, or may recall its members, to contact the Society. We will be glad to receive any information relating to John, James, or other members of the Washington family of North Main Street, and will send all facts directly to Professor Stuart.

If you can help us in this worthy project, please call Constance W. Parker at 383-0773 or the Lothrop House at 383-6930. All information will be gladly received.

Home buying promoted

Is now the right time to buy a home? Who can buy? What is involved in buying? Is there any mortgage money available? Are the interest rates coming down? What are the tax advantages of investing in real estate?

You can get the answers to these and many other questions at the free Home Buyers' Forum to be held Thursday, April 22, at 7:30 p.m. at the Marshfield Country Club, Route 3A. This is a repeat of the standing-room-only forum held last fall, sponsored by the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, Inc.

The evening's program will feature Ralph Rivkind, a tax attorney; Jon Davis, an attorney specializing in real estate transactions; and a panel of bankers, including: Chris Dunn of the Boston Five-Cent Savings Bank; Philip Greenspan, Quincy Savings Bank; Pat Buckley, South Weymouth Savings Bank; Victor Abate, Commonwealth Mortgage Company; and Joseph Comerford, Myles Standish Credit Union. Bob Mullin, President of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, will open the program.

According to Dale Stilton, chairman of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors' Education Seminar Committee, "this highly informative session, which is being co-sponsored by the Patriot Ledger and the Board of Realtors, will show the prospective homebuyer the many favorable options available in today's market. We will discuss in depth the various types of financing available from VA and FHA to variable and alternative financing, the tax advantages and the application of the new tax laws to the real estate."

Photography workshops at Art Center

Photographers and would-be photographers, grab your camera and join an exciting group at the South Shore Art Center for the spring photography classes! There is something for everyone from novice to professional either in weekly classes or weekend field trips. Enrollments must be made in advance.

Beginning photography with emphasis on darkroom will be taught by Linda Wasko with the first meeting on Wednesday evening, April 28 and subsequent meetings by arrangement. The workings of the camera will be explained, developing and printmaking will be taught at an intensive session and students will learn how to make a good composition and choose a subject. Black and white film and a 35mm camera are necessary. Darkroom time included in the class.

Intermediate photography will be taught by Paul Fortin in a weekly lecture/demonstration class starting on Monday, April 26 and continuing for eight sessions. Sports, portrait, people and landscapes — how to photograph them and how to create the best compositions — will be the subjects taken up in class. Both color and black and white film may be used; darkroom is included for black and white only.

Intermediate photography with Linda Wasko will concentrate on learning specialized and more advanced darkroom techniques. Class members will meet on Wednesday, April 28 at 7:30 p.m. to set up a schedule of projects to be completed in eight weeks. Intermediates will concentrate on sequencing projects while more advanced students will learn tone-line separation, solarization and high-contrast printing. For black and white only; basic darkroom skills required.

Peter Anderson will lead a Photography Field trip for beginners to advanced students on Saturday, May 1 and hold a critique session of work done on the trip on Saturday, May 8. The group will car-pool to a nearby location and receive on-the-scene guidance to composition, image-making, light effects. Photographers should dress appropriately and bring a bag lunch for the field trip from 10 to 2 p.m. Color or black and white film may be used. The center darkroom will be available to process black and white work.

Individual darkroom is available for photographers who want to work on their own. Use of the darkroom for two-hour or longer sessions includes chemicals for black and white film only.

For further information or for a complete class schedule of offerings in drawing, painting, museum tours, teen and children's art, contact the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset or call 383-9548.

Mothers & Tots series at Sci Center

Spring has Sprung! Mothers and Tots can observe the rapid change in nature's clothes as they enjoy activities together at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. Mothers and Tots Series I — Tuesdays, April 27 — May 11 from 10 to 11:15 a.m.; Series II — Tuesday, May 15, 18 and June 1.

Fee for members is $10 for each series; $14 for non-members for each series; $1 each additional child per day. For further information, call 659-2559.

Why does the sun shine, the daisy grow, the woodchuck live in a hole? Children, ages 3, 4 and 5, can learn answers to these questions and much, much more in the South Shore Natural Science Nature Nurseries, Norwell. Classes for age 3 will be held on Wednesdays, April 28 through June 9 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Classes for ages 4 and 5 will be held on Thursdays, April 29 through June 10 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. or 1 to 2:30 p.m.

Fee is $25 for members and $30 for non-members.

Garden Club flower show

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present "Seascape," a standard flower show on Friday, April 30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Shockman on Meadow Lane in Cohasset.

Tea will be served from 2 to 4 p.m. and cocktails will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. All husbands are invited.

The show will accept entrants from any member of the Garden Club Federation of Mass., Inc. Junior members are also invited to participate in this event. It is to be viewed as a fun and learning experience for all club members.

The co-chairmen of this even are Mrs. Frederick Wood of Hingham and Mrs. Philip Shockman of Cohasset.

Some of the members who are making an outstanding contribution for this event are Mrs. Albert Gilmore, Ms. James Grinnell, Ms. Ralph Farrell, Ms. George Sechen, Ms. John Riley and others.

Newcomers spring fashion show

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its annual "Spring Fashion Show" on Thursday, April 29.

The show, to be held at the Hatherly Country Club, North Scituate, will begin at 8 p.m. with the proceeds to benefit the Scituate and Cohasset High School scholarship fund. Fashions will cover a variety of styles, including tennis wear and prom dresses. Stores sponsoring the show with their fashions are the Weathervane, Your Advantage, Gates, Pamela's Place, and Cards 'n Shards.

Wine, cheese and dessert will be included in the $6 price of the ticket. There will be door prizes as well as a raffle.

For ticket information call 545-0287 or 545-5635. The public is most welcome to attend, however, children are not encouraged.

Emerson remembered by the Unitarians

The First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Churches of Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell and Scituate will combine for an unusual joint Worship Service recognizing the centennial of the death of Ralph Waldo Emerson on Sunday, April 25 at 10:30 a.m. at the First Parish Church in Norwell, 24 River Street.

The service will include combined junior and senior choirs and short talks by the ministers of each church, to illuminate and enliven the memory of this remarkable American.

Emerson's writings, outstanding examples of clear thinking, moral integrity, religious vision and elegant prose, are standards in schools throughout the world. He was a Unitarian minister and lecturer, and a leader of the Transcendentalist Movement; that group of inspired thinkers who in the nineteenth century made Concord one of the world's most respected intellectual centers.

The Unitarian-Universalist Churches today remember Emerson as one of its most important builders. His inclusive religious faith and social concern, his respect for the individual and the necessity for constructive change have become hallmarks of this religious movement, which had its American birth in New England and continues to thrive here.

Most towns in Massachusetts have First Parish Church which became Unitarian in the nineteenth century as a result of the intellectual rebirth of which Emerson was a part. Today many of them, like the four churches in our area, continue their role as worshipping communities which value the development of individual belief and the necessity of vigorous social responsibility.

Obituaries

William Gleason

William J. Gleason, Jr., a Cohasset resident and formerly of Dorchester died April 10. He was the son of William J. and Mary A. (McLaughlin) Gleason.

He leaves a sister, Mary Bernadine Gleason of Cohasset.

Mr. Gleason was a late employee of the Boston Public Works Department, and was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II.

Services were held today from his late residence, 3 Linden Circle. A funeral mass was held in St. Anthony's Church and burial was held in Mt. Calvary cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the charity of one's choice.

Maude Hickey

Maude V. (Bell) Hickey, 92, of Cohasset, died last week in Ripley Road Nursing Home.

Born in Stoughton, she had lived in Cohasset for 24 years. She attended Stoughton schools and was a graduate of Roxbury High School. She was a past member of the Savin Hill Yacht Club Dorchester.

Wife of the late William H. Hickey, she leaves a son, William V. Hickey of Cohasset, two grandchildren and five great granchildren. She was also the mother of the late Lois Bell Hickey of Dorchester.

A private memorial service was held Friday in the Sparrell Funeral Home. Rev. John Benbow of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset presided. Burial was private.

Donations in her memory may be made to the American Heart Association, 275 Westgate Drive, Brockton, 01401.

Charles Ford

Charles C. Ford, 81, a Scottsdale, Arizona and former Cohasset resident died April 6. He was the husband of Dorothy (Minton) Ford.

He leaves two sons, C. Christopher Jr. and Theodore M. Ford, both of Cohasset and three daughters, Katharine Benjamin of Holden, Mary Zanelli of Scottsdale, Arizone, and Collette C. Ford of Berkeley, California.

Mr. Ford also leaves a brother, Maurice T. Ford of Cambridge, and 10 grandchildren.

Services were held Monday from the Sparrell Funeral Home, followed by a Mass of Christian Burial in St. Anthony's Church.

Donations may be made in his memory to the Boston College Alumni Association. Burial was held in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

Allen Bates

Allen W. Bates, Sr., 76, retired electrical supervisor for the Bethlehem Steel Co. and, later, for General Dynamics, Quincy, died April 8 at South Shore Hospital after being stricken at his home of an apparent heart attack.

Born in Cohasset, he was a graduate of Cohasset High School. He also was a graduate of Northeastern University's electrical engineering course.

He had lived in Scituate since 1937.

During World War II, Bethlehem Steel assigned him to the Bath Iron Works in Maine for two years and he later returned to Fore River Shipyard, Quincy.

He retired from General Dynamics 11 years ago.

He was former vice president of the Scituate Historical Society, a member of the Scituate Advisory Board, the Scituate Cemetery Site Committee, secretary and treasurer of the Fairview Cemetery Corporation of Scituate, and a Sealer of Weights and Measures in Scituate.

He was also a member of the Scituate Library Association and the Scituate Masonic Lodge.

He leaves his wife, Amy C. (Frye) Bates; a son, Lt. Cdr. Allen W. Bates, Jr., USN, stationed in Germany; a daughter, Gail B. Scott of Scituate; a brother, Herbert P. Bates of Cohasset; four grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at the Ernest A. Richardson Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Road, Scituate Center. The Rev. George A. Hodgkins, pastor of the First Trinitarian Congregational Church of Scituate, officiated. Burial was private at Fairview Cemetery, Scituate.

Donations may be sent the Scituate Historical Society, c/o Kenneth Torrey, 189 Old Oaken Bucket Road, Scituate, 02066.

It's happening in Cohasset

Separation discussed

The Coastal Community Counseling Center is sponsoring a major prevention program focusing on dealing with issues around separation, divorce, the single life, parenting, adolescence and stress.

Through a series of workshops held in local churches, libraries and schools, the Center will provide useful information and techniques to help individuals cope more effectively with the stress and challenges of everyday life.

There is a nominal fee for the workshops. For registration or information on any of the workshops contact Lori Doustou at 479-5603.

A six session workshop, "Feeling Mixed Up: For Teenagers Experiencing Parental Separation and Divorce," will be held Wednesday afternoon from 3:30 to 5 at the Tufts Library, Broad Street, Weymouth. The sessions begin April 28.

"Parent Awareness," geared for parents of young children will be held on Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8:30 at Memorial School, Main Street, Weymouth. The eight sessions begin April 27.

A four session workshop, "Parenting the Adolescent: Survival Tips," will be held Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9 beginning April 22, at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset.

"The Single Life: Living Alone and Liking It," will be held on four consecutive Monday evenings from 7 to 8:30, beginning May 3, at the Tufts Library, Broad Street, Weymouth.

Two one session workshops on "Stress Management" will be held April 14 and April 20 from 7:39 to 9 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library's Whiton Room.

Keep Well Clinics

Two monthly Keep Well Clinics will be held this month. The first will be on April 15 at 11:30 a.m. prior to the 60 Plus Club meeting, at First Parish House, North Main Street. The second Keep Well will be on April 28 from 10 a.m. to noon, at Harborview, 60 Elm St.

At these clinics blood pressures, weights, urine tests and general health consultation will be available. These clinics are open to all Cohasset residents. All of the listed services are also available during the "Walk-In" Board of Health Nursing hours 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at the Social Service League office, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset.

Community Center is open

An Annual Meeting and Open House for the Community Center of Cohasset will be held on Monday, April 26, at 8 p.m. All members are invited to come and participate.

Two by-law amendments will be voted on at that time. The first reads that the annual meeting will be held on the last Monday in April but in no event more than seven days thereafter. Presently, the annual meeting must be held on the last Monday in April.

The second amendment will increase the number of board members to 17 from the current number of 15.

The election of new board members and executive officers will also be held at the meeting. Provisions have been made for nominations to the board of directors to be made from the floor as well as from the board.

Coastline Council speaker

The Coastline Council for Children Board of Directors invites all interested citizens to listen and talk with Dr. Luleen Anderson on "Issues in Adolescent Depression and Suicide," at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 15, at the Lutheran Church, 916 Main St., Hingham.

Dr. Anderson, currently Coordinator of Psychological Services and Elementary Guidance for Quincy Public Schools and Adjunct Professor of Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy, brings skill and sensitivity to her work with depressed adolescents. Her work includes teaching area professionals to use their skills effectively as they weave through the precarious terrain of adolescent depression. Dr. Anderson's outstanding work on the South Shore is noted in the 1975 "Who's Who of American Women."

As an author of numerous professional and popular publications, Dr. Anderson presses for creative solutions schools, family and friends can bring to bear on the needs manifested by children.

Cub Scouts issue awards

Den 1 Awards: Gold Arrow, Jon Mitchell, Mike Cisneros and Mark Batts; Silver Arrow, Jon Mitchell.

The den has been busy at one of their meetings making delicious chocolate lollipops. Betty Cisneros (Mike's mom) helped with the cooking and pouring of the chocolate into the many molds.

The boys have been learning how to read maps and follow directions of a trail. All went over to Wheelwright Park and blazed trails. At the end of the trail a surprise was awaiting them...a treasure of jellybeans!

Den 2: From the Cub Scout Fun Book comes all the enjoyment and hard work of kite making. The boys have been ambitiously working with the paper, glue, string, etc. to make their individual kite-creations. The finishing touches will be completed next week and the boys will be able to fly their kites on Sandy Beach.

The Cubs had their Game Day. They had fun checking their accuracy with the bean bag throwing and other creative games. They are working towards their arrowheads.

Their map study has been teaching the boys how to locate different sites in an area. Now they know how to route and read the maps.

The "pot-luck" garden is what everyone's waiting to see grow. The boys planted many things from carrot-tops to grapefruit seeds. We'll have to wait to see who has the best green thumb.

Den 3: There is plenty of harmony in the group. The boys have had fun traveling. They have gone to the Boston Science Museum. They saw many exhibits. They also went to the New England Aquarium. Their April trip will be a visit to Battleship Cove. We'll have to wait until then to hear about the explorations aboard the ship and submarine.

The Pinewood Derby cars are doing well in the making. Everyone is anxious for the March 31 race.

The boys have completed a project of making a nice wooden centerpiece for the table of Den 3.

Den 4 Awards: Bear Badges, Jimmy Long and Richard McLaughlin.

The den made different chocolate molds of shells and cones. (The chocolate must have been delicious because they never lasted long enough to get home for the parents to sample.)

March brought a new light to the Den 4. Thanks to the expertise, patience, and assistance to two special helpers: Richard Huntington (Richard McLaughlin's grandfather) and Joe Silvia (Matt's grandfather). The boys made their first wooden table lamp. It was an excellent learning experience on woodworking as well as learning the wiring technique of a lamp. Everyone was more than pleased with their work-especially when the bulb was successfully lit as the grande finale. The boys took their lamps home to stain and will show them proudly at our April 28 Pack meeting.

Welcome Spring! The cubs made bird feeders from pine cones, peanutbutter, and bird seed to hang outside.

On March 14 the boys went on a field trip to the South Shore Science Center in Norwell. They joined Skiddy Casoni on a walk to a maple swamp area. They saw a demonstration on tapping and sap collection, and a film on maple sap to syrup. (It was nice to meet Mr. Casoni, who has been a long-time scout volunteer himself. His wife has been a den leader for 17 years.)

Webelos Awards: Sportsman's Badge, Danny Farwell, Mike Figueiredo, Troy Haase, Tom Long and Steve Webber.

The boys earned their badges by studying more about the sports of baseball, basketball and football primarily. They learned about the sport's rules, equipment, signals and had a question and answer period.

They went to Wompatuck State Park to mark trails. Danny and Mike Farwell and Tom Long were given a head start to mark the trail. Troy, Steve and Mike F. and Mr. Farwell followed. They had to keep a sharp lookout for signs such as marked trees, disturbed soil, moved loose shrubs or logs and other markings. Everyone did very well as you can see the whole group is here.

The Recreation Report ... caning ... guitar lessons

The Recreation Department announced this week that registrations will be accepted, via phone, for hand caning or fiber rush courses to be taught by Mr. Kenneth Sargent of Country Workshop, Cohasset.

The programs are scheduled for Monday evening from 7 to 9:30 at the Town Hall. They will continue for five weeks. The fee is $16 per person for the entire course, with a materials charge between $7 and $10. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis for an extra $1.

The program is designed to teach, (hands on) chair caning or rushing beginning with basic techniques, graduating to the finished product, a caned or rushed chair. Each person will need a chair to work on.

Guitar Lessons

The Recreation Department is currently accepting registrations for guitar lessons to be held Wednesday,afternoons from 3 to 4 for Beginner I, and from 4 to 5 for Beginner II. Programs will start as soon as classes are filled. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis for an extra $1.

A Thursday afternoon 3 to 4 class will be held for intermediate students. The fee is $15 for five, one-hour lessons.

Beginners Level I: Introduction to the basic chords used for most folk songs. Sight reading notes on the guitar will also be discussed. Simple strums and finger picking also will be taught with popular folk songs. For students with no prior musical background.

Beginners II: More emphasis on sight reading, time valves and rhythm. More songs and two usage of strums and fingerpicks. Simple popular folk tunes. Such as "This Land is Your Land, Cum-Ba-Ya, Sweetlow, Sweet Chariot" will be performed. For students with some previous musical experience.

Intermediate: More advanced strums and fingerpicks will be taught in this class. Also we will graduate from folk to more contemporary music, such as Crosby Stills, and Nash, will be taught. If time and class level permits, we will touch upon blues and classical techniques.

The program will be taught by Roger Shaffer, who attended Berkley College of Music, majoring in jazz guitar. He has been teaching for a number of years in Cambridge and locally.

Classes will require tuning devices and notebooks. Guitar rentals are available for between $15 to $20 for the course.

Seahawks clinch the top spot

"Chief" Frank McGovern's Squirt C warriors sent a pair of opponents to the "Big Teepee in the Sky" this week and in the process clinched the Hobomock Regular Season Crown.

The C's massacred the Brewins 14-2 and scalped Plymouth 5-2 to add yet another "Championship Feather" to their Tribal Headdress. Stephen Boardman notched 7 "coups" with his tomahawk (2 goals and 5 assists) to lead the "War Party's" raid against the Brewins. Terence Shea, David Orpen and Damon Sparrow added "Hat Tricks" to the attack while Tony Muzzi (twice) and Sean Noonan also found the range with their arrows. Filling the "Medicine Man's Bag" full of assists were Sparrow(3), Muzzi (2), Dan Cuddahy, Shea and Eric Fitzpatrick. Noonan, Orpen, Shea, Boardman and Muzzi all dropped "Buffalo Chips" into the nets against Plymouth while Orpen, Sparrow, Boardman and Noonan provided the set-ups.

Coach Mike Powers' Banta C squad rolled over Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 5-2 to nail down 2nd place at the Hobomock rink. Jay Cronin (2), Mike O'Donnell, Matthew Cox and Andy McCarthy dented the nets for the victorious Seahawks while Eric Wurzel earned a "Playmaker's Patch" with 3 assists. McCarthy, Chris Baker and Cox also were credited with set-ups for the high-flying C's.

Coach Larry Keating's Pee Wee C's were the lone Seahawk losers this week as they bowed to Duxbury 5-4. Jamie Langmaid, John Niland, Gilbert Rebello and Michael Leighton were the "Puck Poppers' while assists were registered by Peter Buckley and Paul Ahern (2).

Coach Tony Ventolieri's young Mite skaters continued to hold the top spot in the A-2 slating at Hobomock Arena. The Mites blanked Easton 7-0 behind the brilliant cageminding of Matthew Ventolieri and downed Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 5-2 as Gregg Salmaine notched a "Texas Hat Trick." Salmaine also had a "Hat Trick" against Easton while Kevin Townsend had a pair of tallies and Patrick Henderson and Gary Dunham added single scores. Henderson, Alfie Rogers, Tim Getto and Paul Frey registered assists in the Easton Contest and Henderson provided the finaly tally in the W-H-K affair.

'Interpretive' program continues at Wompatuck Park

Locally Wompatuck State Park will repeat its popular interpretive program free to the public.

Located in the towns of Hingham, Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset, with its entrance off Rte. 228 in Hingham, Wompatuck's 1,000 acres of diverse ecosystems provide adequate habitat for a variety of plants and animals considered uncommon so close to urban Boston.

Bike trips, interpretive walks and auto tours highlights the program but films lectures, campfires and guest speakers proved very popular last summer and will be repeated.

Schedules of events which are set for the months of July and August will soon be published in the Mariner.

The Intellivision gang is back

By Claire McDonough

When I came in the front door the other night, my ears were assaulted by deafening noises.

"Can't those kids turn the t.v. down?" I asked the Dragon. "How can you stand it?"

He shifted uneasily from one foot to the other. "Maybe you'd better have a cup of tea. How about an aspirin?"

"What?" I yelled. "Tell them to turn the t.v. down."

"Uh, it isn't, uh, the t.v."

His meaning hit me. "Skipper's Intellivision is back? When you sent it to Marikesh to be repaired, you promised me it would take a long time."

"It's been over a year," he reminded me gently.

"That's not long enough. And why are all those cars parked outside?"

Just then a tall individual wearing a burnoose walked into the kitchen. He studied the contents of the refrigerator, muttered, "No goat's cheese," and walked back down the hall toward Skipper's room. "Who's he?" I gasped.

"You remember him," the Dragon replied. "That's Asaf. He and his friends Juan and Abdul were here when Skip first got his Intellivision. They said there's a notice on their college bulletin board that says it's fixed."

"Right. And who are all those teenaged girls in the parlor?"

Tomorrow Brieda and Larry celebrate their birthday, remember? I told Breida she could have 13 of her friends for a sleep-over tonight. They're waiting for a turn at Space Invaders."

Larry stuck his head around the corner. "It's not fair. Breida's only fifteen and I'm eighteen. How come I can't have thirteen girls over, too? Or at least get a chance at the t.v. game?"

"Because you're healthy enough to find another game," Kevin said adjusting his crutches. "You'd think they'd give a guy with a broken ankle a turn. That's what Affirmative Action's all about."

I started to walk out of the room.

"Where are you going? Don't you want a cup of tea?" the Dragon asked.

"No. I'm going to write another letter to Ann Landers, and this time she'd better answer."

I slammed the door shut as hard as I could. There was no way anyone could have heard it.

Forty five minutes later I poked my head out of the bedroom into a silent hallway. No Adbul or Asaf. No Breida with her thirteen friends. No Larry. No Skipper or Kevin. "Where is everyone?" I asked.

The Dragon wrinkled his brow. "It's all very mysterious. Some woman with a French accent phoned anonymously and said that Maureen has Pac Man. They've gone to her apartment."

I sighed happily. "Oui, Monsieur Le Dragon. C'est incredible."

Selectmen to meet

The Board of Selectmen will hold a meeting on Tuesday, April 20, 8 p.m. at Town Hall to discuss the issue of Town Meeting Quorum.

All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Crime prevention

This is Dick Fairbairn, crime prevention officer for the Cohasset Police Department. No police department can function effectively without the concerned assistance of responsible citizens. Fire Department has too few EMTs to staff town ambulance

The town's fire department doesn't have enough Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) to staff the ambulance.

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln alerted selectmen to the situation at last Wednesday's meeting.

To comply with state law, there must be two certified EMTs riding in the ambulance on every shift. State officials informed Lincoln last week that the department is in violation of state law and could be penalized $50 per day.

Ideally the department should be staffed with 16 EMTs, said Lincoln. There are currently 10 certified EMTs which include the captain and senior man who must supervise. Only eight men are available for the ambulance which Lincoln says is the department's busiest piece of apparatus.

In addition, Lincoln said that two firefighters recently completed refresher EMT courses but are not technically certified until the paperwork is finished. Lincoln hoped that the two men would be granted waivers so they would be eligible to ride the ambulance again.

With vacations, sick leave, and overtime, Lincoln told selectmen he needs four more certified EMTs. He estimated the initial costs of training four firefighters at $5,160 or $1,290 per man.

Classroom instruction would last four months which would be followed by a practical and written test. Lincoln said he has some men interested in enrolling in the course. "They were very responsive when I asked them," said Lincoln.

Lincoln was told by a state official to immediately submit a plan on correcting the staffing problem. Selectmen unanimously adopted two new policies which are directly related to the problem:

1. All newly hired firefighters shall be certified EMTs during their employment with the town. They should also be certified in CPR (heart massage).

2. All permanently employed firefighters are encouraged to become certified EMTs and in CPR.

The new policies will be included in the selectmen's policy handbook which was coordinated by Selectman Mary Jane McArthur last month.

Cohasset men finish Marathon

While television cameras were focusing on Alberto Salazar, three stalwart Cohasset runners had their minds on improvement.

The three men might not have made the top 25, but despite the heat they managed to show stronger strides than they had in previous tries.

For everyone in the 86th Boston Marathon couldn't be a winner. Finishing was the thing for many of the thousands of runners.

David Terry of Margin Street completed the 26 mile, 385 yard course in 3:34 last year. Monday's race marked his fourth time running the event.

David Bishop ran a 3:16 last year in Boston. In more recent action he finished the New Orleans Marathon in 3:09.

Dave Campbell ran in his third Boston Marathon. He was aiming for a three-hour finish.

On Saturday, Terry said he was hoping for a

Cohasset's fight against gypsy moth spray goes regional

The fight against the use of Sevin to spray kill gypsy moths went regional.

The local group that began fighting the plans to aerial spray with the chemical has joined groups from 11 other communities.

Billie Berents is one of the local residents who has been working to change the spray from a chemical known to kill bees and some other animals to a biological product, bacillus thuringiensis.

She points out that her group isn't against aerial spraying as much as it's against the use of Sevin.

The new and larger organization calls itself Concerned Parents of Southern Massachusetts.

The group is holding an informational meeting at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 26, at the Center Library in Pembroke to discuss the precautions that can be taken to protect pregnant women, grazing animals and bees from possible ill-effects of chemical spraying.

The group's stated belief is that chemical spraying, particularly from the air, is ineffective, wasteful of taxpapers' money and a potential danger to public health.

"Some government reports have warned of possible birth defects from the chemical Sevin and labels on bottles of Sevin state that animals should not be allowed to graze in areas that have been sprayed for seven days," the group's release states.

The meeting will include information on ways to protect trees from defoliation by simple, inexpensive methods.

Residents of Cohasset who want to prevent the spraying of their property with Sevin must send a form letter to selectmen by certified mail before May 1 and must attach flags of specific design to the corners of their property four feet above the tree tops.

Residents at the selectmen's meeting last Wednesday attacked the flag requirements to avoid being sprayed. The group said the guidelines were unreasonable and unfair.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle shuddered at the thought of residents climbing up trees to mount their flags.

"Oh, you'd have to have 100 ambulances and clear the hospitals to make room," he said.

The board said it would ask Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle and the spraying company if the rules to be excluded from the spraying could be eased.

Originally, residents thought that helium balloons could be an alternative to the flags.

Town Counsel maintains the town acted within the law in contracting C & W Ag-Air,Inc. to spray for gypsy moths with Sevin. Still, the group opposed to aerial control with Sevin has not given up hope.

Selectmen Chairman, Henry Ainslie read a letter aloud from Town Counsel Blake Thaxter to a dozen residents at the Board's meeting.

In that letter, Thaxter said that sufficient notice was given to voters regarding the aerial control project with Sevin which was approved by special Town Meeting in December.

More than 200 property owners want their land to be excluded from the helicopter's spray next month. As of last week, 165 residents had submitted letters opposing the spraying with Sevin to selectmen.

"This isn't a majority of the town, but it is a lot of people. I think it would be awfully hard to spray with all those areas to be passed over," said Linda Wakeman of the citizens group. With large number of landowners who want to be excluded from the aerial project, Wakeman hoped that C & W Ag-Air would back out - as happened in Hingham.

Actually, Wakeman said the citizens group is not opposed to the aerial spraying - they are only opposed to spraying with Sevin. There is an

Good draw at Deer Hill science fair

The crowd of parents at the Deer Hill Science Fair beamed - of course - while youngsters chattered about their accomplishments.

The Sixth Grade Science Fair is an annual success at Deer Hill. It was a success even last year when the work of vandals caused some disruption.

This year, the 123 entrants from Grade 6 put together some works of advanced thinking.

One mother was heard to complain that she was sure some parents did more than they should on the projects.

"These are very bright children," a woman close by replied.

There were winners in each of the seven categories. Many other projects seemed to be worthy of high praise.

Projects ranged broadly. There were displays on solar energy, nuclear energy, computers, bees, ants, snakes of New England, letter press printing, rock 'n roll, football, the ocean, acid rain, the eruption of Mt. St. Helens, space shuttle, ultrasound, birth defects, warts, hypothermia, alcohol, peanuts, stress on air traffic controllers, sleep and dreams, child abuse, witches, weddings, Stonehenge and Eskimos.

Students participating in the fair had been working on their project for six weeks. Besides the fair display, written reports and an oral presentation were part of each work.

The categories available were: animals, arts and sports, earth and astronomy, medicine, miscellaneous, social studies and technology.

The winners are:

1st place - Michele Migliaccio, honey bees.

2nd place - George Sechen, beavers.

3rd place - Peter Sandblom, gypsy moths.

Honorable Mention - Marlisa Clapp, goats; Justin Hughes, snakes of New England; John Linsley, Cohasset's week ...

Merchants group to meet

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association, which is the merchants group, meets at 8 a.m. on the first Tuesday of every month at the Red Lion Inn.

Coast Guard extension

The Coast Guard is extending the comment period for the proposed termination of approximately 400 aids to navigation from the coastal areas of New England to July 4.

As a result of the extended comment period, none of the planned discontinuances of aids to navigation will be made before the 1982 boating season begins.

There are channel markers and buoys in Cohasset and Hingham affected.

Interested parties are invited to comment on these planned discontinuances. Comments should be submitted in writing on or before July 4, 1982 to Commander (oan), First Coast Guard District, 150 Causeway St., Boston, MA, 02114.

Rhodes charged

John J. Rhodes III was charged with contributing to the waywardness of a 16-year-old girl last week in Quincy District Court.

The complaint was lodged by the girl's mother. An innocent plea was entered for the Cohasset police sergeant and the case was continued to May 27 when a pre-trial conference will be held.

Midge control

Besides gypsy moth spraying, Cohasset selectmen are investigating plans for midge control of Straits Pond with the town of Hull.

Selectmen tabled a request for an $804 transfer to Hull for the spraying with the chemical Abate. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur asked how the chemical would be applied. Selectmen's executive secretary, Arthur Clark, said that Hull intends to use aerial spraying - helicopter.

McArthur said, "I'm not interested in spraying anything." The Board decided to table the matter and become familiar with the plans for combating the gnats.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said the Board would not transfer any money until "we get a chemical analysis" of Abate.

Political apologies

Selectman Rocco Laugelle's wife, Peggy, has our apologies. A printer's devil turned her name into Dotty last week in a story about Rocky's triumph.

And another apology goes out to Arne Gjesteby whose name was misspelled last week in the story about his wife's reelection to the school committee.

Mooring tax

Cohasset will be getting its share of the excise taxes for boats moored on the Scituate side of Cohasset Harbor this coming year.

Last year Scituate town meeting refused to hand over the taxes on the 60 plus boats on the Scituate side.

Cohasset has been providing the only services available to those boats. The ride from Scituate waters is too long for that town's fleet of harbormaster boats to manage to get nearby in an emergency.

The estimated value of the gesture is $1,500 a year.

Revaluation saga

There's a bill now pending before the legislature to bail out Cohasset and other communities that haven't completed the revaluation process.

According to Cohasset officials Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has worked diligently on the bill.

"It was concluded that the bill would pass more easily if it were not directed toward one town since there are many more affected that we were led to believe in our meeting of March 31 with the Department of Revenue," according to Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen.

He predicts the bill should go through the House rather quicly and on to the Senate where it will be followed by the district's senator.

While the bill seems vague upon reading the current redraft, it appears possible it would allow the town a chance at using the $225 valuation figure at issue in the nearly ended fiscal year.

The bill is a one year reprieve if it passes in this form. It talks about "best available information."

Midge money

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was able to have a line item inserted in the Capital Outlay Budget for the reconstruction of a new tidal gate for "Strait's Pond," which is bounded by Cohasset, Hingham and Hull. A new facility at Strait's Pond will aid in reducing the algae and midge nuisances.

"This line item remained in the Senate Supplementary budget as well. My appreciation has been expressed on behalf of my District to House Chairman of Ways and Means, Michael Creedon, House Ways and Means Vice-Chairman, M. Joseph Manning and Senate House Ways and Means Chairman Chester W. Atkins," concluded Murray.

Applications at VoTech

There are eight students from Cohasset who have applied at South Shore Vocational Technical High School. Right now there are only six Cohasset students attending the school.

Anti-Litter Day

Don't forget Saturday, April 24, is Anti-Litter Day.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. townspeople will be working on the pick up trash campaign.

Trash bags will be provided for groups and coordinators at the Cohasset Community Center until noon.

Coordinators for the day are: Charles Piepenbrink, Merle Brown and Jane Nash.

Litter that is picked up should be deposited near telephone poles in tied bags and will be picked up by trucks and vans on these streets: North and South Main, Beechwood, Forest Ave., Jerusalem Road, Atlantic Ave., Border St., Milliken Field, Pond St., Cushing St., Beach St. and Sohier St.

If you do not live on these streets where there is the most traffic, we hope you will cooperate by picking up litter on your own lots and in the empty spaces between houses.

May Day celebration

The Friends of the South Shore Conservatory invites the public to celebrate May Day at their annual Fair to be held under the tent at the Conservatory, Saturday, May 1 from 11 a.m to 3 p.m. The Conservatory is located off Fort Hill St. in Hingham.

There will be many attractions for young and old to help make it a family affair. There will be a Maypole dance by members of the kinderchor under the direction of Margo Euler.

The Shoestring Players will make a presentation directed by Ellen Kelly. Many ensembles consisting of students of the Conservatory will play throughout the Fair.

At noon there will be a children's costume parade.

White elephants, used book and music, plants, baked goods, t-shirts, and musical accessories will be for sale as well as hot dogs, pretzels, beer, wine and soft drinks at the "Rathskellar."

Added features of this year's Fair will be a raffle and the auction of a piano. Items to be raffled are "A Table at the Boston Pops" for the coming season, two weeks of sailing lessons with the Lincoln Sailing Club, tickets for two to the South Shore Music Circus, tickets for two to the Boston Symphony Youth Concert Series for the 1982-83 season, a gift certificate from Talbot's in Hingham, and a gift certificate from Hugo's Restaurant in Cohasset.

Raffle tickets are $1 each and are available from members of the Friends Committee and will be available on the day of the Fair.

There will be an auction of a Haines baby grand piano that has been appraised at $2500.

This could be an opportunity for a great bargain.

All proceeds from the Fair, raffle, and auction will go to the scholarship fund of the Conservatory.

President of the Friends is Barbara Bliss of Cohasset.

Jean Lubrano is chairperson of the fair, assisted by Mary Walther. Both are Hingham residents.

Terry said he had readjusted his eating habits over the past week in hopes of absorbing extra carbohydrates for the race. He said the 20-mile mark is the toughest point on the course. It is where many people experience symptoms of the wall.

Selectmen's briefs...

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Barbara Gurnis from the Arts Lottery Committee last week. Gurnis was chairman of the committee.

The Cohasset Youth Athletic Association was granted a seasonal common victualer license from selectmen last week. The board's vote was unanimous, 3-1, and the license to sell food is from April 24 to July 31.

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln was appointed to the Building Code Survey Board by selectmen last week. Lincoln replaces Charles Piepenbrink, who retired as fire chief last month.

The Bonnie Leone case lingers on

By Patricia Desmond

Twenty years ago in a nearby town, a beautiful young woman was permanently disabled in an auto accident two juries declared was not her fault.

Despite huge awards by both of those Plymouth County juries, Bonnie Leone lives under the guardianship of her mother, able to collect minimum Social Security.

The amount owed her under the latest jury award is well over $1 million.

Hanover's Gerald Williamson is ready to argue her plight before the State Supreme Judicial Court if necessary.

The case - according to the documents - is now against the insurance company of the driver determined by civil court to be at fault. The case is complicated, quite legalistic and so old most of the key figures have dropped out of the picture.

Bonnie's original case wasn't brought by Atty. Williamson. He happens to be the third lawyer taking her part. Some principals have died, others have been replaced. Bonnie's mother worries she will die before the situation is resolved.

Bonnie's first lawyer won an award of $650,000 back in 1967 against the late Sonny McDonough, whose governor's councillor plates were on the other car; the late Richard Doran of Dorchester, driver of that other car, and John Ridge of Cohasset, in whose name that other car was registered and insured.

Her first lawyer subsequently lost his right to practice at the bar over another case.

The State Supreme Judicial Court overturned that award, ordering a new trial and dismissing the case against McDonough on technical grounds.

When the second civil trial came up in 1978 at Brockton, the jury heard the arguments of Atty. Williamson, the testimony of eye witnesses, Bonnie, several family members and Doran.

It made an award of $650,000 against Doran. No award was made against Ridge.

Doran was working for the MDC and not in a position to pay anything toward the award. The car he was driving carried $5,000 and $10,000 coverage through Security Insurance of Connecticut, a company that no longer issues policies in this state. After the trial, Doran signed off his right to appeal the award and signed over his right to sue the insurance company to Bonnie.

Atty. Williamson began legal proceedings to recover the judgement from the out-of-state company. By that time, interest had mounted and Bonnie was owed $1.3 million. That all happened before Christmas in 1978. Little has happened in court since then.

In January, 1979, Doran died in a one-car crash on Route 3.

In May that year, the lawyer for the insurance company filed a motion to dismiss Bonnie's case. Judge Robert Prince who presided over the second trial heard the arguments on the motion and took it under advisement for the next two years.

Last year Judge Prince issued his opinion and ordered the case dismissed.

Williamson appealed. He said he hopes the matter can move directly to the State Supreme Judicial Court for a review. His other hope is that the high court will order the matter to go to trial.

If the insurance company is let off the hook, Bonnie has no hope of receiving damages.

Bonnie was a veritable beauty queen back in 1962. She had worked as a model and as a fashion buyer. But on August 11, that year, she was working nights at a restaurant in Marshfield getting ready for her planned wedding.

The shop is a joint effort of the Bound Brook Artisans who are a group of 40 craftspeople specializing in a wide variety of items. Ellie Waal of Old Pasture Road, shop manager, notes that special care is made to insure the quality of the merchandise that will be available in the shop by setting up a quality control committee to review each item as it is submitted.

The shop will be divided into three areas - one for children, one for adults and the third for classes and demonstrations. "We're hoping to make it a lively place," says Ellie. Because the cooperative, itself, is non-profit, she explains, the prices for the crafts will be lower than those at a regular retail store. Further information about the cooperative is available by calling Ellie at 383-6882.

☐Congratulations to Mr. Becker who is the Musician of the Month, at the Deer Hill School.

☐The TV show, The Price is Right, is a popular program with many local viewers and will be especially so on Friday, April 30 at 11 a.m. when Monica O'Brien, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien of Pond St., will appear on the show.

Because the show is pretaped, her family and friends will be spared the suspense of watching her compete in the game. They already know she was a winner and a big one at that - $3,000 and several large household items, including a range and a custom designed bar. Monica, a graduate of Cohasset High School, is now living in Santa Barbara, California.

☐The Autumn-Spring Tea given by the Harborview Tenants Association recently was a big success and we heard the hall at 60 Elm St. looked beautiful with its yellow decorations. The refreshments, which included sandwiches, tea and cookies, were especially delicious and there was more than enough for everyone.

The committee responsible for the tea includes Florence Goldberg, chairman, and Gertrude Stoughton, Shirley Laidlaw and Genevieve Jones.

☐I had to check to make sure last Friday was not the 13th because it certainly seemed that way, at least for me anyway.

Things rapidly degenerated from bad to worse and finally culminated with my being inadvertently separated from my purse and car keys - their being locked in the trunk of my car and my trying at the same time to figure a way to beat the school bus home. For future reference, the police are unable to help with locked trunks, but locksmith George Haley is and did.

My first attempt to reach George was not successful and I had to leave a message on his answering service and, considering my luck that day, it was answered quite quickly. Turns out, that he was busy addressing the Old Goats on locks at a luncheon meeting in Scituate.

In a short time, thanks to George, I once again had my purse, keys and car and some very good advice on how to prevent a reoccurence. Always have a spare set of keys, says George, & I do, but they were in my purse, which was in my trunk). Give them to a neighbor or keep them at work. Also, put your key number, which is on the car's bill of sale, on the last month for each year on your calendar. George lives on Pleasant Street and his number is 383-1032, if you should ever need him.

☐As a result of articles in Around Town, Mrs. Frances Antione now has received many offers to drive her home from her dialysis treatments at the Kidney Center, 1055 Commonwealth Avenue. She is still in need of drivers once a month on any Monday, Wednesday or Friday and will wait for anyone who would like to pick her up on their way home from work. You can reach her at 383-0288.

☐The party invitations arrived at just about the same time as our most recent blizzard, but Dan and Judy Volungis' Spring Fling this past weekend, turned out to be a delightful initiation to that time of year we've all been waiting for.

The potted flowers which had been placed throughout the Volungis' home served as pleasant reminders of spring. Judy's bright skirt and matching jersey, too, certainly was a nice change from the winter clothes we've all become tired of wearing.

The drinks and hors d'oeuvres were prepared and served by Judy and Peter Keim, who had donated their services to a recent church auction for which Judy, in the foresightedness for which she is well known, had outbid all others. The buffet which included lobster newburg and Dan's special salad was delicious and Dee DeSantis' Baklava was so good that many of us opted to forget our diets for another piece.

Parents Anonymous begins here

"I remember thinking about being a social worker from about age 10..." says Ellen Feingold, who will soon be acting as professional sponsor for the new Parents Anonymous chapter beginning in Cohasset on Tuesday, April 27.

But because she thought that she needed to accumulate more maturity and life experience than she had in her early twenties, Feingold worked with learning disabled children for several years before returning to graduate school in social work.

Feingold now holds Master's degrees in both guidance and social work from Harvard University and Simmons College, respectively. She first became interested in P.A. about three years ago when she began to see more and more parents who were actually abusive or feared that they could be. Some of the similarities she saw in these clients included an emotionally deprived childhood, a sense of isolation without supportive family and friends, and, surprisingly, a deep investment in the well-being of their children with a strong desire to be good parents. "Their intentions, wishes and dreams for their children are similar to those of any parent, if not more so. They simply don't have the inner resources to work on them...If your bank account is empty, you have nothing in reserve for yourself or anyone else. This is where Parents Anonymous comes in."

Parents Anonymous is a self-help group originally begun in California in 1969 by a parent. There are now more than thirty chapters in Massachusetts, with new groups forming all the time. The major goal of the weekly chapter meetings is to foster positive self-esteem among its members, to help them feel more personally competent with an increased ability to deal with stress. As professional sponsor, Ms. Feingold will take a "back seat" in the group situation and serve more as a professional resource to the chairperson, who will emerge from the group members and assume the task of active leadership of the meetings.

Feingold feels that a therapist can never be supportive in the particular way that a group of parents with similar struggles can be. "I couldn't offer the hope that's available in a group where members can see others who've been where they are and have made progress...No matter how supportive, caring, and warm a therapist is, there's something inherently unequal about the relationship between a professional and a client...Often abusive parents carry with them the idea that there exist perfect people who have everything under control and know all the answers, and the therapist becomes the symbol of this idea. This is where Parents Anonymous can make such a difference. It's much harder to hold onto this fantasy when you're in a group with others at different stages of your own struggle. You can't so easily relinquish the idea that you can take control, that you do have strengths, that you can be a better parent, when you are surrounded by seven or eight approximate mirror images of yourself...I look forward to being part of a new P.A. group which offers parents a chance to realize and experience those valued but hidden parts of themselves they never believed existed."

The First meeting of a new chapter serving the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth will be Tuesday, April 27, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. with child care and transportation available. For further information, please call the central Parents Anonymous office at 1-800-882-1250.

King criticized

The plan for state aid for Cohasset under the formula proposed by Gov. Edward King cuts the town's bit of state revenue.

This is not the way to go.

Every community in the commonwealth was entitled to know its cherry sheet numbers, according to state law, before now.

The best available plan was to assume level funding and accept an excess as bounty. To have based the budget, already adopted, on the concept of a loss would have seemed foolish.

The idea that a governor in the process of a reelection campaign would dare to issue figures showing a decrease in state aid is almost enough to believe the man wants none of that community's vote.

Such a reward would serve him well — unless the governor is ready to take a very active role in correcting such a faux pas, advocating that his department of revenue communicate more more adequately ahead of time on the guidelines for revaluation, demanding that his department of revenue help work through the revaluation project, and provide other visible attentions.

Perhaps the governor isn't interested in a community where nearly half the voters turn out for a municipal election. Perhaps the governor isn't interested in communities of affluence. Perhaps he feels like a Robin Hood distributing the local aid fund.

We suggest he could make more reductions in the state bureaucracy that would provide level funding in state aid for towns like Cohasset where levy is at a stage where increase is possible as well as increased funding for the poorer communities that will be forced to drastically reduce tax levy.

We think it might be a good idea to begin a layoff of top level administrators in almost every department of state government. We've never heard a complaint about too few people at the top of state government.

Moth killer

It would seem the selectmen can and should do better than to accept the regulations of the company that holds the contract to spraying the town with gypsy moth killer.

How is anyony to put a flag four feet above the top of trees that may be 150 feet tall?

Will the town have the few EMT's left spending the next few weeks zipping about picking up the pieces of the tree climbers? Or would the town like to see that the fire department ladder truck goes into temporary special service bolting up the flags?

We believe the regulations are a ridiculous attempt to make it impossible to eliminate any property in town from the Sevin spray.

We wonder whether the Water Department will be obliged to paste up flags around the borders of its property. Will the trustees of reservations send crews on the road to circle its land in orange fluorescent burlap?

If there's no way to better distinguish between property owners who want the spraying done and others who believe it may be harmful, it would seem only logical to scrap the whole project.

Recreation revolver explained

By John Worley
Recreation Director

Commentary

To date, the first nine months of this fiscal year, there have been approximately 5,300 individuals who have participated in various Recreation Department programs, activities and special events.

The total Recreation Department budget for this current year, FY 1982, is $34,051. This figure is the total figure for the director's salary, all program salaries, and all operating expenses.

The Recreation Department has been very fortunate to have a large number of volunteers. During the first nine months of this year there have been over 100 adults and students alike who have offered their services conducting such programs as basketball leagues, soccer clinics and league, and the street hockey league. Their services have been the difference between being able to conduct the programs. All residents of Cohasset owe these men, women, girls and boys a vote of thanks for helping make Cohasset the fine community that it is.

Aside from the Recreation budget, the department has also been able to utilize a "Revolving Account Fund" for a few programs. The general concept of this fund is a good one, however, the restrictions placed on its use are severe and preclude the use of the fund for many programs. There is a $5,000 maximum that can be revolved each fiscal year which restricts use of the fund.

However, the most severe restriction is that salaries cannot be paid from this fund. Ninety to 100 percent of the cost of most recreation programs are the personnel salaries. Some specialized programs can be conducted through the Revolving Account Fund under certain specifications. That is, if an instructor can be found who could be considered a "Contracted service." It remains difficult to find instructors who meet the basic requirements of contracted services. To date there has been a total of $3,633.35 transacted from the fund for six programs that could not have otherwise been held.

Also, a few programs such as ski trips and skating lessons have been conducted by direct payment to the individual vendors involved. In this manner another 332 individuals were afforded group rates for skating lessons, ski trips, and a white water rafting expedition. The Recreation Department acts as coordinator and provider of the programs but does not have to become involved with any financial burdens of the programs.

The important aspect of a Revolving Fund is that specialized programs may be conducted, even those of relatively high per capita cost, with no cost to the taxpayer. That is, no budget money is used.

During our recent Town Meeting an article was passed to give the Town of Cohasset, on behalf of the Recreation Commission, the right to directly petition the General Court in the hopes of attaining a new type of Revolving Fund, known as a Recreation Fund. If permission is granted and Town Meeting, once again, approves the legislation, the Recreation Department could open an account, or fund if you will, where fees collected from programs could be used to conduct programs. The most important aspect of the new fund as opposed to the existing fund, is that salaries could be paid from the fund. Also, there is no limit as to how much money can be revolved each fiscal year. Hence, the ability to conduct programs of varying types becomes limited only by space and facilities to house programs, and not as it is now by a severely restrictive budget and restrictive revolving fund.

Programs, then, would be supported by program users in regard to those programs which would be conducted through the fund. The budget money would allow the department to continue to conduct a variety of programs. The money taken in from fees from the budget programs, over $8,000 last year, would, as usual, be turned into the general fund of the town and be used to help offset the tax rate in the next fiscal year.

Concerns raised over the use of a "Recreation Fund" centralize around the fact that this type of fund may set a precedent and other departments may also seek approval for such a fund. This may or may not be the case.

However, in any case, each town department who does seek use of such a fund would have to follow the same route as the Recreation Commission. That is, approval from Town Meeting, direct approval from the General Court, and acceptance from Town Meeting again. Perhaps each department should be judged on its own merits in this matter.

While Proposition 2½ has cut back funding to town departments in general, it has slashed deeper into some departments more than others. The initial phases of Proposition 2½ cut 15 percent out of an already very small Recreation budget. We are currently faced with a total budget for an entire department at about the same level of funding as a few individual town employee salaries. Hence, creativity becomes a must and various methods of certifying survival become imminent.

'Dear Lord, care for them all'

By Claire McDonough

The choir is singing "Come Holy Ghost" and I'm craning my neck for a glimpse of him.

There he is, walking solemnly beside his father. They both look so handsome. Oh, Lord, don't let me cry. He'll be embarrassed. Why am I crying already?

This has to be some kind of a rite of passage. My youngest, and he's being confirmed. This is the ninth time I have watched one of my children take a giant step out of my arms and into the world.

Bishop Hart is talking now. He's obviously deeply religious, but he's also down to earth. The kids are paying close attention. You can see they know what he means. He's talking about St. Francis of Assissi.

How many people know that Skipper's real name is Francis? Does Skip realize how fitting this homily is for him? Dear Lord, let me stop crying. Why do I always cry at sacraments?

They are standing, now, and they are repeating promises after the bishop. My youngest, my baby is promising to take responsibility for his own life. He's only 14, Lord. He's not quite 14. Eight others have done this before him. They have stood there looking solemn in their new clothes and their robes and they have taken responsibility for their futures.

Dear Lord, care for them all.

Now the bishop is annointing his forehead. Skipper is taking the name "John" in honor of his father.

"John," the bishop is saying, "be sealed with the Gift of the Holy Spirit."

Skipper replies, "Amen."

The bishop shakes his hand and says, "Peace be with you."

Skipper's voice is firm. "And also with you," he replies.

Help him, Lord. Help them all. Mary Claire, so full of vitality. Reaching out for life with both hands.

Jay. Born with a sense of wonder that he never lost. A curiosity that can never be satisfied.

Eileen, so noble, so brave. A fine mind and a generous heart.

Maureen. A rebel and a mystic. A giver with a loving nature.

Kevin. As affable as a puppy. A friend to everyone in the world.

Patrick. A troubador, reaching out with his songs for the essence of truth.

Larry. Quick to laugh, and as quickly wounded. Like the world of nature that is so dear to him.

Breida. Warm and witty. Kind hearted and sensible. A truly good person.

And Skipper. A premature baby who was not expected to live. Now so full of zest and excitement. So vulnerable.

They are all questers, Lord. They are all seekers. Please, may they find what they seek in You.

The newly confirmed are leaving now. Their firm young voices are raised, and they are singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." "I have read a fiery gospel," they sing, "Writ in burnished rows of steel."

I wipe my eyes, and I hope no one is looking at me. In a minute now, I will stop crying. We will go outside, and we will hug and kiss. We will shout, "Congratulations!" and tell each other that it was a beautiful ceremony. Then we'll go home, and have a party. Skipper will cut the white cake with the silver cross on it.

I will laugh with the rest, but I will know that the youngest of my children is now in Your hands, and his own. All of my children are. But really, weren't they always?

For now, forgive my rambling. You know I always cry at sacraments.

Cohasset's fight against gypsy moth spray...

alternative the group is trying to convince selectmen to spray with a product they say is safer, Bacillus thuringiensis.

Since town counsel's opinion ruled that the Special Town Meeting warrant was properly worded for a vote to spray with Sevin, selectmen said they were obligated to carry out the decision of town meeting. The Board said that if residents petitioned for a special town meeting, a gypsy moth article warrant could be brought before voters once again.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur opposes the spraying but said, "My duty as selectman is to carry out the mandate of the town meeting whether I agree with it or not...the December vote was based on the intent to use Sevin, and that can only be changed by a special town meeting."

Wakeman said the citizen's group would not go the route of petitioning for special town meeting because of the time constraints and cost involved.

"We feel it's virtually impossible to get a town meeting in time...we're afraid we'd lose our whole purpose," she said.

It would cost the town between $1,000 - $1,500 to hold a special town meeting. Wakeman spoke for the citizens group, "We don't like the gypsy moths either," but the group hopes to convince selectmen that there is a safer alternative which the town should use. Perhaps selectmen should appoint a pesticide committee to study the products, she said.

The group has retained Gregor MacGregor, a Boston lawyer, to pursue the issue. Meanwhile, selectmen won't budge.

Gypsy moths are again on the selectmen's agenda for tonight's (Wednesday) meeting at town hall.

[Editor's Note: The following is the application, available at town hall, for exclusion from the chemical spraying planned for next month. Florescent orange flags of burlap or plastic on frames two feet by two feet must mark property so designated. The flags, as they may be called, must be four feet above the top of trees or on poles lashed to prevent wind damage. Free standing flags must be four feet above an abutting tree line to insure visibility. One flag must mark each corner, except in the case of an irregularly shaped lot or a lot with more than an acre, the maximum distance in between allowed would be 200 feet. Helium or air-filled balloons are not acceptable. Both the form completion and placement of flags are a must for exclusion.]

Balloons & growth at the Mariner

By Patricia Desmond

There were balloons flying from the Mariner sign and a parking lot filled with the chariots of readers.

It was a special birthday celebration — the Marshfield paper turned 10 years old.

Now that may not seem like a long time to you. After all the Hanover Mariner just turned six months and entered the world of paid subscription, but to David Cutler, the 38-year-old publisher, 10 years is the best he can do.

The idea of the Mariner was conceived long before the 16-page first Marshfield paper ever hit the streets. Cutler comes from the family that started the Duxbury Clipper. He likes to tell how he's been in the newspaper business in one way or another since he was 6. That's when his parents, John and Bobbi Cutler, began their own Clippership.

It's been 10 years of growth for the Mariners.

Norwell floated up the North River two years after the maiden voyage of the Marshfield. Three years later Cohasset and Scituate swam out together. A year ago last September Hingham rode into the bay. And the ship stopped off at Hanover in September.

By now Cutler would be embarrassed to put out anything as small as a 16-pager.

That's why the staff turned out wearing flowers in their hair and on their jackets. That's why the world seemed to stop for the Mariner last Friday.

Lois Martin, the general manager, was heard to say she would not tolerate anyone working on a day she deemed to be so special.

A few of the staff members typed a word here or there, pasted together an ad, typeset a story, filled out a computer card for a new subscriber or even answered a telephone.

Children with wide smiles could be seen leaving the Mariner building on Route 3A, Marshfield, holding ill-gotten helium balloons and gooey pastry.

Older people who tried to drop off a release or a message at the office were kidnapped temporarily so they could be forced to toast the first decade and chat with the staff.

Norwell's first and only editor, Bucky Yardume, was said to complain about the fact the party was interfering with his work.

Rene Donavan, the artist who works as production manager, accepted general praise for her paintings that covered the walls of the building.

Katherine Piel smiled a lot. One would have to guess she was happy not to be putting up the boards for the start of the Bellows Fall edition.

Jane Lane didn't get a chance to let the celebration interfere with her work. She showed up late — having sat through some town government meeting — but she still could be seen looking relatively happy.

Days of remembrance: the Holocaust

The week of April 18 through 25 is designated as the National Days of Remembrance of the victims of the Holocaust.

The same week also is National Library Week.

The two commemorations are coincidental. Yet, as in all things in the world, there are connections. Remembrance, for the human race, means to write and read memoirs and history.

The American public library movement is based on the premise that the defense of freedom and civil liberties requires a well-informed citizenry, whose liberties, including the right to read and to know, are practiced.

The United States Holocaust Memorial Council, established by the U.S. Congress in 1980, undertakes activities to keep in memory the millions of Jews murdered in the Nazi Holocaust, and to overcome prejudice and inhumanity.

The Council has issued a reading list, which may be seen on the library bulletin board. Among recommended books available at the library are:

The War Against the Jews 1933-1945, Dawidowicz. Shows that Nazis were more concerned with killing Jews than victory in World War II.

The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, Shirer. Perhaps the most comprehensive popular history.

Final Entries, 1945, Goebbels. Contains valuable insights into the workings of the Nazi mind.

Eyewitness Auschwitz, Muller. One of the most terrifying of eyewitness commentaries.

O The Chimneys, Sachs. Poetry.

Children of the Holocaust, Epstein. Conversations with sons and daughters of survivors.

The Terrible Secret: Hitler's Suppression of the Truth About Hitler's Final Solution, Laquer.

The Holocaust: The Destruction of European Jewry, Levin.

Of Blood and Hope, Pisar. An intimate account of an adolescence spent surviving the insanity of Auschwitz.

Minister of Death: The Adolf Eichmann Story, Reynolds.

Righteous Gentile: The Story of Raoul Wallenberg, Missing Hero of the Holocaust, Bierman.

Kudos Chief DeBassio

Letters

To the Editor:

Chief John DeBassio is to be complimented on the dramatic improvement in traffic conditions around the Town Common during and before town elections this year. Through his quiet leadership and the restraint exercised by the candidates in not using large vehicles to advertise their names, traffic moved more easily, parking was facilitated and other activities around the Common were not disrupted.

A warm vote of appreciation is in order to all who cooperated to make this change possible.

Retiring firemen honored

A banquet and dance for Deputy Chief Thomas W. Hernan, Firefighters Ralph Perroncello, Ernest J. Sullivan, and Willliam L. Nickerson honoring their recent retirements from the Cohasset Fire Department will be hosted by the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804.

The occasion will be held at Dreamwold, 74 Branch St., Scituate, on Friday, May 14. Cocktail hour will begin at 7 p.m. with dinner to follow at 8:15 p.m.

The dinner, catered by Farrelly Caterers, will be family style roast beef and turkey with all the trimmings. Music for your enjoyment will be furnished by "The Emanons" with dancing until 1 a.m.

Tickets are $17 per person and are available at the Cohasset Fire Department Headquarters, 44 Elm St. Tickets may be reserved by sending a check payable to "C.P.F. Local 2804," to 44 Elm St., Cohasset, 02025.

Reserved tickets may be picked up at the door. For more information or questions please call the Cohasset Fire Department at 383-0261.

We seem to remember there was a promise to voters at the special town meeting where funds were appropriated that a system would be devised to exclude unwilling participants.

We think the system as developed by Ag Air is a joke.

Emerson remembered

The First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Churches of Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell, and Scituate will combine for an unusual joint Worship Service recognizing the centennial of the death of Ralph Waldo Emerson on Sunday, April 25 at 10:30 a.m. at the First Parish Church in Norwell. The service will include combined junior and senior choirs and short talks by the ministers of each church to illuminate the memory of this remarkable American.

Emerson's writings, outstanding examples of clear thinking, moral integrity, religious vision and elegant prose, are standards in schools. He was a Unitarian minister and lecturer and a leader of the Transcendentalist Movement, that group of inspired thinkers who in the 19th century made Concord one of the world's most respected intellectual centers.

The Unitarian-Universalist Churches remember Emerson as one of their most important builders. His inclusive religious faith and social concern, his respect for the individual and the necessity for constructive change have become hallmarks of this religious movement which had its American birth in New England.

Most towns in Massachusetts have First Parish Churches which became Unitarian in the 19th century as a result of the intellectual rebirth of which Emerson was a part. Today many, like the four churches in the area, continue their role as worshiping communities which value the development of individual belief and the necessity of vigorous social responsibility.

From play readings to production

By Robert Schultz and David Wadsworth

On the 21st day of January, 1921, a number of Cohasset residents gathered at the Unitarian Parish House on North Main St. to form a new Community Theatre group whose subsequent activities have become identified with amateur stage entertainment of the highest quality.

That winter's evening saw the beginning of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, now 61 years later, one of the oldest and best community theatre groups on the South Shore. This spring's production by the Dramatic Club will be the Ryerson and Clements three act comedy, "Strange Bedfellows."

It is the latest in a series of productions that began on May 26 and 17, 1921, with the comedy, "Nothing But the Truth."

That first Dramatic Club group formed in 1921, placed great emphasis on play readings rather than on full productions. The main difference between a play reading and a full production is that in the reading, lines do not have to be memorized, but may be read from the script. Another difference is that scenery and props are kept to a minimum or non-existent in a play reading. They are by nature informal presentations usually done for the enjoyment of club members themselves and their invited guests.

The Dramatic Club has scheduled a reading for its members this month, in addition to ongoing rehearsals for its spring production. Thus, the long tradition of play readings still exists. Back in 1921, on February 16, club members read John Drinkwater's play "Abraham Lincoln:" then on March 16, G.B. Shaw's play, "You Never Can Tell." These were followed by "Moonshine," "Too Much Drama," and "Uncle Amos" on April 20; then "The Rivals" in May of that same year. Following these, came the club's first full production, "Nothing But the Truth." During the same year other play readings were held, including dramatizations called "The Shadow of the Glen," "How He Lied to Her Husband," and "Suppressed Desires." In that first year of its existence, the Dramatic Club charged its members $1 for annual dues, and recorded 109 members, along with nine guests at 25 cents per head. "Nothing But the Truth" realized $517 in ticket sales. Other 1921 receipts and payments for the year balanced out to a total of $357.14 in the club's treasury at year's end. Not a bad beginning for the club's first year!

In 1923-24, membership was 101, and the price of tickets was $1 for the annual production. Guests paid 25 cents to attend play readings. Later on, for the 1936-37 season, the Dramatic Club changed to a more ambitious schedule of presenting three full-length plays each year, each to be "a finished production," according to the secretary's notes. By this time, emphasis had switched from play readings, limited to members and a few guests, to public performances on the Town Hall stage. The next season saw the formation of a full board of directors and the establishment of by-laws to govern the organization of the club. Clearly the Cohasset Dramatic Club had come of age by that time, and was ready to take its place among the principal community theatre groups in the South of Boston area.

During World War II, a junior dramatic was formed to help take over for the adults who were away. In 1944 the junior contingent itself staged "What a Life." In that year the club donated $25 to the Red Cross, and $50 to the Community Center. Later in 1952, a tradition of annual club scholarships was initiated for the benefit of Cohasset High School students. This tradition lasted for about 20 years.

Benefit performances were held to assist other community organizations. Today's high production costs and Town Hall rental fees make if difficult for the club to continue its traditional role as financial benefactor to the town's youth and to other community groups. However, the first night, or opening performance on Thursday of each play week, is open to senior citizens free of charge, and on that night students are admitted for only $1, thus the club's record of community service remains intact despite increasing financial demands. The statement of purpose of the Cohasset Dramatic Club has remained the same over the years. "A non-profit organization interested in the presentation of worthwhile shows for dramatic, charitable, and social benefit."

So come, and enjoy, this historic club's 1982 production: "Strange Bedfellows," scheduled for May 20, 21, and 22 at the Cohasset Town Hall, directed by Denise Ripley of Cohasset; production manager, Don Freiter of Scituate; and scenic design, Sheldon Ripley of Cohasset.

'Camelot' tickets still available

The musical "Camelot" by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Lowe, is in rehearsal by the Hingham Civic Music Theatre. Performance dates will be April 23, 24, 30 and May 1 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, April 25 at 2 p.m. (children must be accompanied by an adult).

Tickets are available at the Hingham Library and Book Store as well as from cast members. Tickets are $5 for evening performances and $3 for the Sunday matinee. For ticket information call Sandra Moore, 749-6419 or Ellen Bartolotti, 749-7894.

□Douglas Smith of Scituate was named Sailor of the Year recently by his squadron at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Smith is in the U.S. Naval Reserve stationed with HS1197SAR, according to his wife, Beverly who called the Mariner to let us in on the good news.

She said the squadron held a special inspection for the award presentation. Among the list of attributes mentioned in the award are praise for attention to detail, performance, and work toward the team effort that keeps the aircraft there maintained.

Cohasset teachers sponsor 11th Annual Ride-A-Bike

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the 11th Annual Ride-A-Bike from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, May 2. This is a state wide effort to raise funds to help the 160,000 retarded citizens through the work of the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens and its local affiliates.

All ages are welcome to participate either by riding, sponsoring a rider, or helping man checkpoints on the day of the ride.

Riders solicit sponsors from within the community who pledge the cyclists a predetermined amount of money per mile. After the ride, the contributions are collected by the participants from their sponsors.

Organized by the Massachusetts Teachers Association, the Ride-A-Bike has raised over $1.8 million since it began in 1972. Money raised through the Ride-A-Bike allows MARC to continue its many advocacy services for the Commonwealth's 160,000 mentally retarded children and adults. During this time of severe funding cutbacks in programs and services for the mentally retarded, riders are needed more than ever.

Interested riders may obtain forms from Mr. Plante, High School; Miss Beatson, Junior High; Miss Kent, Deer Hill; and Mrs. Tewksbury or Miss Volpe, Osgood School.

No. 1 Checkpoint — Atlantic Ave. at Margin St. Go all the way down Atlantic Ave. by Sandy Beach to Nichols Road —

No. 2 Checkpoint — Atlantic Ave. at Nichols Road (Sandy Beach) —

New PSO being formed

Members of the Cohasset schools Communication Councils are excited about the new Parent School Organization which is now in the process of being formed and they will meet at the home of Marge Izzo at 15 Old Coach Road to discuss nomination proceedures and publicity for the new organization. All interested parents are welcome to attend. The meeting is scheduled to begin Thursday at 8 p.m.

Sixth graders needed

A number of 6th graders who are willing to volunteer a couple of hours on Saturday, April 24, during the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., are needed to assist with Cohasset's anti-litter day.

If you are in the 6th grade and are willing to help during any part of Saturday, April 24. Please call the recreation office at 383-6791.

Also, parent volunteers are welcome.

Spring Book Fair at Osgood School

Parents of students at the Joseph Osgood School are invited to attend the Spring Book Fair in the library at the school on Thursday, April 29, and Friday, April 30, from 8:45 a.m. to 2:15 p.m.

On Monday, April 26, Osgood students will be bringing home a flyer describing the items available at the fair. A schedule of class visiting times will be attached so that parents may visit the fair with their children if they wish. Parents are welcome at the fair any time Thursday or Friday.

The supplier for the fair is the Bookport Shop in Hingham which is known for its fine children's books.

Winners of a poster contest promoting the fair were announced last Friday at the Osgood School last Friday. Winner of the Best in School Category was Peter Sheppard and runner-up was Josh Stevenson. First prize for the first grade went to Shona Hislop. The second grade winner was Kelly Chase and the third grade prize went to Tara Volungis. Each winner will receive a free book at the fair.

Honorable mentions were awarded to John Maynard, Anthony Bonnano, Doug Ellinger, Brian Brochu, Billy Murphy, Rebecca Kirk, Brian Connant, Sophie Redfield and Kristina Stevens.

Track teams breeze past Holbrook

By Donna Cogliano

Both the boys' and girls' track teams won their season openers versus Holbrook on Friday.

The meet took place at Norwell High School with Cohasset's David Rice, Steve Bowen, Karen Ekberg and Tina Birmann dominating the action.

The boys' squad rolled over the Bulldogs, 137-8 while the girls won by an 86-32 margin.

BOYS' TRACK

Rice, a sophomore, won four events. He finished first in the 100, 220, high jump and javelin events. He jumped 5'8" and threw the javelin 125 feet.

Senior Steve Bowen won the discus and shot-put events. Dan Bowen placed second in the javelin.

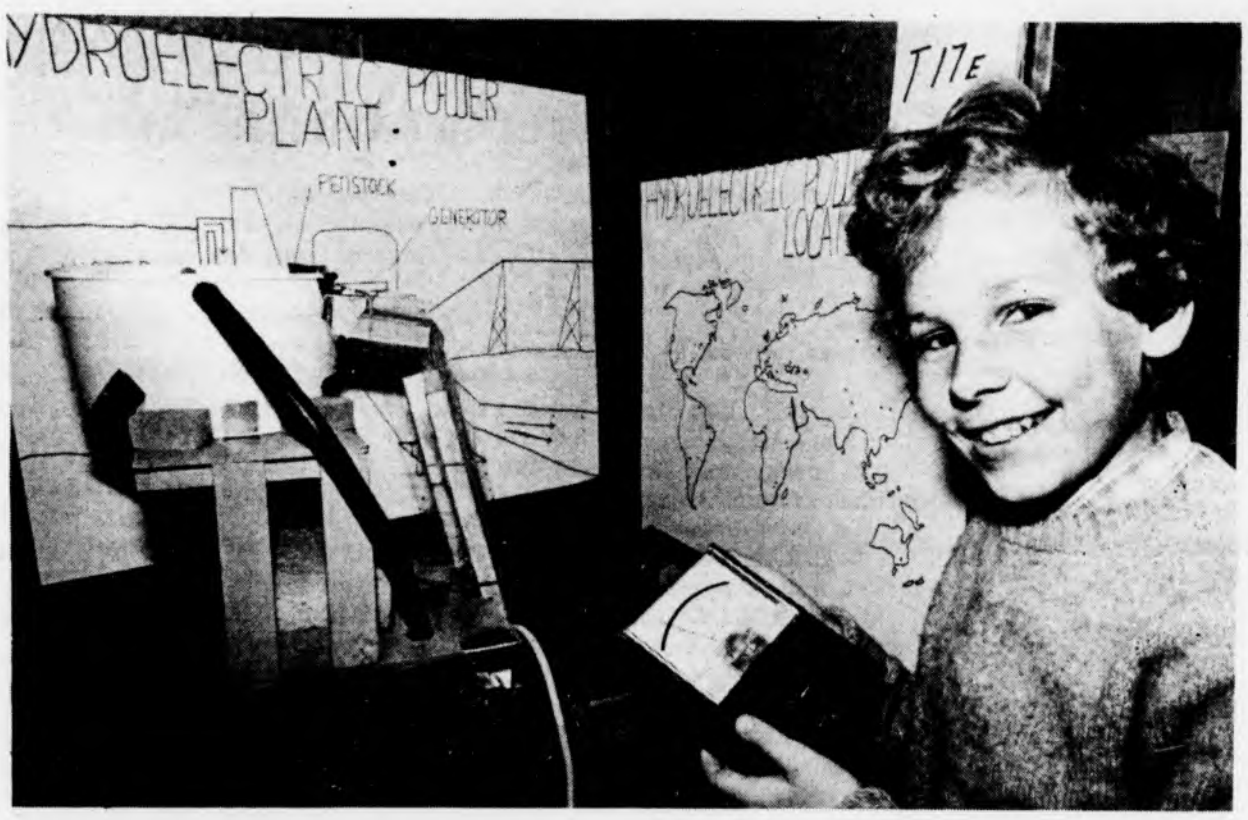
Tri-captain Mike Ellis won the mile event with a five minute finish. The senior also competed in the mile relay in which the Skippers won. He placed second in the triple jump and third in the high jump.

Junior Ron Bergenheim won the triple jump and placed second in both the low and high hurdles. Dan Bowen won the low hurdles while Chris Mahoney was winner of the high hurdles.

Tri-captain J.T. Price won the half-mile race with a 2:14 finish. He was third in the discus and contributed to the 440 relay win for Cohasset.

Sophomore Perry Harris captured the first place in the long jump with a distance of 17 feet, 10 inches. He placed third in the 100 and was a member of the Skippers' winning 440 relay team.

Tri-captain Chris McNab won the two-mile race with a 10:19 finish. Coach Charles Davis said the senior came within two seconds of breaking the school record.



Michael Laitta won the 440 in less than a minute, 59.0. Gordon Ricketts won the pole vault, clearing the bar at 10 feet.

GIRLS' TRACK

Tri-captain Tina Birmann won the 100 and the long jump. She also ran in the 440 relay which finished before the Holbrook relayers with a 55.0 time.

Junior Karen Ekberg won three events plus the 440 relay. She registered wins in the 220, high jump and discus events. Ekberg's winning discus toss was 85 feet, 10 inches.

Tri-captain Diane Gunnville was second in the 440. She also ran in the mile relay event which Cohasset won in 4:57.

Softball girls win their opener

By Donna Cogliano

In only four innings at bat, the girls' varsity softball team clobbered Southeastern Regional High School, 23-8, two weeks ago.

The softball squad managed to sneak in a non-league victory before the blizzard.

After Southeastern Regional batted in the top of the fifth inning, the game was halted by both coaches and umpires because it was extremely cold and so that SR could get a head start on a long bus ride home. The win is official for the Skippers since the contest had reached the fifth inning. It was called at 5:30 p.m.

Cohasset had a powerful start against SR and scored 12 runs in the first inning. Junior Gia Barresi belted a three-run home to deep left field in her second time at bat in the first inning.

Barresi, who is the catcher, also had a double and collected five RBIs.

Senior Liz Russell pitched the entire game and allowed eight hits and four walks. She had two hits for Cohasset. The Skippers collected 15 hits and nine walks off of SR.

Freshman Carla Lucas doubled and singled for three RBIs. She played at third base.

Senior Karen Froio is captain of the Skipper team. She played at shortstop and had two hits gainst SR.

Seniors Laura Hines, a second baseman, and Sara Froio, a right fielder, also had two hits each for Cohasset.

Senior Stacy Thompson scored three runs and knocked in two. She is a center fielder and was named to the South Shore League's all-star team last year. Coach Bill Fallon said Thompson is one of the best outfielders in the league. She is also the leadoff batter.

Fallon credited the Cohasset win toward superior bunting and base running. "We didn't play a great game...we can do better, but we did what we had to do," said Fallon.

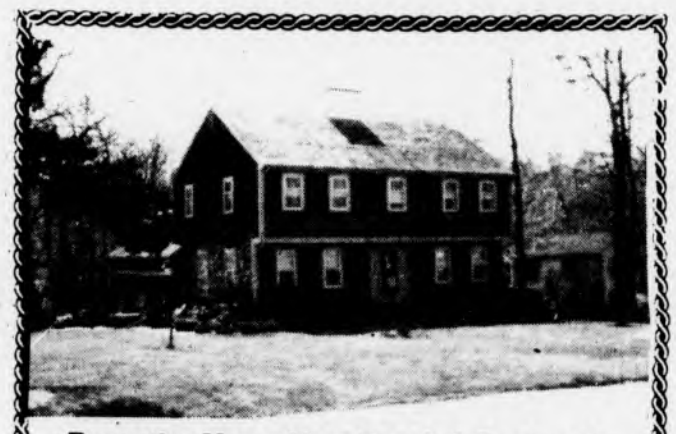
Southeastern Regional scored four runs in both the third and fifth innings. Cohasset's other strong inning (besides the first) was the fourth inning, in which they accumulated eight runs.

Last year the girls finished 8-8 in the SSL and 9-11 overall. Fallon is expecting the team to do fairly well this season. He said that six of the eight losses last year were by margins of two runs or less.

Senior Laurie Sandblom, one of the league's top batters will be the Skipper's designated hitter this year. Senior Madeline Roy is also expected to hit strong for Cohasset. She played first base and batted .448 during five preseason scrimmages.

Freshman Janet DiGirolamo is back to protect left field. She started in left last year as only an eighth grader. Fallon said Janet is one of the best defensive outfielders in the league.

Sophomore Kim Wittet, a third baseman, will also do some relief pitching. Junior Kristin Wilkin is an infielder and will play at either second or third base. Senior Jacqui Goyette and junior Nancy Kuntz are outfielders. Goyette is also a backup pitcher while Kuntz might also play at first base.



There are eight seniors on the squad. The girls resumed with that schedule last week.

The Skippers beat Duxbury, 9-7 and Middleboro, 5-2. East Bridgewater edged Cohasset 8-6.

Cohasset is 3-1 overall and 2-1 in the South Shore League.

THE SUMMER OF THE SWANS By Betsy Byers

The Summer of the Swans

The "Summer of the Swans" is very sad.

A boy named Charlie is retarded. He has a sister Sara and Wanda.

One day Sara and Charlie went to see the swans. Charlie did not want to go. Finally he left.

In the night he thought he heard a swan so he went outside. He could feel a strange feeling pulling him. He tried to find the lake but instead he got lost.

Sara found him in the woods after a long time.

Kelly Combs

How to Eat Fried Worms

This is an exciting but gross book about a boy who has to eat 15 worms in 15 days in order to win a bet. Can he eat 15 worms in 15 days? If you want to find out, read "How to Eat Fried Worms" by Thomas Rockwell.

Amy Lincoln

The Cricket in Times Square

A cricket named Chester found two friends, a cat and mouse. Mario, the boy who found the cricket, has a newstand.

They are not doing well in the business until the cricket makes music with his wings and makes success for the newsstand.

Amy Sheppard

The Summer of the Swans

The first 14 years of Sara's life were really all right.

Her brother, Charlie, is mentally retarded. Sara's sister doesn't like talking about his problem. Charlie runs away. Read this fascinating book by Betsy Byers to see what happens.

Erin Hunt

The Hobbit

This book was terrific. All the parts were dangerous or intriguing. It was the best book I ever read.

Daniel Bliss

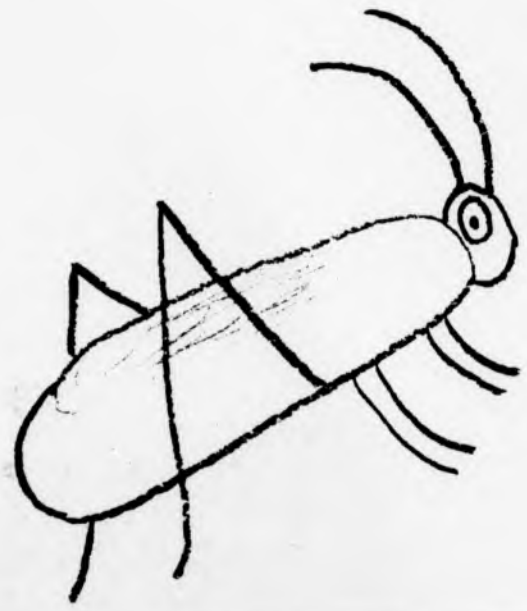
Adventures of Huckleberry Finn

I really liked this book because it tells about early America. And it has two people who have adventures together.

Jay Staunton

Lizard Music

This book is stupendous. Some parts were weird, but still it was great. It was the funniest book I have ever read.



Danny Cox

The Iceberg Hermit

I thought this book intriguing. It's about a man who gets shipwrecked in the Artic. To find out how he survives seven years in the Artic, read "The Iceberg Hermit" by Arthur Roth.

Abbie Barrett

THE CRICKET in Times Square

The Cricket in Times Square

This book was fantastic. It is about a boy that finds a cricket and keeps it in a cage. A mouse and a cat find the cricket and they all have alot of adventures with each other.

Julie Nussdoffer

Avalanche!

This is a thrilling, suspenseful story about a boy who gets caught in an avalanche. It was very exciting. Read it to find out if he survives.

Felecia Bartow

Sounder

I recommend this book because I thought it was extremely exciting. I think you will like this story because it's about a dog and a man. The man gets sent to jail for stealing, and the dog gets shot by a bullet. I think you will like this book if you like exciting adventure stories.

Chris Frioi

The Bonnie Leone case lingers on . . .

She drove along Route 3A in Scituate, about 2 a.m., heading back to her mother's home. At the intersection of Booth Hill Road and Route 3A, her car was in collision with one driven by Doran.

Today there's a blinking yellow light overhanging that intersection. In 1962, there was none. There was, however, a stop sign on Booth Hill Road. One witness said the Doran car ran the stop sign. A woman who was in Doran's car testified he stopped not once but twice. The accounts of the testimony differed on what happened after the accident as well as the actual account.

There was testimony that Doran had been drinking before the accident. His own testimony was that he had two drinks over the course of the evening.

Bonnie lingered in a coma for months after the crash.

At 41, Bonnie is dependent on her mother's care. At 68, her mother, Veronica Cadose, is still able to care for her.

"But I don't know how long I'll live," Mrs. Cadose said in a telephone interview. "I don't know what would happen to Bonnie if I weren't there to care for her."

After the accident, a Marine sergeant who was the young woman's fiance stayed at her mother's side. The family hasn't heard from the sergeant in years.

Bonnie never married. She suffered brain damage experts testified will be permanent. She has no sight in one eye and five percent vision in the other. She can't taste very much and can't smell anything.

Her mother said she still suffers seizures.

Prolonged use of a medication to control the seizures resulted in her losing all her teeth and created skin problems.

Of course, Mrs. Cadose would like to see the case settled and Bonnie provided for.

Bonnie has been doing better in recent years. At the time of the civil trial three years ago, she was learning to knit.

Williamson says Bonnie will need nursing home care when her mother is unable to watch over her.

"The premise of the case is that the insurance company should be held liable because of their handling of the case," Williamson summarized.

He said he is charging that negligence on the part of the insurance company affected the outcome of the case.

The insurance company paid a lawyer named Timothy Donohue to handle the original civil trial. After losing that case, the company hired Eli Fleishman to continue the case, then under appeal.

Necessary briefs were not filed in time for a Supreme Judicial Court review about the time of the change of attorneys.

The technicalities continue to multiply in a case filled with technicalities from the start.

And Bonnie and her mother continue to live as they have for the past 20 years. The young woman is no longer so young. She is no longer the lovely creature who won beauty contests and athletic events. She no longer has hope of employment.

Mrs. Cadose cares for Bonnie and hopes the future will finally bring more than a technical win in the drawn-out court fight.

Shakespeare on the S. Shore

"Light-Hearted fun for the entire family," Shakespeare on the South Shore — something new and different from Judy Hardy.

Judy is producer and musical director of "The Taming of the Shrew," the latest production of the New North Church's Elizabethan Companie of Wayts and Players. The show is set for the end of April and early May.

The play will have six performances in Hingham, Friday, Saturday and Sunday (April 30, May 1 and 2) and the following Friday, Saturday and Sunday (May 7, 8 and 9). The two Sunday performances are matinees and will begin at 2 p.m.

The Friday and Saturday performances will start at 8 p.m. All are at the New North Church, 1 Lincoln St. (across from the Lincoln statue).

Easter egg hunt

The Recreation Department will conduct this year's Easter Egg Hunt on Thursday, April 22 at 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School (vacation week).

The rain date will be Friday, April 23 at 1 p.m.

The Easter Egg Hunt is for children ages 3-11 years; groups will be broken down as follows: 3-5 year olds; 6-8 year olds; and 9-11 year olds.

Younger children should be accompanied by an adult or older responsible sibling. All children should report to the area that depicts their age by the sign.

This year's Easter Egg Hunt is made possible through the Cohasset Rotary Club and the American Legion, Post 178 (George H. Mealy).

Open House

A wine and cheese open house and annual meeting will be held at the Community Center of Cohasset at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 26. All members are invited to attend.

Decorator's Show House

Elm Bank at 900 Washington St., Wellesley, is the site of the 12th annual Decorators' Show House, sponsored by the Junior League of Boston, Inc.

The doors will open April 25 for three weeks, seven days a week. Proceeds from the house fund the 16 community service projects sponsored by the League in the area.

In addition to the 40 decorators who transform the house, Show House has two other attractions. The boutique in an adjacent tent has 150 consignors offering their unique, quality hand-crafted items for sale. The Cafe Pineapple is decorated in a Victorian motif. Serving light lunches and dinners, salads, desserts and coffee, a stop at the Cafe Pineapple is always welcome.

The Show House will be open from April 25 to May 16, Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 6 to 8:30 and Sunday afternoons 1 to 4.

Tickets are $7 at the door. No children under eight or photographic equipment are allowed. For additional ticket information you may call 431-7205.

Reservations are still being accepted for the Cohasset Community Center's bus trip to the Decorators Showcase on Wednesday, April 28, from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. The trip to the Elm Bank mansion in Wellesley is $10 and includes the cost of the bus and admission. For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

House & garden tour

Cohasset in the Spring, a house and garden tour, will be sponsored by the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association on May 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Tickets are now available for this welcoming in of springtime, which features some of Cohasset's charming homes, as well as one of its historic landmarks.

Your house and garden tour begins at the historic Panagia Church (Pope Memorial), then follows the map to three homes nestled on the original Pope estate. From there the map, which is a part of your ticket, leads you to a shuttling area as described, which will carry you to an Edwardian style residence built in 1904 and famous for its expansive ballroom and scenic harbor view. Your next stop will be at a lovely English garden setting where Greek pastries and coffee will be served while you meander through the blooming shrubs and flowers.

Following this spring garden stroll, your map leads you to another shuttle area, where you will be taken to Cohasset's own Castle Hill; another Town landmark constructed in 1928-1930. The evening portion of the tour will feature wine and cheese to be served in the ballroom of the Edwardian home.

Chairman is Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos of Cohasset, 383-9071; Honorary Chairman, Mrs. John Sedell of Scituate; Co-Chairman, Miss Jane Marshall of Cohasset, 383-9236, and Hospitality Chairman, Mrs. Mary Menakos of Scituate.

Your springtime house and garden tour awaits you, May 1.

AFS auction

The AFS Auction Evening on Saturday, May 1, at Walton Rodgers Hall in St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, promises to be a delightful event for both veteran and new auction goers.

Be sure to arrive at 7:30 p.m. to view the exciting variety of old and new items. While you target your selection, you can enjoy a glass of wine, cup of coffee, beer, or soft drink and relax at tables set for eight.

So bring some friends and prepare to bid anywhere from $2 to $200 (cash or checks) for items as diverse as a hockey stick signed by the Bruins, an IBM electric typewriter, a weekend deluxe at the new Inter-Continental Hotel in New York, a silk flower arrangement, a water color by Cohasset artist Claffy Williams, a two-tier wedding cake for fifty, a new bicycle, live lobsters, and many, many more treasures. The auction begins promptly at 8:30 p.m.

If you've never been to an auction before, this is your chance to learn under the guidance of professional auctioneer Louis Cook and to have a fun-filled evening as well. Proceeds will help provide financial assistance for American Field Service students from Cohasset High School.

Amateur gardeners

The amateur gardeners of Cohasset will hold their annual meeting April 27 at 1 p.m. at the home of Barbara Guilfoyle.

Guest speakers will be AFS students Johanna Arola of Finland and Hiromi Yoshioka of Japan. Co-hostess is Eleanor Lennedy.

Community Center workshops

Registrations are now taking place for several upcoming workshops at the Community Center.

A Beauty Workshop with staff from Reflections, will be offered on Monday, April 26, from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. for $6. The program will include a hair cut demonstration and the latest in makeup techniques and is suitable for adults and teens.

Also on Monday, April 26, from 7 until 8:30 p.m., Paul Conway of Basch, Haisey and Stewart will offer a tax seminar on the benefits of the new tax bill.

On Monday, May 3 from noon until 3 p.m., Jane Doherty will conduct a Pastry Workshop on her program on Cooking with a Food Processor. The $15 fee includes materials.

For the knitter who knows the basics but wants to try something different, Laila Roukanakis, will conduct a knitting workshop on Tuesday, May 4 and 11, from 9 until 11:30 a.m. at a cost of $12.

Mary Struzziero will conduct her popular workshop on Fabric Frames on Thursday, May 6, from 9:30 until 11:30 a.m. at a cost of $6.

To register, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Women Realtors to meet

The Women's Council of Realtors, Eastern Massachusetts chapter, is holding its spring meeting at Justin's Hearthside in Hanover today, April 21, beginning at 11:45 a.m.

"Selling the South Shore" will be the topic. Ron Zooleck of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce will be the speaker.

For more information, call Christine Wilson, 749-4605, Pearl Patterson, 749-2456, or Joan Williams, 934-6565.

'Strange Bedfellows'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "Strange Bedfellows," by Ryerson & Clements at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., May 20, 21 and 22, curtain 8 p.m.

This is a comedy set in 1890's San Francisco, and has as its subject the goings-on of Women Suffragettes and politicians during the era in which the nation's women were denied the right to vote. "Strange Bedfellows" is a lighthearted spoof of the suffragettes and their antagonists in a duel of wits both humorous and prophetic.

Tickets will be available at the door on the nights of the performances. Admission: $3.50. On Thursday only; Senior Citizens free and students admitted for $1.

By Joan Pinkham

During that hateful spring blizzard we had I picked up a book to pass away the time while waiting out the snow plow. It arrived a day and a half later, so there was little in the way of reading matter that escaped my eye. Fun to read about was the world's most expensive food stuff — truffles, caviar and saffron. An article in the "Smithsonian" explains that a pound of each would set us back more than $2,000. Hardly the stuff of which shopping lists are made. Truffles are fungi growing in France and northern Italy. To sniff them out, farmers use trained dogs and to serve over your fettucine, would cost a few hundred dollars a pound. Too costly for most taste buds, most of us would surely be far happier with Janet Ingram's

Shredded Wheat Muffins

1 c. flour
1/2 c. sugar
2½ tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 c. raisins (optional)
2 shredded wheat biscuits, crumbled
1/2 c. wheat germ
1 c. milk
1 egg
1/4 c. vegetable oil

Mix first four ingredients and set aside. Stir cereals and milk. Let stand several minutes. Add egg and oil. Mix. Add dry ingredients, stirring gently. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 min.

It was 10 days ago I started writing today's column during the storm. Now, New England weather being what it is, I'm out on the patio scribbling madly to meet my weekly deadline. I'm also eyeing our bed of purple crocus, for I remember reading that they are a source of that precious aromatic spice, saffron. Richard L. Williams writes that one brand goes for $2,000 a pound, but seeing that it takes more than 75,000 blossoms to make a pound, I've given up on that idea. The reason it is so expensive is that somebody has to pick the crocus blossoms from which it comes, one flower at a time, then separate out the threads, three to a blossom and dry them for the market. No wonder that even the wealthiest buy saffron by the pinch and not the pound. Fish is so costly these days, we'll have to struggle along without the saffron. Fortunately, Anita Nicholas doesn't even suggest it in her recipe for

BAKED HADDOCK WITH ONION RINGS

1½ lbs. haddock fillet, skinned
1/2 pint dairy sour cream
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. garlic powder
1 can French fried onion rings
Sprinkle of paprika

Wash fish and drain thoroughly. Place in buttered baking dish. Blend together the sour cream, salt and garlic powder. Spread over fish and sprinkle lightly with paprika. Top with onion rings. Cover with foil to keep onions from browning too much. Bake 45 min. at 350 degrees. Uncover the last 15 min. Serves 6.

Few, if any of us, have been offered caviar on the party circuit here on the South Shore. The fact that you can pay up to $800 a pound for the stuff nowadays, may have something to do with that. Williams writes of a meal he had in Ouchy, Switzerland which included Beluga caviar slathered on Idaho baked potatoes. As for me, it's always a good party if I'm able to find a bowl of my favorite nibble food called simply

PARTY MIX

1 c. butter or salad oil
1 T Worcestershire Sauce
1 tsp. seasoned salt
2 (3½ oz.) cans French fried onions
1 (2¼ oz.) can potato sticks
1 pound mixed salted nuts
1 (9 oz.) pkg. crisp rice cereal
1 (7 oz.) pkg. doughnut-shaped oat cereal

Melt butter, add seasonings. In a large roasting pan combine remaining ingredients. Pour butter over and bake in 250 oven for approx. 30 min., stirring occasionally. Cool and store in tightly covered container in cool place.

Sorry to miss seeing you all at our Open House, but we had made reservations in Nantucket long before the date was set, so had to miss all the fun on Main St. Anyway, keep those recipes coming — hopefully till our 20th.

There are from time to time mornings, both in summer and in winter, when especially the world seems to begin anew...mornings of creation, I call them. In the midst of these marks of creative energy recently active, while the sun is rising with more than usual splendor, I look back...for the era of which no man ever rose early enough. A morning carries us back beyond the Mosaic creation, where crystallizations are fresh and unmelted. It is the when men are newborn, men who have the seeds of life in them.

Scituate's Shipshape Day comes to Cohasset

This year begins a new phase of Shipshape Day in tandem with adjoining towns. In the future it is hoped that the entire South Shore community will join in an effort to keep the whole area shipshape. Do your part...stop to pick up litter and teach your children or family the value of maintaining a neat, litter-free environment.

Scituate residents will be joined by neighboring towns in the annual Town spring cleaning known as Shipshape Day scheduled for Saturday, April 14.

And there has been solid evidence that it might be worth anyone's time to get outdoors and help clean up winter's litter, no matter what the cause, as communities prepare for more outdoor living.

Cohasset's Jane Nash started her pick-up efforts a week early and was rewarded by finding a five dollar bill within the first five minutes of her work.

A Scituate student also learned that "There's gold in them thar streets," but word has it that he squandered all $20 on someone named Pacman. His friends will join him this Saturday with plastic bags provided by businesses; even if lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place, it might strike in another, and they are hoping for a "find" as valuable as his.

No matter what reward is hoped for, everyone who lives in the cleaned-up areas will be rewarded with a more attractive home community. Decide today to help yours.

Cohasset was the first of surrounding communities to respond to Scituate Beautification Commission Chairman Kathy Donahue's invitation to combine in an area Shipshape Day.

Norwell and Marshfield are expected to match efforts with us to emphasize the importance of community responsibility and cooperation. Marshfield High School's Honor Society is offering to aid homeowners there through a Rent-A-Kid pick-up crew at a cost of $2 an hour per kid, the proceeds going to their scholarship fund.

Businessmen in all participating communities are offering concrete support with donations of various kinds, from trash bags to refreshments for small volunteers. The Beautification Commission appreciates and applauds this tremendous support from the Town and from the volunteers.

Litter origin can be attributed to wind, carelessness, overloads of various kinds, and it is to the latter that residents are asked to look. When residents pack for a trip to the dump, it is possible that they unknowingly contribute to road litter because refuse is knocked or blown off a vehicle. For this reason the reminder is given that all should cooperate in stopping where possible to aid in the removal of this debris.

It is in personal and individual help that participating towns expect to see the most gain in the battle to restore and reclaim the cleanliness crown once owned by all New England towns. If sports fields are left littered with paper cups and orange peels, let coaches encourage team members to get the "pick-up habit-- when the game is over. If parents reward youngsters for numerous trips to the store knowing it's a candy bar they'll buy, let's remind them to use the store's wastebaskets. Many have outdoor receptacles for just that purpose.

Get your food processors out

For all those owners of food processors who would like the chance to learn how to effectively use it, the Community Center of Cohasset is offering a special course on Cooking With Food Processors by well known area teacher Jane Doherty.

The course will be offered on Tuesdays, May 11, 18 and 25 from 7 until 10 p.m. It will include: Class I hors d'oeuvres and dips; Class II - sorbets (sweet and savory) and ice cream; and Class III - salads and dressings including coleslaw and layered.

Beaux Arts Ball defined

What could be more fun than "Mardi Gras in May" — the traditional Beaux Arts Ball sponsored by the South Shore Arts Center that will take place this year on Saturday, May 1 at the newly decorated Dreamwold on 75 Branch Street in Scituate.

Famous over the years as a benefit event for the Center, dance-lovers and party-goers have always looked forward to a festive evening, spiced with imaginative hats and masks worn by those who choose to come in costume. This year's event will feature music for all tastes from 8 p.m. to midnight, hot and cold hors d'ouevres, cocktails a la carte, fortune-telling by Syma, costume parade for the costume-prize and surprise events.

Tickets at $12 per person in advance are available at the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset or from the following ticket committee members on the South Shore: Mrs. David Lizotte, Norwell; Mrs. Vahan Kailian, Weymouth; Mrs. Donald Summers, Cohasset; Anita Franks, Plymouth; Mrs. David Avery, Marshfield; Mrs. Stephen Tooker, Scituate; Mrs. Sydney Kalish, Quincy; Mrs. Henry duLaurence, Hingham. Tickets will be available at the door at $15 per person.

The ticket donation is tax deductible and goes to support the Art Center programs of classes in the visual arts for children and adults, films, seminars, the annual Festival and the Center building fund. The South Shore Art Center, now in its 27th year, is a member of the Massachusetts Cultural Alliance, affiliated with the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education Program and Culture Connection of the New England Educational Cultural Collaborative. The Center depends for its support on memberships and donations from the community.

Other Art Center news

Two special workshops are enrolling now at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset — a one-day Painting Day for all levels of expertise and a Matting and Framing Workshop geared to anyone who wants to cut framing costs and "do it themselves."

Rosalind Farbush, well-known South Shore artist who exhibits in Boston, New York and the Philadelphia area, will lead the one-day painting workshop on Saturday, May 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Students should come with all supplies and ready to paint in the medium of their choice. The class will be held outdoors if weather permits and focus on landscape; if the class is in the studio the morning will focus on color and composition with still life and, after a break for lunch, will focus on painting the clothed model. It is a rare opportunity to learn a great deal in a short time with expert guidance and critique.

Joseph Burbank, art director at the Dover-Sherbourne School, will lead the matting and framing workshop on Saturday, May 15 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Participants are asked to bring a notebook as this is a lecture-demonstration class with the morning devoted to the proper selection of mats and frames for various types of artwork and the afternoon concentrating on a hands-on demonstration on how to cut mats and frames.

A new class at the South Shore Art Center for this spring only is Printmaking Without a Press that will be taught by printmaker Albert Abany on Tuesday evenings. Class projects are geared to beginners as well as the more advanced and will include techniques that can be used to created simple cards and stationery as well as significant works of art. All simple relief processes will be studied including rubbings, monoprint, linocut and woodcut with instruction on developing good skills. Color and edition printing will be covered and individual attention will be given for different abilities. Registration, with fees, must be made in advance for the class which starts April 17. This class can be taken for college credit.

For further information on this class and other weekly classes in painting, drawing, portrait, watercolor, photography, teen's and children's art, telephone the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, 383-9548.

Police crackdown on traffic violators

Police are getting tough with parking violators and speeders.

Police Chief John DeBassio never has been lenient on either group. But Monday, he announced some plans to crack down even more on the illegal parkers and speeders.

Sometime in July, if you're caught parking along the outlawed areas near the beach, you may find your car towed away.

In the meantime, ticketting will be stiff.

"We are increasing our enforcement due to the weather conditions," Chief DeBassio said. "If someone is caught parking at the beach without a sticker, they face a fine."

The chief said that anyone who had a beach sticker last year that has fallen off may stop by the station at any time for a replacement.

The new beach stickers are not available yet. Last year's sticker will be honored until July 1.

"We're getting ready to re-issue stickers," the chief said. "They are being printed now. We still have plenty of last year's stickers for anyone who's lost the old one.

When the new stickers are available, special hours will be set up at the police station for the renewals. The chief said details of the clerical help needed for the job are being worked out by selectmen.

"The fact that a sticker has fallen off won't stop an officer from issuing a ticket," the chief warned.

The only thing that stops the police from towing cars parked along the waterfront roads now is the need to post the area. Last year, selectmen voted to approve the concept of towing illegally parked cars in those areas.

Chief DeBassio said he has money in the new budget for the signs needed to warn people about the possibility of being towed.

Towing will be underway sometime in July, if things proceed according to schedule. The money for the signs will be available July 1. Illegal parkers by the bridges, near Sandy Beach or Black Rock Beach, along Atlantic Avenue or Jerusalem Road will be those at jeopardy.

"We found last year that with our increased traffic enforcement, we reduced the problems in those areas," the chief said.

He said parking along the narrow streets by the beaches creates a safety hazard since emergency vehicles could have difficulty maneuveing through the cars.

While the parking crackdown has been an ongoing event, the crackdown on speeders is taking on significance.

Patrolman Cliff Jones has been put in charge of accident investigation.

The chief explained that Officer Jones just completed a special course in accident investigation.

Paying homage to a special lady

Outside St. Stephen's Church, trees began to bloom.

Inside the church, in the vestibule, the choir loft, and the parish hall, 1,000 or more people paid tribute to Jessie Bancroft Cox.

Limousines had ferried dignitaries, friends and family members into town all Saturday long.

Bishop John Coburn of the Episcopal Diocese began a funeral service at 2 p.m. that focused on the happy memories Mrs. Cox bequeathed those who knew her.

Mrs. Cox bequeathed more than those memories. The reading of her will was this week. Her estate is valued at far more than $200 million. It was left to the family.

Mrs. Cox was a benefactor of most local charities. She has given to South Shore Conservatory, South Shore Art Center, the Cohasset Historical Society, St. Stephen's Church, as well as hospitals in Boston and more.

The Elms, a 50-room mansion complete with tennis courts and greenhouses, will be put up for sale, according to the directions in the will. The brick mansion was built by Mrs. Cox's grandfather. It was her home all her life.

Bishop Coburn eulogized Mrs. Cox as a woman of compassion who was herself whether in the board room or on a boat or in a church pew.

"When she said, 'See the U.S.A. in your Chevrolet', you knew it was time to leave the room," he said during the service Saturday that was broadcast over a public address system from the main church to the church hall.

He reminded the mourners of her red fingernails. He described her as a woman of spunk and spirit. He

Good bargains & fun at AFS auction

By Ian Gilmour

What price would you pay for a basketball signed by the Celtics, or a baseball emblazoned with Red Sox signatures, or a hockey stock hosting Bruins' autographs?

What's the worth of birthday cakes, seats in the orchestra stalls at Boston Opera, an Italian-style dinner for eight?

Do you know how much it can cost to charter your own plane for three hours?

How do you rate luxury hotel accommodations for a weekend in New York City, or the use of a Vermont ski lodge for six people over a January week-end?

Do you want your chimney swept, your gutters cleaned — a haircut? How about some new furniture for your daughter's doll?

More than half the fun of fund-raising auctions, says Jo-Ann Rossi of Cohasset, is the delightful variety of gifts put forward for the auctioneer's gavel. Jo-Ann should know - a veteran of auction fundraisers for a school in Connecticut, she immediately applied her experience when the Cohasset Chapter of AFS (American Field Service), began seeking fund-raising ideas.

The Chapter needs the money to be able to offer assistance to financially stretched Cohasset high school students qualifying for extended stays in foreign countries under AFS international programs.

Though it usually takes a good bit longer, says Jo-Ann, the Cohasset AFS Chapter auction committee has taken only two months to put together a full evening's entertainment and hospitality - as well as over 100 bargains. The fundraiser takes place in the Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church on Saturday, May 1.

"We've designed the evening to be a lot of fun," says Jo-Ann. "Everyone coming to the auction has a chance to pick up some great bargains in a festive atmosphere, in addition to knowing that they are helping some great young people discover and learn to appreciate lifestyles in other parts of the world."

How festive will it be?

Well, the first hour, starting at 7:30 p.m., is devoted to viewing the goods and services that will come under Louis Cook's hammer, says Jo-Ann, but during that hour and for the rest of the evening, there's a wide variety of refreshments, including beer, wine, coffee, and soft drinks, available for bidders and viewers alike. The more serious business begins when professional auctioneer Cook invites the first bids at 8:30 p.m.

Jo-Ann, chairman of the auction committee, has nothing but praise for the generous response of many Cohasset and Boston businesses, as well as individual sponsors of the chapter's efforts.

Most organizations have been very receptive and helpful, says Jo-Ann, as enthusiastic over jigsaw puzzles estimated at $3, as she is about electric typewriters valued at fifty times that amount.

"In addition to actual products, some of the certificates offer delightful services," she says. "A special peek at the treasures of the China Trade Museum, a one-hour consultation with a professional interior decorator, private time on an ice rink - there's something for almost everyone!"

Cohasset's week ...

Stanton new chairman

At its meeting of April 20, the Board of Sewer Commissioners elected its new chairman, Gerard Stanton.

Other board members are outgoing chairman, Joseph Gwinn, who was acknowledged with appreciation for his past chairmanship and congratulated on his recent re-election to the board, and Janet Daggett.

Septic tank pumping

The Cohasset Board of Health requires that septic tanks be pumped once every two years. In the spring of each year, homeowners may be experiencing above-ground discharge problems with their septic systems due to high ground water levels. One can possibly avoid such problems by pumping and carefully maintaining the system.

If you have any questions on the proper maintenance of your system, please feel free to contact the Health Department at 383-1664, and we will be happy to answer your questions.

Cemetary maintenance

Selectmen received a notice from Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle last week, which requests that citizens remove artificial flowers from the Beechwood, Woodside, and Green Gate Cemeteries for maintenance purposes.

Board Chairman Henry Ainslie said that Laugelle wants to warn people that the department will be cleaning up the cemeteries.

Music Circus license renewal

Renewal of a Sunday Entertainment License for the Cohasset Music Circus was tabled by selectmen last week.

The board wants to be assured that the performances in late June and early September will not last late into the evening and disturb local school children's sleep.

Banquet for firefighters

A banquet and dance for Deputy Chief Thomas Hernan, Firefighters Ralph Perroncello, Ernest Sullivan and William Nickerson, honoring their recent retirements from the Cohasset Fire Department will be hosted by the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804.

The occasion will be held at Dreamwold, 74 Branch St., Scituate, on Friday, May 14. Cocktail hour will begin at 7 p.m. with dinner to follow at 8:15 p.m.

The dinner, catered by Farrelly Caterers, will be family style roast beef and turkey with all the trimmings. Music for your enjoyment will be furnished by "The Emanons" with dancing until 1 a.m.

Tickets are $17 per person and are available at the Cohasset Fire Department Headquarters, 44 Elm St. Tickets may be reserved by sending a check payable to "C.P.F. Local 2804," to 44 Elm St., Cohasset, 02025.

Reserved tickets may be picked up at the door. For more information or questions call the Cohasset Fire Department at 383-0261.

Tidal gate repairs

Chairman of the Sewer Commission, Gerard Stanton notified selectmen last week of the needed repairs to the tidal gates on Border Street. One hinge should be replaced and another repaired.

The cost of repairs was estimated at under $200.

Midge control

A transfer of $804 to Hull for midge control at Straits Pond was approved by a 2-1 vote of selectmen last week. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was opposed to the project.

It was recommended that the spraying take place before April 25. Hull has contracted a company to spray by helicopter with the product Abate.

Scouts repair bus stop

Paul Winn, 17, will soon be undertaking an Eagle Scout project to repair the bus stop at the Common. Members of Troop 28 will assist in the repairs.

Winn told selectmen last Wednesday that he will be seeking donations of various materials from local contractors. He said braces would be replaced and plywood would be put up in the interior to discourage future vandalism. The building will also be painted.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said, "From the town's standpoint, it sounds like a worthwhile project...I'm sure the town will appreciate it."

Health insurance bids

Selectmen accepted bids from three companies for the town's health insurance at their meeting last Wednesday.

The following premium rates were listed: Bay State, $63.62, individual, $158.80, family; Multi-Group Health Plan, $57.39, individual, $147.50, family; Blue Cross-Blue Shield, $85.66, individual; $231, family.

A representative from Blue Cross-Blue Shield said her company's rates were increased by 45 percent from last year due to a high incident rate for Cohasset.

The bid proposals were turned over to the Insurance Committee and Town Accountant for a recommendation.

Moving the wash

The Home Economics Department at the high school has a new washer and dryer. Transferal of the equipment from the Fire Department to the high school was approved by selectmen last Wednesday.

Summer jobs

The Cohasset Swim Team has three part-time positions open for this summer. The positions are Swim Team Coach, Assistant Coach and Diving Coach.

The positions of Coach and Assistant Coach are for eight weeks, approximately five hours a day. Diving Coach is for eight weeks, approximately six hours a week.

If you are interested, please contact S. Jackson, 9 Woodland Drive, Cohasset, stating qualifications.

Art scholarships

The annual MacIvor Reddie Award and the Marion Huse Scholarships for art students from South Shore schools who will be graduating this June and have been accepted into a program of Fine Arts are now available for application.

Any high school senior who wishes to apply and who is qualified should bring a portfolio to the center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, on Saturday, May 1, between the hours of 12 and 1 p.m.

Portfolio requirements are as follows: eight examples of your best original work including a self-portrait or portrait drawing done from life, a still-life drawing from actual objects and a composition drawing or painting using any medium. Quality slides or pictures of 3-D work will be accepted. They must be marked with applicant's name, title or work, medium, actual size and arrows to indicate top of slide or photograph. Work should not exceed 18" by 24". Please present work matted but unframed and in a portfolio reasonably secured and clearly labeled with your name. Mary Callahan of Marshfield is this year's scholarship chairman.

The MacIvor Reddie Scholarship is for $200, and the Marian Huse Scholarships are for $500 each. Two Huse Scholarships will be given this year. The Award and Scholarships are to apply toward tuition. MacIvor Reddie was one of the founders of the South Shore Art Center and a noted watercolorist, Marian Huse was a member of the center and exhibited in the festival.

The South Shore Art Center is a non-profit Cultural Organization which provides all residents of the area with an important center for the visual arts. Through such services as classes films, lectures and exhibitions the art center acts as an educational institution. For further information call 383-9548.

Selectmen try to hire EMT's

Now it's up to the state civil service to solve the staffing problem on the town ambulance.

There are two openings on the fire department. Both will be filled by EMT's (Emergency Medical Technicians), according to Arthur Clark, selectmen's executive secretary.

Clark said he's sent forms in to civil service explaining the town's problem.

The selectmen had already sought an extension on another civil service list as they were planning to hire to fill some of the vacancies on the department. In the past few months, four men including the former chief have retired.

The department already had one man above the allowed compliment (which was reduced by four at town meeting a year ago). The chief's opening is being filled temporarily by Roger Lincoln. A search committee is screening applicants for the job.

Clark said there will be one more opening if acting Chief Lincoln becomes the new permanent chief.

In the meantime, the town is unable to staff all shifts with the required number of EMT's. State law requires two EMT's on the ambulance on all shifts. There are eight EMT's available for ambulance duty — which would be fine if no one ever got sick or had a vacation.

Training an EMT costs $1,290, according to Lincoln, who told selectmen about the problem last week. He says there are men in the department willing to do the training.

Clark said the state is going to give the town some time to straighten out the situation before taking action over the EMT shortage.

went so far as to say she was "naughty."

He talked about her love for the Bruins, the Red Sox and Celtics. He talked of her memories.

"We will tell our children about her," the bishop said.

After the funeral service, the casket, draped with white flowers, was interred simply at Joy Place near the edge of the Harbor. Throughout the interment, the carillon, given to St. Stephen's by Mrs. Cox, played.

The Elms was open after the services. The family, through Bishop Coburn, invited all the mourners at the funeral service back to her home.

Mrs. Cox died last Tuesday of a heart attack while at "21" in New York. She was 73.

She was a major stockholder in Dow Jones and Co.

News of her death has been a major story this past week in daily newspapers.

Pond Street approved

The Planning Board approved the 39-unit cluster at 100 Pond Street last week.

The approval is subject to conditions that will change some of the plans already drawn up for developer Frederick Thayer.

St. Onge takes the helm

By Peter Conway

The Cohasset Sailing Club has elected new officers for the 1982 season. The newly elected Commodore, Harry St. Onge, takes over from the retiring Rev. Edward Atkinson.

The executive committee, in addition to the new Commodore, is made up of Robert Jackson, Vice-Commodore/Assistant to the Commodore; Raymond Kasperowicz, Vice-Commodore/Training, Peter Greenman, Treasurer; and David Sweeney Jr., Clerk.

The Rev. Atkinson steps down after a two term tenure, which saw the construction of a new club facility, and the launching of a new fleet of 10 Cape Cod Mercury sailboats. The $60,000 building and the surrounding landscape work was an anonymous gift, while the new fleet was made possible by a fund raising campaign.

Kasperowicz replaces Roger Porter as training commodore. Porter steps down after serving four years during which time a strong training program and a very able and skilled staff of instructors and dockmasters were established.

The sailing club provides training in sailing and the handling of small boats from late June to Labor Day. Children between the ages of nine and 15 are taught the fundamentals during the week, and adult beginners and intermediates are held on the weekends. The club has tried to make the sailing instructions available to every resident, regardless of income.

The club also sponsors family outings and social functions during the year. Last year the club held an evening social at its new facility, which featured a New England clambake.

A newsletter and membership information packet will be mailed to all residents of Cohasset during the next two weeks.

Berj Kailian exhibits

As part of its monthly exhibit series, the South Shore Art Center Gallery, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, presents a double pleasure this month. Berj Kailian of Weymouth will be exhibiting collagraph prints along with rubbings of katchkars (stone crosses), a unique combination of historical research and contemporary art. The public is welcome to the opening reception Saturday, May 8, 6 to 8:30 p.m. The exhibition is from May 1 to May 29.

Currently, Kailian is studying at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Her research of centuries old Armenian katchkars has inspired collagraphs of abstract shapes intricately woven to capture the finely and exquisitely detailed crosses.

Well-known to the South Shore residents, Kailian is a member of the South Shore Art Center's Board of Advisors and Vice President of the Copley Society of Boston. For 20 years, she owned and directed the Treasure Gallery in Hingham, Massachusetts. Ms. Kailian has exhibited widely in the area and holds numerous awards. Her work is in many private collections including the Armenian State Museum of Fine Arts, in Soviet Armenia, USSR.

around town

PERAMBULATING in a pram along the walkway at Cohasset Common, this child is still dressed for winter. Last week had its chilly moments. (Greg Derr photo)

☐On April 14, Health Agent, Elaine Eliopoulos, spoke at a career counseling forum sponsored by the Emmanuel College Career Guidance Center. Sr. Ann Rachel Sharry, S.N.D. organized the panel discussion in hopes of providing students with the helpful information regarding career options and job seeking strategies.

Ms. Eliopoulos was one of several women who participated in this forum. Student participation ranged from incoming freshmen to graduating seniors, all in hopes of gaining valuable information upon which they could plan the difficult years ahead of time. Ms. Eliopoulos discussed her role and responsibilities as Health Agent for the town of Cohasset. Students in various disciplines all had many questions concerning appropriate training and skills necessary for securing such a position.

Ms. Eliopoulos said she enjoyed being a part of this forum, and feels that it is important for young women to have the opportunity to talk with professional women.

☐There's an old saying about seizing opportunity when it knocks — some people seem to have a knack for this, others don't. Monica O'Brien, as evidenced by her recent winnings on "The Price is Right" has that knack.

Tanna Kasperowicz...doesn't...at least, she didn't this past week when she was called early one morning by WROR. Not only did she miss an opportunity to win $2,600, but she also refused to believe it. One would have thought she would have known her friends would not have been up to playing a joke of that sort especially at that hour of the morning.

Eventually, she did make a half-hearted attempt to guess the amount and did seem genuinely disappointed at her loss. When last heard from, she was planning to explore the possibility of writing it off on next year's income tax...this year, she supposed, being too late.

☐There's a new look to both of the South Shore Bank offices in town thanks to a recent redecorating effort. No, they didn't suddenly come into a lot of money, says bank manager Richard Locke, "we just figured the time had come."

☐Ellen Morrisy at Tide's Inn has also been giving her shop a new face lift, and the rather different effect is an attractive complement to the many attractive items she has on display.

☐Everyone loves a parade and Cohasset's festivities for the opening of the baseball season are no exception. Players from the Little League, Farm and Minor teams followed the traditional parade route through the village and on up to Barnes Field, led by a fire engine and the Deer Hill School band.

Peter Whitman was Master of Ceremonies and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray threw out the first ball, after which all six teams played their first game of the season.

☐One of the newest and quite possibly youngest members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club made his debut this past weekend at a playreading for club members and their guests.

Matthew Kuhn, a fifth grade student at the Deer Hill School, played the part of the nephew in "The Thousand Clowns." The role is both funny and touching, and was ably performed by Matthew who, as the nephew, tells the social worker that he reads only books that are "healthy, constructive and extremely educational" and the same for his collection of posters.

In all, scenes from three different plays were read and, judging from the reactions of the audience, the parts as played by club members were very well received.

☐The town certainly looks a lot better since last weekend's Clean Up Day, thanks to Jane Nash, Charles Piepenbrink and Merle Brown who led the effort to get rid of the debris which had accumulated over the winter.

Jane is especially grateful to all who participated in the effort which she says was so successful that they are thinking of doing it twice a year, each spring and fall. She's also looking forward to a much improved view as she rides her bike around town from now on.

May day tour of homes

By J.A. Marshall

The first day of May connotes flowering fruit trees, lilacs, and baskets of spring blooms brightening up the countryside and decorating houses.

After a long, cold winter, all the splashes of spring colors seem to tell everyone and everything to shake off their dreary winter dress, from the browns and grays of winter overcoats, to the insular bareness of the hybernating tree branches. Pack away the winter wools and take out your light spring outfits, and join the members of the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association as they invite you to attend Cohasset in the Spring.

Five Cohasset homes have been opened, and one of the town's charming English gardens is a part of this season's House and Garden Tour. Greek pastries and coffee will be served from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the garden, while wine and cheese will be served on the evening portion of the tour from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the ballroom of Red Oaks, a gracious Edwardian style residence built in 1904. Another special feature will be the playing of the unelectrified, pipe organ in the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, the Pope Memorial, by Brother David of Glastonbury Monastery from 1:30 to 2 p.m.

Tickets are currently available from members of the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association, as well as in four of Cohasset's special shops — Cookworks, The Linen Chest, The Tides Inn, and Philip H. Smith, Creation. Tickets will also be on sale at the last minute at the Panagia Church on Jerusalem Road.

So put away the warm, wooley, winter boots, slip into your comfortable, springtime walking shoes, and enjoy a house and garden tour through one of our special New England towns, Cohasset.

Chairman, Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos of Cohasset, 383-9071, Mrs. Eve Sedell of Scituate, Honorary Chairman, Co-Chairman, Miss Jane Marshall of Cohasset, 383-9236, and Mrs. Mary Menakos of Scituate Hospitality Chairman.

National College Fair

The National College Fair will be held in Boston at the Hynes Auditorium on Wednesday, May 5th, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., and again on Thursday, May 6, from 9 a.m. to noon. Approximately 300 colleges from all parts of the United States will be represented.

This event is a good opportunity for students to secure first-hand information, catalogs, and other printed materials from a college representative. There also will be opportunities for individual counseling from area high school counselors and sessions on financial aid.

The Cohasset High School Guidance Office recommends that all students in the 10th and 11th grades who are planning a post high school educational program, should attend this free College Fair.

Police crackdown...

"He will be handling the investigation of all serious accidents from now on," DeBassio said.

"In the past, in the event of a serious injury or death, a Registry inspector would handle the investigation. Now with all the cutbacks, we're not too sure the Registry will continue to provide that service and if they do, it will not be available in timely fashion."

The change means Jones will be on call for the investigation work.

On his regular day shift, Jones will be on regular patrol. But that patrol will have a heavy emphasis on traffic enforcement.

You can expect to see him behind the radar gun on streets in town where speeding complaints are high. That includes Sohier, King, and Beechwood streets.

The chief said that since there are few sidewalks in Cohasset, the problem of speeders is important.

He said Jones would also be doing some watchful enforcement at intersections where stops are sometimes ignored.

Great work

The Cohasset Communications Council is doing a phoenix from the flames production.

The CCC, after years of work, is dying out. The result is the Parent School Organization.

The people behind the old CCC certainly will be the backbone of the new PSO. They are the people who seem the most concerned about our schools. They are the workers. The movers and shakers.

We applaud all of them.

We applaud the start of a new and, hopefully, more widespread group.

The concept behind the change is to open the membership and the work force to more people.

We hope that works.

The CCC was made up of limited membership. But only the parents at Osgood rushed to fill up the available seats on the council.

We hope the change in format is enough to get more parents involved in working with the schools. Election of officers is scheduled for May 18. That will be the big send-off as all aprents of school children will receive ballots. Wouldn't it be wonderful if everyone voted in this election. Wouldn't it be a great way to show interest in a support organization for the schools.

It's going to be up to the parents to make sure the coming school programs reflect what they want. The school committee won't be able to continue the status quo as a declining school population indicates staff cuts and as Proposition 2½ dictates the budget lid.

It's time for parents to begin getting involved in the process.

Our thanks

Thank you, Everett Dorr.

We hear the Plymouth County Education Association presented you with a token of the organization's esteem.

We give you our thanks as well.

After 33 years teaching at Cohasset High School, we're sure you deserve something more than a placque and a vote of confidence.

But, of course, you have something more. You have the appreciation and respect of the students whose lives you've touched over the years.

"Mr. Cohasset High" is a name you can keep in retirement. No one else could fill the sneakers.

Good luck

Brian Wilkin is the new chairman of the Board of Assessors.

Congratulations and good luck.

Hope you can straighten out the revaluation soon. We expect you can.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book; in every book he finds passages which seem confidences or asides hidden from all else and unmistakably meant for his ear; the profit of books is according to the sensibility of the reader; the profoundest thought or passion sleeps as in a mind, until it is discovered by an equal mind and heart.

Vacationitis is terminal

By Patricia Desmond

To look about the kitchen, with its heaps of peanut butter stained saucers and half-filled glasses, anyone could tell it was vacation week.

"July, JULY, I said you had to put the snack dishes in the dishwasher before I would begin lunch," Super Mom screamed.

Super Mom was still wearing her red flannel bathrobe. One lock of hair looked like she sprayed it with starch to get that scared silly effect. If she'd thought about finding her lipstick, the idea had been lost before fruition.

Super Mom had a decided case of the mysterious disease that only infects overworked mothers of normal children. It's a disease her friendly pediatrician refers to as vacationitis. He, being a responsible physician, refused to give the kids tranquilizers. He insisted vacationitis was her problem.

After all, she was the one unable to move faster than a snail ever since Vacation Day 1 hit town.

"JULY, July, I called you," her banshee-like imitation curdled blood on the cat across the street. But July still didn't answer.

"Did you call me, Mom?" Mit asked obviously wanting to give Super Mom a modicum of attention.

"I want you and July to clean up the kitchen so I can make lunch," Super Mom said with her arm extending like a policeman's nightstick.

"I can't," he said straight-faced. "I have to watch television. Spiderman might be on."

"Spiderman isn't on, go get your sister anyway and where did those other kids go?"

"Gosh and Wren are up in the sky," Mit smiled a tiny bit.

Super Mom started mumbling to herself. Something about how she might just call the board of health and have the place condemned so someone would have to do something.

An ant crawled over to a pile of bread crumbs and Mit quickly left the room. "July, July," he called off into the cavern of the television.

"You better come, Mommy wants you now," he could be heard yelling with authority.

Super Mom speaks

In the cavern all that could be heard was the sound of Eddy's Father singing catchy jingles.

"It's David Banner," Mit hollered, losing track of his mission. "Is this when he turns into that green hulker and throws people across the room?"

Mit wasn't usually a partaker of daytime T.V. He didn't even realize Hulk once lived as a widower in a luxury apartment.

Mit was still isolated from some of the basic realities of life. But then at three, most children would still believe in Bugs Bunny.

In the kitchen Super Mom looked like she might clean the slop herself. She moved the glasses from countertops and tables to the shelf near the sink. She put the lid back on the jelly jar and placed the whole item back in the refrigerator.

An ant walked across the white marshmallow smear on the unswept floor.

But her attitude toward kitchen floors had been unswerving for years.

As she often said, "If you bother sweeping it one day, six months later it will need to be done again."

"EEEEEEEEEEch," she screeched.

July came running.

"Do you want to go to the movies this afternoon, Mom, it might make you feel better," July asked without a trace of guilt in her voice.

"What, I've been asking you to clean this room up for hours. I haven't done anything else today except to make lists of what you and the rest of the kids have to do before vacation is over. You have to put your bicycle in the garage. Gosh has to put his sled in the basement. Wren has to pick up his tinker toys from the cellar stairs and put them away.

"You all have to clean your own rooms, and you have a choice — stop eating or clean up the mess you made in the kitchen."

"You don't have to act so mad," July said with a look of hurt innocence.

"You'd think we did something wrong."

The mystery of the McDonoughs

By Claire McDonough

I clicked the Intellivision off the other evening and announced into the sudden and deafening silence, "When I took my shower this morning there was no shampoo and no conditioner. Having spent $5.87 on these products just yesterday, I intend to get to the bottom of the matter."

Larry pointed to his unruly hair. "Do I look like someone who took your conditioner?"

"Never mind," I explained. "We're going to settle this like the pros do. We're going to have a debate, and I'm the moderator."

Breida moaned. "You're getting ready to write about us in the paper again, aren't you?"

"There may be a certain amount of media coverage," I admitted. "We'll decide by lot who gets to speak first. Then everyone has a chance to ask everyone else a question. "I'll let you know when you have just 15 seconds left."

"Wait a minute," the Dragon interjected. "Let's broaden the scope of this debate. I'm missing three wrenches and a Phillips head screwdriver. How about finding out what happened to them?"

"I object," Jay said firmly. "I'll debate on the issue of the shampoo, but if we're going to talk about tools, it just confuses the issue."

"Look at the bulge in his back pocket," Kevin yelled. "I move we begin the debate with the screwdriver and the wrenches and why Skipper never cleans his room."

"How did I get into it?" Skipper asked indignently. "He's just hoping we never get to the shampoo. I won't debate unless we stick to shampoo, conditioner and screwdrivers."

"That's dumb," Jay muttered. "What does taking screwdrivers have to do with lifting Ma's shampoo?"

"They both involve fiscal irresponsibility," Breida pointed out. "But I still don't think it's fair to Larry. His face sweats and he looks guilty even when he isn't. Anyway, I'd like to find out what happened to the jelly beans I saved from my Easter candy."

"Don't look at me," Larry said, wiping the perspiration from his forehead. "Anyway, Ma had your black shoes on, maybe..."

"Fifteen seconds," I told him.

"Enough!" the Dragon roared. "The real issue is corruption. We're talking about people who don't respect other people's property. Screwdrivers, shampoo, jelly beans...it's all the same thing. And furthermore, we're not just talking petty pilfering. My bag with six pair of new banlon sox is missing."

Commentary

"You're out of order," I ruled. "I just saw the corner of the bag sticking out of Poodle Heaven." I referred to the area under our bed where the Dragon's dog, a confirmed survivalist, stores items that might be required in case of disaster.

"Sox maybe," he retorted. "Shampoo and wrenches no. And you're not going to pick on an innocent little dog. The debate on the debate is hereby discontinued, and I hereby appoint myself a panel of one to investigate the issue of corruption in this house."

He's been a father for 27 years now. We didn't find my shampoo, but he sure has learned how to talk pretty.

Revaluation update

The assessors office has a print out of the revaluation figures that includes much of what the state has been seeking, according to our sources.

The Board was to meet Tuesday night to act on filling in more information. But the meeting was after the Mariner went to press.

Progress is being made.

Cohasset Teachers Association says thanks

A smile, a pat on the back, a "well done" at the local neighborhood supermarket can mean a lot to a local Cohasset volunteer, no matter what the cause may be. This is usually all the thanks one would expect to receive.

So, to experience a dinner crowd of 650 people enthusiastically applauding their favorite "friend of education" would appear to be an anachronism. But on April 12, this was the scene of the Annual Awards Banquet of the Plymouth County Education Association held at the Ridder Country Club in Whitman.

The 26 local associations of Plymouth County were asked to propose recipients of specific awards and citations. After much deliberation and soul-searching, names were submitted for recognition. The Professional Recognition Committee and the Board of Directors of the Plymouth County Education Association approved 90 names for this year. Five members of the small Cohasset Teachers Association were deemed worthy of these awards.

After the difficult task of selection of recipients was over (since many of our 109 members seemed worthy of mention), we were instructed that it was our responsibility to see that the nominee was in attendance without prior knowledge that he/she was to be a recipient.

The evening also marked the completion of P.C.E.A.'s President, Virginia Kirby's term of office. She was warmly thanked for an excellent year, and also awarded a citation for her contribution to education by State Senator George Kirby.

Within the Cohasset delegation, Everett Dorr was cited for his 33 years of service to the schools with a framed Retirement Certificate. Evie has often been referred to as "Mr. Cohasset High" over the years and is widely known for his own personal athletic achievements, and his ability to instill sportsmanship in all his team members. For many years now, Evie has been recognized as one of the outstanding coaches of the South Shore. He will be grealy missed next year by students and all staff members of Cohasset High School.

Mrs. Howard Bates has been at Cohasset High for over 20 years, and is well known for her many contributions to civic groups, particularly her fifty-plus years of leadership with the Girl Scouts of America. Mrs. Bates has served for many years as the Treasurer of the C.T.A., and is an enthusiastic supporter of all student activities. She has attended many seminars to bring back to the schools the most up-to-date information on the Metric System and the use of computers. Mrs. Bates' accomplishments for our schools were noted with an appropriate Citation and an Honorary Life Membership to the P.C.E.A.

Commentary

An Honors Award was presented to Patrick Plante who has willingly cooperated with many people in executing projects that utilized his special building skills. Recently, he was instrumental in building a library from a vacant classroom for the use of the students in our lower elementary school. He is currently working on an outdoor class space for that school also. Over the past few years, Pat and his wife Maria have volunteered to coordinate our successful Bike-Rides for the benefit of the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens. As a hard-working team, they oversee every detail of this annual event.

John Leary is a gentlemen in all respects. A true role-model for students and teachers alike, he has served our association well as its president and in his attendance at conferences at the state and national level. We were well represented by him at the National Association of College Admissions Counselors in Philadelphia. An exemplary educator, Jack is known for his thorough and articulate reports concerning student testing as the Cohasset High School Guidance Chairman.

The Distinguished Service Recognition Award is presented to that layperson that has made a significant contribution to the schools. Over the past few years, Mrs. Stephen Bartow has been doing this consistently. As a newspaper reporter, she thoroughly covered events and activities within our schools, elevating individual children's and teachers' successes. As a member of the Communication Council, she has been an advocate for enrichment programs in the schools and worked diligently this year on assuring the great success of our Poets in Residence programs within the two elementary schools. When our physical education teacher and others were concerned with the condition of the Osgood School playground, Karin put in many hours planning the execution and funding of the new apparatus that the children now enjoy. Karin's energy and enthusiasm are infectuous and our schools have benefitted from the many extra hours she has devoted to all programs. As an extra surprise, Karin's husband joined us to see her thanked publicly for her devotion to public education!

Also attending the awards dinner were: Mrs. Everett Dorr, Mrs. John Leary, Mrs. Patrick Plante, C.T.A. President Faith Bowker, Osgood Building Representative Shirley Tewksbury, P.C.E.A. Delegate George Fortin, and C.T.A. members Shirley Manna and Joanne Magoun whose husbands were receiving awards from the Hull and Whitman Teachers' Association.

As the Academy Awards Evening of Plymouth County Teachers, it was indeed a positive, inspiring and satisfying night. As one recipient so succinctly put it in his thank you letter to the C.T.A., "To receive recognition from one's peers is the highest professional compliment that anyone can receive."

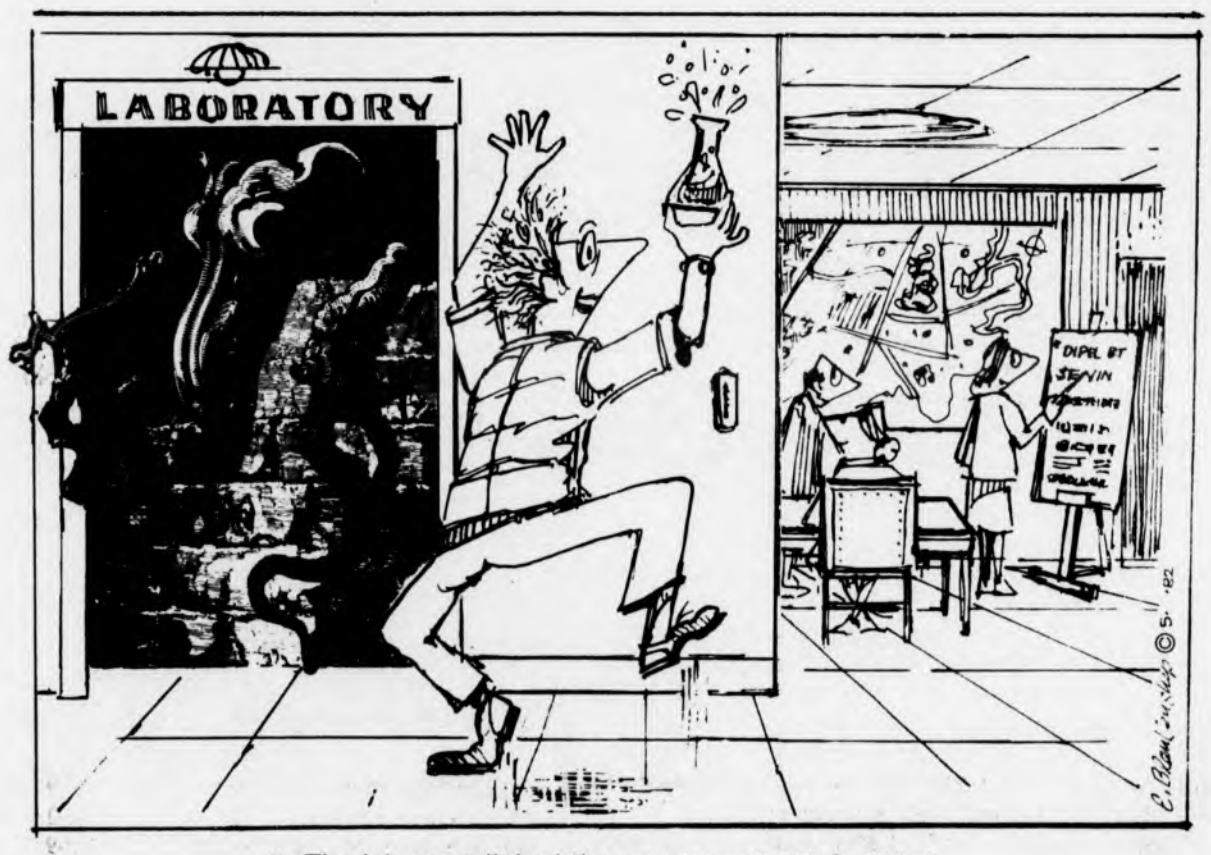
If only we could find time to give praise where praise is due to more of our diligent professional and volunteer workers in our communities!

Water region proposed

A Southeastern Massachusetts Regional Water District is a real possibility in the near future, if legislation proposed by the state office of environmental affairs succeeds.

The state is proposing a 42-town regional water district to encompass three major watershed basins, including the North River basin towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Norwell, Marshfield, Scituate, Pembroke and Rockland.

State and local officials have been tussling with several drafts of a proposal bill to create a regional water district, an idea that was originally sponsored by the Old Colony Planning Council in response to severe water shortages last year in Brockton and several other communities.



The state is convinced it has come up with a draft that can win approval from all 42 communities involved. Some towns had earlier argued the bill was simply designed to bail out Brockton, but environmental affairs attorney John Gleason recently announced the latest draft has won initial approval from several "have" and "have not" towns in the district to provide long-term planning and management of water resources.

Gleason said the bill could be presented to the legislature within a week.

State representatives Peter Forman of Plymouth and Mark Lawton of Brockton have been asked to sponsor the bill for the coming session, but several officials say more local input is needed before passage can be secured.

Hanover assistant superintendent for water Philip Beal was involved in a number of earlier talks on the proposals, but has yet to see the latest draft.

Golf lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting phone reservations for golf lessons to be taught by golf professional Brian Kelley, assistant pro, Cohasset Golf Club.

Lessons will be conducted for beginners, intermediates, and advanced players on Wednesday evenings, at the Town Hall, beginning Wednesday, May 12.

Class times are: Beginner, 6:30-7:30 p.m.; Intermediates, 7:30-8:30 p.m.; Advanced, 8:30-9:30 p.m. Lessons will continue six weeks; the fee is $15. Classes will be limited in size and reservations will be made on a first call, first enrolled basis. If space should be available, non-residents will be accepted for a $1 extra fee charge.

If interested, call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 immediately.

Reading clinic

The Cohasset Reading Clinic will offer its annual six week summer program for children, young adults and adults with reading, spelling and writing difficulties. This is open to all students in area towns.

The clinic will be held July 6 through August 16 at Cohasset High School.

It will be directed by Marcia H. Murphy, a Massachusetts General Hospital certified reading therapist. The faculty will consist of experienced teachers trained in the Orton-Gillingham approach and certified by Massachusetts General Hospital. Enrollment is limited.

A brochure is available upon request. For further information contact Marcia H. Murphy at 383-0839.

The Cub Scout Report...

By Linda Farag

Lee Palmiter unfortunately was "snowed-out" by the April 6 Blizzard. He was going to show the Cubs bicycle maintenance. This will be rescheduled.

Thirty-five Cub Scouts and mothers attended Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer" play presented by the Boston Children's Theatre at the New England Life Hall on April 21. The Cubs saw the adventures of Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, and his friends come to life with the whitewashing the fence, the graveyard mystery, pirating on Jackson Island and outwitting Injun Joe. After the play, many of the Cubs met the cast, and collected their autographs.

A Big Thank You goes to all the Cub Scouts who participated in the Anti-litter Day on April 24. The boys helped to keep Cohasset clean.

Merle Brown is in the process of arranging for the last Cub meeting to be a fun swim at the MDC Pool in Weymouth. The night will be either May 11 or 25 (to be announced at the April Pack meeting).

This will be free, offered to all the Cubs and family members. (The pack will be sponsoring the swim and will pay).

Bring your bathing suits and towels for an enjoyable evening. (Girls with long hair may have to bring swim caps.)

DEN NEWS

Den I:

Billy Baird and his family have been enjoying a fun vacation in Disney World in Florida. Even with the long distance away, they met with a little bit of Cohasset — they met Linc Marsac and his family also enjoying the Disney Park and the sun. It's a small world.

The boys had fun with the relay races at one of their meetings.

Den 2:

Awards:

Wolf Badge, Douglas Drysdale; Gold Arrows, Douglas Drysdale, Steve Almeida, Jason McIntosh; Silver Arrow, Jason McIntosh, Douglas Drysdale (2), and Steve Almeida.

All the boys celebrated Doug's birthday on April 14. Doug, himself, helped earn his arrowhead by making eight little boats and letting the boys share the fun of sailing them.

Den 3:

Matt Lombardy and his family have also been on a trip. They visited their relatives in Washington, D.C. Welcome home! The boys will have many questions to ask Matt about all the sightseeing he did.

Mr. Lombardy and his Cubs visited the Battleship Cove in Fall River. They went on a submarine, a destroyer and the Battleship. The boys even had a chance to work the machine guns. They ate lunch on the Battleship. They viewed everything on the ships from the medical quarters to the engine room.

Awards:

Gold arrows, Robbie Lawrence, Tony Morgan and Matt Lombardy.

Den 4:

The boys went on a seek-and-find hike by marking a trail at Wheelright Park. They marked the trail on paths through the woods, and even climbed what I would refer to as Mt. Everest, a huge rock in the center of the boys' marked trail. The boys used rocks, sticks and the earth to point the way. At the end of the trail was the circle of rocks with one in the center.

At another meeting, the boys went for a walk to the Strawberry Parfait for a delicious ice cream treat. After the boys came back to the Community Center, Linda Farrag spoke about the importance of the Cub Scout "dime" for a call in an emergency, and demonstrated and told of the Heimlich maneuver (a procedure used to aid someone who is choking on a piece of food or other solid type object).

Webelos:

The boys are anxiously awaiting to be presented their Sportsman's Badge which most of the boys have earned.

The April 28 Pack Meeting is also the registration night for all the present Cub Scouts and all the new Cub Scouts. We hope to have a good, fun, and enjoyable 1982-83 year.

We have this early registration to help plan for our future dens and committees.

Thank you from Pack 38 to our Cubmaster, Jeff Forsdick; Committee Chairman, Merle Brown; Scout Commissioner, Jerry Farwell; Treasurer, Jerry Deveney; Activities and Publicity, Linda Farag; and our Den Leaders: Den I, Pat Baird and Assistant, Lucy Marsac; Den 2, Sally Avery; Den 3, Michael Lombardy; Den 4, Jane Long and Assistant Nancy McLaughlin; and the Webelos, Dick Farwell. Everyone has worked hard to make this year a successful one for the Cubs.

Thanks to all the parents who supported the cubs, and to the cubs who have matured and grown with Pack 38.

I have said that poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings; it takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquility. William Wordsworth

'He' treats me like mashed potatoes

By Lois Martin

It's a boy. It has to be. Anything that technologically complicated must be a male. So far as I'm concerned, there's an enormous difference between boys and girls, which, incidentally, I support without equivocation.

I refer to the apparent reality that men are simply better at engineering-type stuff than women. I've heard there are women who have genius ability in that field. but since I've never experienced it personally, I haven't been persuaded. Mind you, I've no apology for different skills. I like that. Women dominate in certain areas. So do men.

PATCHES

But years ago when I took a high school aptitude test, the nice man called me afterward and said kindly, "You got a 2 out of 100 in mechanical ability." I thought, "Who needs it?" I do.

That doesn't mean I can't do mechanical things. It means I learn painstakingly by watching, doing, making errors and redoing mechanical things. I don't just look at something and know how it works. You take your vacuum cleaner (I probably mean that). I have to learn how those miserable pieces of metal go together.

At last I have a microwave oven. And I'm overwhelmed by guilt because I haven't seemed to appreciate it like a nice person should. But that thing is doing what I knew it would do. He, the microwave, is sitting there till he's installed with his blue light telling me the time perfectly accurate, never missing the second of the minutes turnings.

And his program panel, a full keyboard, over which my son's fingers flit, like an accomplished pianist. I've mastered opening the door after one day's ownership.

My husband is defrosting like a fiend. That's his forte. He's been in his instruction books and has read to me, using his right index finger to underline each phrase, "Easy Use Chart for Model 99896."

They know I have trouble with things, that I require repeated explanations about the difference between software and hardware. They recognize my attention span with things I don't understand, like some stupid program on a machine that has secrets I can't learn, is limited. That resentment can replace enthusiasm with mechanical toys.

I swear to you the snow blower looks like a snap. A bulldozer's a piece 'a cake. You ought to see that thing, Him.

My "Use & Care Manual" starts off with the long list of "don'ts." That's for safety. But the result was that I added terror to my ignorance. Now I view it as a threat. And I've got to get over that.

So I opened my pretty recipe book, wonderful pictures of cooked roasts, dripping with mushrooms, cute dishes filled with quiche. Even the Liver Venetian Style caught my attention.

My recipe book is gentle. It takes me by the hand over to Him, the microwave, like you do with a child who's always been afraid a dog will bite...again. (A soft little pat...then, probably a snap at my right hand. Mustn't think that way.)

One chapter says with confidence "On Your Own." That's when the cook is ready for the big time. Personally I'd love baked potatoes in a hurry. The hors d'oeuvres seem magnificent, even convenient. And once I made coffee at a friend's house merely by pressing 200. So it isn't like I can't do anything.

I'm an extremist. I'll probably turn out to be a micro snob, insisting everything be cooked in it, let my stove's gas bill lapse, favor pale chicken, start sticking that little probe into hot dogs and French bread.

The thing that frustrates me most is that people are impatient with others who don't warm to cold, complicated machinery. They hold it against you if you don't get your pre-programming down good.

I can bluff it a little, talk "power level" but they'll be on to me.

So I intend this weekend sometime to brief myself a bit on Him. Still I'm confused. There's a recipe for Macaroni Supreme, with a total cooking time of one hour one minute to one hour seven minutes. I can do it faster than that on my old wheezer range. I can't resist a good challenge, especially with a know-it-all engineering genius. Drop by this weekend for the big bakeoff, especially if you like peas francine and dandy dumplings.

This world is but a convas to our imaginations.

Got a new boat? Here are the rules

By W.E. Rowland
U.S. Coast Guard

Springtime is new boat time, and the thoughts of new boat owners turn to pleasant visions of plans afloat on warm summer days. Here are a few down to earth tips from the Coast Guard to help make those dreams become pleasant realities.

The boat must be built to meet Coast Guard standards. These standards are complex and difficult to understand for the average boater; however, with the exception of a few small sail and row boats, all single-hull boats under 20 feet in length must have a certification plate. This plate is the certification by the manufacturer that the boat meets all Coast Guard manufacturer's requirements. This plate may be taken by the consumer to show that the boat meets Coast Guard standards.

The boat must be properly equipped. Federal regulations require that boats be equipped with such things as life preservers, fire extinguishers, sound producing devices and so forth. The best way to check whether your boat has the required equipment is to write to the Coast Guard for their pamphlet, "Federal Requirements for Recreational Boats" (CG-290). The pamphlet is free and will give you all the information you need to equip your boat to meet legal requirements.

Another thing our "skippers" should make sure of is that his title papers and guarantee should be made out and mailed. Papers of title and registration are usually routinely filed and cause no problem in this respect. The concern arises with guarantee registration cards. These cards allow the manufacturer to keep track of who has bought his boats in case of a needed recall. Many new boat buyers don't think that this card is important. The truth is that the guarantee card is your best form of consumer protection. This registration will give the manufacturer the ability to contact you in case there is a need to correct a safety related defect on your boat. This service is free and continues even after the stated warranty has expired.

If you are a new boat skipper, knowledge of proper operating methods and practices is vital. The best way to get this is to enroll in a Coast Guard Auxiliary or U.S. Power Squadron Safe Boating Class. Classes are free to the public. Contact your local Auxiliary Flotilla or Power Squadron for time and locations.

Spring fishing... trout, herring, shad

By David Cutler

The Mariner's weekly fishing report, replete with our helpful hints and suggestions on what's biting where, will return next week. For the present, we should like to impart these important nuggets.

Trout — Those of the rainbow variety still produce best on the Cape (Nickerson State Park) and in those Plymouth ponds that haven't been touched by acid rains. Brookies are still about in local waters and will go for mudder minnows, #8 or, if you're a fancy fly fisherman, stone flies and nymphs, sizes 10 to 14.

Good brook trout waters include the North and South Rivers, the Weir River, Hingham; Bound Brook, Scituate; Tack Factory, Scituate; and the Third Herring Brook in Norwell.

The annual herring run is now underway and should continue in most tidal rivers for the next two to three weeks. Even if you're not a fisherman, it's fun to watch the annual migration and you can do so in Hanover and Pembroke.

The South Shore is still good large mouth bass territory and now is as good a time as any to go after largemouths. There are many small, unheralded ponds about that contain bass weighing three pounds and up. Usually, they are privately owned and require permission to fish, but don't be bashful. Ask. Those stump-filled ponds off Route 3 in Duxbury will produce as will Lilly Pond in Cohasset and the reservoir in Wampatuck State Park. Black worms will work.

For white perch, try Straits Pond in Cohasset, the Green Harbor River, Marshfield or the upper North River. Perch aren't glamorous, but they are most available.

Shad — May is coming and so is the annual shad run up Marshfield's South River, so get ready. This is the best of the spring fishing in Massachusetts because shad are most bellicose when hooked and on light tackle will rival the fight of a striped bass or bluefish. Outside the South River, you'll do best in the North River at the Pembroke-Hanover line. Use a shad dart or yellow and white flies, and be patient. Shad are returning to spawn, not to feed; when they hit, it will be strictly instinct. Treble hooks are not allowed.

In the salt, cod will go for clams as usual and bucktails will work on pollock. Do not forget that striped bass, when they arrive in June, must be at least 24 inches to be considered keepers.

Larkin named trustee of UCPC

John Larkin Thompson of Cohasset, President of Blue Shield of Massachusetts, was elected to a five-year term as a Community Trustee of United Community Planning Corporation (UCPC) at the organization's annual meeting.

Thompson was also elected to a three-year term as a member of the organization's Nominating Committee.

UCPC is a non-profit, citizen-led human services planning and research organization with a 60-year history of services to Boston and eastern Massachusetts.

Since its inception, UCPC has been a leader in assisting communities to establish priorities for allocating resources, developing and evaluating programs, and bringing a degree of order to the important effort of providing effective and timely human services to individuals, families and communities most in need.

UCPC is the official planning partner of United Way of Massachusetts Bay. It also does planning and research work under contracts and grants with a variety of public and private agencies, local governments and charitable foundations.

Oteri stomps out casinos everywhere

Carol Oteri, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., returned from Florida recently after meeting with Governor Robert Graham's anti-casino task force.

Michael Ledbetter, executive director of No Casinos of Florida, said that 11 sites have been pinpointed by casino proponents in that state. The casino question will probably appear as a referendum item on the Florida ballot this year. However, Ledbetter is confident that it will fare no better than it did in 1978. At that time the casino referendum was defeated by a two to one vote margin, despite the expenditure of more than $3 million by casino backers.

Oteri commented, "The experience in Florida is similar to that in Massachusetts. The casino entrepreneurs have the money but we have the votes." Oteri was happy to establish lines of communication with one more anti-casino group. She said, "Last month's LANCE meeting at the State House convinced me of the importance of solidarity among far flung grassroots organizations."

Legislators Against New Casino Establishments serves as a clearing house for anti-casino legislators and grassroots leaders from the six New England states, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Oteri added, "The same worn out promises are made by casino interests wherever they try to get a foot in the door, so it is important that we keep each other informed about what is really going on in each state. They play to the people who want to believe that somebody else is really going to pay their taxes for them."

Oteri questioned Ledbetter about the situation in Orlando, the home of Disneyworld, which is touted by pro-casino people as an example that the influx of large numbers of tourists anywhere leads to large increases in the crime rate. She explained, "They say things like 'crime in Orlando has increased 187 percent since the founding of Disneyworld, but crime in Atlantic City has only increased 115 percent since the legalization of casinos in New Jersey.' They don't tell you that they are talking about two unequal time spans.

"Disneyworld was founded seven years before Atlantic City gambled on casinos. At the hearings before the Government Regulations Committee at the State House on March 31 Rep. John Flood of Canton pointed out that when you examine the figures you find out that Orlando actually had only a 21 percent annual increase in crime compared to a dramatic 57 percent per year increase in Atlantic City. and Atlantic City only attracted about half the number of visitors that Disneyworld did. Casinos are magnets for particular types of crimes. Unsavory elements feed on their leavings."

Oteri was quick to point out that her Florida trip was paid for out of her own pocket and was primarily a vacation. The Hull resident returned home to the news that a councilman from Marlboro intended to push for a casino in the area of Routes 495 and 290. A conversation between Oteri and the mayor of Marlboro, however, indicates the anti-casino bent of the majority of the city council, which had voted down the lone councilman's proposal. Mayor Joseph Ferricchia expressed his belief that the casino industry would scare away many more desireable industries, thus increasing problems instead of solving them.

Oteri, a longtime opponent of casino gambling, agrees with Ferricchia and said that Marlboro wouldn't be the last town to flirt with the casino "quick fix" idea, nullifying the "one casino" argument advanced by proponents. She asked, "Have you ever noticed how casino forces are always pointing to casinos in very closed societies, even dictatorships, as examples of what 'one casino' would be like? In some of those countries the casino is owned and operated by the government and the local citizens aren't even allowed through the front door. Our system of democracy would not allow us to operate with the same rules that are legal elsewhere. Here there would be no exclusivity to it, no way to keep the hoardes of low rollers from over running us.

"The Atlantic City Press of April 16 and 17 carried some very interesting information.

"A record number of buses that rolled into Atlantic City last month, 24,000, would stretch from that resort almost through Connecticut it they were lined up along the highway all at one time. It's no wonder that Atlantic County is looking for federal money to pour into its potholes since casino generated money doesn't cover the problem. Atlantic City's problems will drain more federal dollars than you care to know about. The U.S. Attorney for New Jersey is opening an Atlantic City field office. His statement was, 'The rapidly developing casino industry has led to an increased and continued attempt on the part of organized crime to infiltrate legitimate businesses.' Nobody can convince me that casinos pay their fair share while they are laughing all the way to the bank."

More on the casino fight

The purpose for Legislators Against New Casino Establishments (LANCE) was proven when LANCE chairman, Senator Stephen Casey of Connecticut, notified all LANCE members of that state's finance committee report on casino gambling.

"Pro-casino advocates and casino owners were 'touting' the fact that Connecticut Legislature's Public Safety Committee had reported casino gambling bills out favorably to the Finance Committee of their legislature," said Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset.

"At that time," Murray said, "I stated, 'wait until the Finance Committee vote!' " LANCE Chairman, Senator Casey has informed LANCE members that the committee voted 25 to 2 against casino gambling in Connecticut.

Mary Jeanette continued, "Pro-casino supporters have been playing off Connecticut against Massachusetts on this issue. Legislators from Massachusetts, Connecticut, all the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida keep in constant communication with one another to prevent each state from being played against each other."

The LANCE network is working well and casino owners should be aware that they cannot pit one state against another in this very serious issue facing all citizens of all states involved.

"LANCE is working well. I am also pleased that a recent survey of the residents of Hull shows that out of 454 respondents, 49.3 percent are in favor of casino gambling with 38.5 percent opposed. Several years ago, according to the Radio Pollster, 80 to 90 percent of the Hullites favored casino gambling in their town. Quite a turn around, probably because of the people becoming aware of the many cancerous problems that go hand in hand with the casino industry," Rep. Murray said.

Our life is frittered away by detail . . . Simplify, simplify.

Softball girls down Norwell, boost mark to 4-1

The girls' softball team beat Norwell on Monday, and climbed to victory number four. Carla Lucas knocked in three runs for the Skippers with a double and single.

Cohasset is 4-1 overall, having lost only to East Bridgewater, 8-6. The softball squad is 3-1 in the South Shore League.

Junior Gia Barresi belted a triple to deep left field plus a single for two RBI's. Senior Madeline Roy had two hits and a run batted in for the Skippers.

Seniors Laurie Sandblom and captain Karen Froio collected two RBI's each.

The bulk of Cohasset's scoring was done in the third and fourth innings. Cohasset led, 11-1, after four innings. The Skippers crossed home plate four times in the third inning and six times in the fourth.

Senior Liz Russell pitched for Cohasset and struck out two and walked one batter.

Barresi is atop the Skippers' batting statistics with a .600 average. Froio has a .500 batting average while Lucas, Sandblom and Stacy Thompson are hitting in the high .300's.

Today's (Wednesday) game with Rockland will be an important matchup for Cohasset. After Rockland, the girls will face three weak teams, Abington, Holbrook and Hanover. If Cohasset meets with success, they could conceivably wind up with an 8-1 record by the end of next week.

Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon said, "We're in good shape right now. We are definitely considered a tournament contender...we're going to be right in there." Fallon says the team has not played up to their potential yet. "I think we'll do alright," he said. The team has played especially strong offensively, said Fallon.

Not only is it important to fill space in our homes tastefully, but some restraint is also recommended. It is necessary, at times, depending upon the situation, to leave some space empty. In this way, it is sometimes possible to achieve an overall balance. In many instances, a professional designed can save unnecessary expense by having the spatial sense to not over-decorate. Consequently, the homeowner or client can concentrate effort and money on those aspects of decor which need amplification. For example, a room full of lamps tends to have a hodgepodge effect while, often, simple lighting fixtures are the answer. Allow available space to influence your decor.

Today's generation is content to have rooms with as little accessories as possible so as not to overwhelm their guests and to save on dusting and polishing. Sometimes just new wallpaper and paint can change the look of your entire room or house and can be less expensive than new furniture, carpeting, lamps, paintings — you get the idea! When you need wallpaper, paint, hardware, etc. BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE is here at 763 Country Way in N. Scituate to serve you. Call us at 545-3624 where we are open Mon.-Wed. 8-6, Thurs. & Fri. 8-8:30, Sat. 8-5 or stop by. We welcome Master Card and Visa.

Parent School Organization born to grow

The new Parent School Organization held its first press conference Sunday to let people know it's alive.

Nancy Sandell, Marj Izzo, Karin Bartow and all the people who have been working so hard for the Cohasset Communications Councils are providing the work force to start the new group.

After many weeks of planning by this year's Cohasset Communications Councils, the new organization, PSO, has been formed. The Councils have been in existence since 1975.

On March 24, the Steering Committee of the Councils voted unanimously to adopt the by-laws of the PSO. Council members and interested parents who have been involved in the reorganization feel that the new PSO will be a better focused and stronger parents' group. They point out that the PSO emcompasses the best of the councils while streamlining into one organization representing parents of Kindergarten through 12th grade students.

There are several reasons for the change.
It was thought that the council set-up required too many officers at the four schools (co-chairmen and grade representatives); that there was a need to broaden the focus from individual schools to a town-wide school system; that activities and projects were being duplicated by councils; daytime meetings and repetition contributed to low parent involvement; and that there was a need for some fund-raising activities. The PSO has been set up to centrally coordinate activities, but will still allow and encourage parents at any individual school to meet and carry out projects as they wish.

The goals of the PSO, according to the by-laws are: to act as a communication channel between parents and schools; to register parental response to issues confronting the schools; to act as advocates of public education; to provide a forum for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public; to support school enrichment, extra-curricular and PSO activities; and to receive and channel parental questions and concerns.

As an advocacy group, the PSO hopes to provide support for the schools in times when financial limits may jeopardize Cohasset's educational system. The organization has filed for tax-exempt status as a non-profit organization and will have a treasury. It is not the PSO's goal to raise monies to supplement items that would otherwise be budgeted, but rather to provide for enrichment "extras" or other programs of an informational nature.

The PSO membership will consist of all parents of Cohasset school children and will meet a minimum of two times a year in the evening. There will also be monthly business meetings of the executive board for board members, parents, and school administrators.

A kick-off meeting for all PSO members and teachers is being planned for early fall. Other activities of its first year may include an artist-in-residence program at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools; a school activities calendar for all members; a field day for 7th grade students; and an orientation for parents new to the school system.

The first officers for the new group will be selected by ballot, May 18. All parents will receive ballots since they are automatically members of the new PSO.

The nominating committee includes Martha Equi, 383-0461; Marj Izzo, 383-6742; Jim Leonard, 383-6563 or 383-6781; and Pat Walsh, 383-1489.

Parents interested in volunteering, commenting or just asking for more information may call the committee members.

PSO officers sought out now

The nominating committee of the newly formed Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) consists of the following members:

Martha Equi (Joseph Osgood School) 383-0461.
Marj Izzo (Deer Hill School) 383-6742.
Jim Leonard (Junior High School) 383-6563, 6781.
Pat Walsh (Senior High School) 383-1489.

Parents are encouraged to phone the committee with suggestions for nominees for next year's PSO Executive Board. The board will consist of a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, one or two school representatives, and standing committee chairpersons for arts enrichment, METCO host families, volunteers, fund-raising, and PSO activities. If you are interested in serving in any of the above capacities, or if you would like to suggest a nominee; or if you can, in addition, help in the start-up of the PSO, please call any of the members of the nominating committee. Nominations will be closed on May 7 and the slate of proposed officers will be mailed to all parents on May 18 for their vote.

Bogart played here, so will 'Strange Bedfellows'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present Florence Ryerson and Colin Clement's Victorian comedy "Strange Bedfellows" on May 20 to 22 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

This humorous commentary upon American mores and politics in turn-of-the-century San Francisco had its New York premiere at the Morosco Theater on Jan. 14, 1948. The old Morosco, long a theatrical landmark, for many years was the scene of numerous illustrious opening nights. Celebrated foreign plays as well as not-yet-famous American ones began their Broadway runs on the stage of the Morosco.

Just a few weeks ago, in March, the venerable old theater building fell fictim to the building wreckers in the name of urban renewal. That happened despite the spirited appeals of historical preservationists and theater enthusiasts, including the actress Lauren Bacall.

Cohasset's theatrical archives show that Miss Bacall's late husband, the actor Humphrey Bogart, once played on the stage of the Cohasset Town Hall, along with such other famous show personalities as John Carradine, Broderick Crawford and Zero Mostel. They appeared locally with the professional company known as The South Shore Players, a group active in Cohasset during summers from the 1930's to the 1950's. The Morosco Theater and the South Shore Players have departed from the theater scene, but Cohasset's Town Hall stage once again echoes with the voices and sounds of another new production as the Dramatic Club prepares for this spring's side-splitting comedy "Strange Bedfellows."

Directing the play is Denise Ripley of Cohasset, a veteran of many Dramatic Club performances. Her involvement with Cohasset theater traces back to the original South Shore Players, when she and her parents arrived in Cohasset as members of that summer company. For the Dramatic Club, Denise has directed, among other plays, "The Gazebo," "The Mousetrap," and "The Cat and The Canary." Recently she acted in the Club's production of "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie." She also has appeared in roles for the Elizabethan Company of Waytes and Players in Hingham.

Stage manager for "Strange Bedfellows" is Helen Kelley of Weymouth, a former professional actress in New York and North Carolina. She was a member of the New York company of "Strange Bedfellows," and recently was seen in the Dramatic Club's winter production of "A Man For All Seasons." Production manager for the Club's spring show is Don Freiter of Scituate, another veteran of numerous Cohasset productions. Don has appeared on stage at the Town Hall, as well as having been active in the behind-the scenes production.

The designer of stage settings for "Strange Bedfellows" is Sheldon Ripley of Cohasset. A 27-year veteran of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, Sheldon has designed the settings for, among other plays, "The Hasty Heart," "The Night of the Iguana" and "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie." He also has acted in "Our Town," "Uncle Harry" and "Arsenic and Old Lace." "Strange Bedfellow's" cast members Carter Hill, Joseph Coyle, Barbara Elliot, Ellen Kelley, Joan Appel, Jackie Fahey, Matthew Kuhn, Flo Kelly, Betty Miessner, Bob Parsons, Gerald McNabb, Bennet Driscoll, Julia Jordan, DeLynn Gilboe and David Wadsworth are in rehearsal, and production crews are in full swing, "Strange Bedfellows" will mark the completion of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's 61st season, and it promises to be fine entertainment for all ages. Be sure to mark the dates on your calendar; May 20, 21 and 22, 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Community

This week the poems for our Arts Page come courtesy of the Cohasset Community Center. Rhona Post teaches at the Community Center. Laura Doherty is the center's director.

The Fishing Village by Anne Carleton. Available through Pierce Galleries of Hingham. (Oil on canvas.)

Spring with Prospects

By Rhona Post

Jonquils in bloom, their crepe de chine skirts sashay in early may breezes.
From behind naked trees young couples barely fertilized sneeze with pollen fever.

A black beetle weaves through tangled weeds garish leaves preying in his path.
My Weeping Willow still shy from Winter's whiplash stretches sprouted limbs too short for soft caress.

Canadian geese paddel oblivious to amateurs reeling on shore
as genteel Lady Duck liberated from the flock approaches wiggling her tail

We eye one another cautious in our claim to Spring.

Winter's Cold

By Rhona Post

poking heads above ground sniffing the air for catchy phrases senses laced from hibernation softly i creep Laughter across your face.

Billy

By Laura Doherty

Up and down the town, he walks
And stops to talk
Mostly to the children, who have the time.
They watch him and some learn to know him
As they meet along those streets by the sea.
And, as they grow,
He continues with what they have lost.

Revelation 342

By Rhona Post

Slipping through clouds
all shapes floating all ways always always
I find myself snagged by your smile long after touch
a very warm truth remains Profound yes
but effusive laughter rekindles fallen arches.

Secrets

By Laura Doherty

There's a door in the old lady's rock wall
No one knows it but she
Who presses the secret to the sea and has it all to herself
Except for me.
I watch and think I know
And that is enough for now.

Waiting

By Laura Doherty

They sat
Those three
In chairs carved one long winter from their own trees
With eyes as blue as the sea they watched
And waited.

A study in Reds, Portsmouth, N.H., by Anne Carleton. Available through Pierce Galleries of Hingham. (Oil on board.)

Rhythms

By Laura Doherty

He was never my friend
Or, for that matter, anyone else's
Though, sometimes he'd nod as he brought in his catch.
But always, he was quiet
A man of the sea
And like it.
His face chiseled as the waves he rode,
The rhythm of the tides was in his work
And we knew it could never be ours.

Day after day, we watched
As Summer slipped slowly on
When, on a day like any other,
He returned from the sea to a different beat.
His hand swollen with the colors of poison
He asked our help
And it was given
Though we were not ready
Nor would we ever be.

Citizens lobby selectmen to halt gypsy moth spray

The Concerned Citizens for Sensible Gypsy Moth Control hit selectmen with a long list of questions at the regular meeting last week.

Because of time constraints only 25 of some 50 questions were posed to selectmen by group leaders Billie Berents and Linda Wakeman.

Selectmen declined to comment on a letter from Gregor McGregor, the Boston lawyer retained to oppose aerial spraying of Sevin. Board members had only received the letter a few hours before the meeting and wanted to examine it thoroughly before commenting.

A notice from the Department of Environmental Management (DEM), Division of State Forests and Parks which recommended use of Bacillus thuringiensis (B.t.), hadn't been seen by selectmen until March 30 when the residents brought it to the board's attention.

The letter was dated January 29 and was addressed to Mayor and Boards of Selectmen in Massachusetts.

Apparently the notice was filed with the reading material at the selectmen's office. None of the board members recalled reading the notice.

The citizen's group quizzed selectmen on their advertising and bid procedures in securing the Hanson company, C&W Ag-Air for the gypsy moth control project. In response to questions from the group, Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said town counsel had only reviewed the section of the contract dealing with insurance coverage. The town increased its insurance coverage as advised by town counsel.

Several group members told selectmen that in regard to insurance coverage within the contract protects Ag-Air and not the town.

What was the board of health's response to the proposed aerial spraying of Sevin-4 oil? At December's Town Meeting the Health Board was against aerial spraying with Sevin. In April, the Health Board sent a letter to selectmen which stated their opposition to spraying with Sevin.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the board of health should have acted betore Town Meeting and come out more strongly on the issue. "Of all boards...they should be right on top of it. They were not on top of it...this was the time when they should have come out and explained what was wrong with it (Sevin) and why," Laugelle said.

Residents at the selectmen's meeting said they hoped the town would follow through on two promises. Voters at town meeting were told that Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle would be aboard the helicopter during the spraying and that any property owners could be excluded from the spray if desired.

McArthur said the group members had a "good point" and that besides spraying with Sevin those two additional services should be carried out since it was the intent of the article which was voted by Town Meeting in December. Berents said, "I think the intent should be carried through."

Wakeman said that many people voted on the assurance that people's property would be omitted.

Ainslie said the helicopter would make a clean sweep of the town and would fly over property but would not spray while passing where flags are displayed.

The dozen members at the selectmen's meeting wanted to know if the town was planning to place flags on the school boundaries. Selectmen said the flags would not be necessary since Peter Laugelle would be aboard the helicopter to assist the pilot.

The concerned citizens wanted to know the cancellation cost of the gypsy moth control project and the cost of using B.t. Berents said she had priced B.t. at $22 per acre. The contract with C&W Ag-Air calls for the distribution of Sevin at $9.90 per acre. Selectmen did not say what the cancellation cost would be.

How many years of experience does the Ag-Air pilot have? According to selectmen, the pilot, Dan Clark, has flown for 40 years and has been named one of the top 18 operators among 3500 in the country.

Following the selectmen's meeting, Berents spoke for the Concerned Citizens for Sensible Gypsy Moth Control. "We want people to be aware of what is going to happen."

In regard to flag display for exclusion from the spray, Berents said, "If we all have to do this, we would like some help from the town." Berents would like assistance from the town in getting the flags on tree tops and some hints on how to make the flags.

Bob Sweeney said, "I think the selectmen are insensitive to the citizens' wishes."

Statement from the Citizens for Sensible Gypsy Moth Control: "We are not against aerial spraying but we do not want Sevin to be the control material — we very much wish that a safe alternative will be used."

The group also listed a philosophical question to the selectmen: "Does the Town Meeting have a right to vote on this kind of question? Do they have a right to impose this kind of a potential health hazard on the minority, for example, children and those who didn't vote on it? Children weren't at Town Meeting and can't vote."

In the letter to the selectmen chairman, McGregor warned the town that it will face law suits if property is sprayed which was supposed to be excluded.

The letter states: "I have advised my clients that your spraying may constitute a trespass as to those persons whose property is sprayed, or impacted by unreasonable drift away from the place of spraying, after notifying you of their desire for exclusion from the program. If mistakes are made in the spraying, you may also be held liable for negligence. Of course, beekeepers who suffer injury after following your instructions will have an excellent claim for relief, as will citizens who experience property damage or personal injury."

Throughout the letter from McGregor, Peter Laugelle's name was spelled incorrectly (Langelle).

Fighting back against gypsy moths

What can be done to reduce the Gypsy Moths?

—Look for egg masses (small, buff colored, fuzzy patches) on tree trunks, stone walls, wood piles, or behind shutters.

—Destroy egg mass cases by painting with creosote, kerosene, or turpentine, or scrape them into a can of detergent and water. (If you scrape them off onto the ground, many will still hatch.)

—In late May and early June caterpillars have grown larger and begin to defoliate trees, feeding at night and descending during the day to hide from predators. Catch caterpillars with wide strips of burlap tied around the trunk at a convenient height. Fold the top half down to form a skirt. Each day knock them off from under the fold into a can of soapy water, or place a band of tree wrap or aluminum foil around the tree trunk. Apply a strip of Tanglefoot (available at garden supply stores). This sticky substance will trap caterpillars.

—Fertilize and water trees now!

For more information contact the Mass. Aud bon Society in Lincoln, Ma. 259-9500 or call the Gypsy Moth Hotline 1-582-8457.

Regional gypsy moth meeting draws few takers

The people who are fighting chemical spraying to kill the gypsy moth population tried to have a regional meeting Monday.

It turned out most of the anti-Sevin people were too busy doing battle against the stuff in their own towns to meet in their common cause.

People from 12 communities were invited.

But there was low attendance at the regional gypsy moth informational meeting at Center Library in Pembroke. Some 15 Pembroke residents gathered at the library for a discussion before heading to the Pembroke selectmen's meeting which had gypsy moths on the agenda at 8:30 p.m.

Possible reasons for the low attendance rate had something to do with the fact that moths were on the agenda at other meetings in surrounding towns. In Hingham, town meeting voters disapproved an aerial spraying project with Sevin. Gpysy moths were also on the agenda at the Duxbury and Pembroke selectmen's meetings.

Concerned citizens from Pembroke are planning to declare the original town meeting vote on the gypsy moth aerial project as invalid. Gregor McGregor, a Boston environmental lawyer, has advised that the town doesn't have the legal authority to trespass on private property.

Helen Oshima explained a plan to the audience on Monday in which concerned citizens would conduct a telephone poll to encourage those voters who oppose the aerial project to attend town meeting next month.

Several towns' spraying efforts have not been successful in past years. Oshima said that Sharon sprayed aerially with Seven for the past nine years, and finally had to stop this year because they were out of money. Nine years of spraying hardly decreased the gypsy moth population in Sharon, she said. North Attleboro has been sprayed for the past ten years — the results were disappointing, according to a local radio report.

When asked what pregnant women should do, Oshima responded, "I'd go visit a friend out of town for a few days."

As in Cohasset, Pembroke residents are upset with the requirements for spray exclusion regarding flag display atop the property's tallest trees.

Oshima said with McGregor's letter, "We're hoping that the effort of the letter would change the minds of selectmen...and that they would take advantage of alternatives to spraying with Sevin.

Concerned citizens of Pembroke spent about $300 in legal services and $200 for flyer informaion. The group held a flea market and raffle to raise money for the group's expenses.

Living with Gypsy Moth

Cohasset kids swim at Quincy YMCA

The 27th annual synchronized swimming show will be presented Tuesday and Wednesday, May 4 and 5 at 7:45 p.m. at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy. The ticket price is $1.25.

There are approximately 50 swimmers in the show, ranging in age from eight to 60 plus years old. The swimmers come from every town in the South Shore area. Those involved from Cohasset are: Carol Henry (Mrs. William), director of the show and instructor of the advanced teen group, Jean Stevens (Mrs Ernest), instructor of one of the women's groups, and swimmers Annie Henry, Deer Hill School and Suzie Collins and Jeannie Baccari, Cohasset High School.

The theme this year is entitled "As Time Goes By." The story centers around the life of a baby girl as she grows from childhood through the teen years to maturity. Music will include selections from "Bye, Bye Birdie," "Grease," "Hello Dolly" and "Lost Horizon" and artists such as Barbara Streisand, Burt Bacharach, Johnny Mathis and Henry Mancini. Come and see the newest sport of the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

Christian Science lecture nearby

Christian healing, says Christian Science lecturer Ralph C. Charbeneau, relates not only to one's health but to all aspects of business and "the business of living." In an upcoming lecture on Saturday, May 1, at 11 a.m. in First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hingham, 386 Main Street, he will focus on "The Healing Power of God in Business."

Referring to past experiences from his own business career, Mr. Charbeneau of Williamsburg, Virginia, makes strong claims for the effectiveness of Christian prayer in business relationships. Much of the Charbeneau lecture challenges business theories claiming that success can be won only through practicing self-interest and bending ethical standards. The lecturer relates a number of instances showing the "healing power" of Christian prayer — of unswerving integrity and brotherly love — in business dealings.

He indicates that one's business — whatever it may be — as a Christian involves something far deeper than mere human goodness and honesty, however important these are. It requires actively and unselfishly seeking God's guidance and seeing one's colleagues "as God sees them." Seeing our fellowmen as "the image and likeness of God," Mr. Charbeneau states, "Resolves business troubles. Jesus saw the real man, the only man there is, and this view brought healing wherever he went."

Charbeneau finds in the Bible ample direction for daily business guidance — in the example of Christ Jesus and in the teachings of the prophets and apostles. "What doth the Lord require of thee," he asks, quoting the Biblical book of Micah, "but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Finding more and more of his time devoted to the healing practice of Christian Science and the service of his church, he moved from an active business career to the full-time healing ministry as a Christian Science practitioner. Recently he was elected to the Christian Board of Lectureship, and his lecture here is sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hingham. He'll be introduced at next Saturday's hour-long lecture by William B. Lynch, First Reader.

Obituary

F. Brittain Kennedy

F. Brittain Kennedy, 77, of Cohasset, owner of a Boston investment firm for many years and a national Boy Scout leader, died Saturday in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a long illness.

He was born in Medford, was a graduate of Boston Latin School and earned a degree in business administration at Boston University.

He had lived in Newton for many years before moving to Cohasset 25 years ago.

A Boston investor in the municipal bonds market, he founded his own firm in the late 1920s. About five years before his retirement, his firm, F. Brittain Kennedy Inc., joined the investment firm of Moors and Cabot Company, Boston.

Active in many civic and business organizations, he also held leadership roles for many years in the Boy Scouts. He was a member of the national executive board of the scouts.

Kennedy's contribution to scouting was recognized by several awards including the Silver Beaver award for local activities, the Silver Antelope award for regional contributions to scouting and the Silver Buffalo award for national activities.

He was a trustee of Lahey Clinic in Burlington, and was a member of the Downtown Club of Boston, the Municipal Bond Club of Boston, Cohasset Country Club and Brae Burn Country Club of Newton.

He was also a former member of the Union Club of Boston and the Union League Club of New York. He was a former vestryman and senior warden of the Church of Good Shepherd of Waban.

During World War II, he was a chief air raid warden in Newton and a member of the Duxbury Coast Guard Flotilla.

He leaves his wife, Kathryn (James) Kennedy; a son, F. Brittain Kennedy Jr. of Denver, Colo., and a daughter, Martha Kennedy Fitch of Scituate; a sister, Lorena VanBearce of Scituate; seven grandchildren and three great grandsons.

A memorial funeral service was conducted Wednesday in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Old Colony Council, Boy Scouts of America, 2438 Washington St., Canton, 02021, or Lahey Clinic, 41 Mill Road, Box 541, Burlington, 01805.

> There are from time to time mornings, both in summer and in winter, when especially the world seems to begin anew...mornings of creation, I call them. In the midst of these marks of creative energy recently active, while the sun is rising with more than usual splendor, I look back...for the era of which no man ever rose early enough. A morning carries us back beyond the Mosaic creation, where crystallizations are fresh and unmelted. It is the House and garden tour

Cohasset in the Spring, a house and garden tour, will be sponsored by the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association on May 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Tickets are now available for this welcoming in of springtime, which features some of Cohasset's charming homes, as well as one of its historic landmarks.

Your house and garden tour begins at the historic Panagia Church (Pope Memorial), then follows the map to three homes nestled on the original Pope estate. From there the map, which is a part of your ticket, leads you to a shuttling area as described, which will carry you to an Edwardian style residence built in 1904 and famous for its expansive ballroom and scenic harbor view. Your next stop will be at a lovely English garden setting where Greek pastries and coffee will be served while you meander through the blooming shrubs and flowers.

Following this spring garden stroll, your map leads you to another shuttle area, where you will be taken to Cohasset's own Castle Hill; another Town landmark constructed in 1928-1930. The evening portion of the tour will feature wine and cheese to be served in the ballroom of the Edwardian home.

Chairman is Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos of Cohasset, 383-9071; Honorary Chairman, Mrs. John Sedell of Scituate; Co-Chairman, Miss Jane Marshall of Cohasset, 383-9236, and Hospitality Chairman, Mrs. Mary Menakos of Scituate.

Your springtime house and garden tour awaits you, May 1.

Tuberculosis Detection Clinic

A Tuberculosis Detection Clinic for food handlers working in Cohasset will be conducted on May 5 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The Clinic will be held at the Social Service League office, 16 Highland Avenue. No appointment is necessary.

The mantoux tests will be read on Friday, May 7 between 9 and 11 a.m. and Food Handlers certificates will be issued. All food handlers working in Cohasset must have a current food handlers certificate. Those who are allergic to eggs or egg products will not be tested. Mantoux tests are also done during regular Board of Health office hours 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 16 Highland Avenue. If there are any questions call the Social Service League office 383-0771 or the Board of Health 383-1664.

Art Center classes rescheduled

Several South Shore Art Center classes will start one week later than originally scheduled because of the April surprise snowstorm. Photography with Fortin is re-scheduled to begin Monday, May 3; Pastel Portraiture with Pratt and Portrait with Micarelli are both re-scheduled to begin Tuesday, May 4; Introductory Painting with Tandy is re-scheduled to start on Thursday, May 6. Classes that will start on schedule the week of April 26 but will continue to take additional enrollments are: Watercolor with Patrick on Wednesday mornings; Darkroom Photography with Wasko, Wednesday evenings; Children's Art Workshop, Wednesday afternoons and Creative Drawing and Painting with Kalish on Friday mornings.

For further information on these and other South Shore Art Center special workshops telephone 383-9548.

'Camelot' tickets still available

Hingham Civic Music Theater's production of "Camelot" boasts a large singing and dancing chorus from Hingham and many of the surrounding communities. Those chosen to appear in "Camelot" are as follows: Shirley and Larry MacDonald, Maureen Palmer, Jamie McInnis, Sandy Combs, Bernie Davis, Bruce Palmer, Alan Misler, Cam DiGrazzio, Andy Mahoney, Jill McDonough, Amara Gavrin, Kim Karlberg, Elaine Mullen, Jenny Carlin, Lauri Niegro, Letitia Riel, Donald Berry, Phil MacKay, Lee-Ann Swider, Sonia Thomas, Donna Savage, Sharon Doherty, Violet MacDonald, Patty Messner, Mell Caruso, Helen Long, Jane Hurnowicz, Corrine Kennedy, Elaine Morgan, Russel Ruffino, Jean Neil, Barbara McSwann, Bill Morgan, Peter O'Loughlin, and Kitty Lambert.

"Camelot" will be performed at Hingham High School on April 23, 24, 30 and May 1 at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, April 25 at 2 p.m. (children must be accompanied by an adult). Tickets are available at the Hingham Library and Book Store as well as from cast members. Tickets are $5 for the evening performances and $3 for the Sunday matinee. For ticket information call Sandra Moore, 749-6419 or Ellen Bartolotti, 749-7894.

Book sale donations needed

The Annual Friends of Cohasset Library Book Sale will take place on May 21 and 22 at the South Main Street Library. Donations of used hardcover and paperback books, as well as children's books, magazines, and records are requested now by the Friends from Cohasset readers. Donations may be delivered to the library anytime during regular hours (Monday and Tuesday, 9-9; Wednesday, closed; Thursday and Friday, 9-6; Saturday, 9-5; and Sunday, 2-5).

The Friends provide valuable assistance to the library in many ways. In addition to organizing volunteers who give many hours of help in the library, they deliver books to nursing homes and shut-ins, purchase books and furnishings for the library and Boston museum passes for Cohasset residents, sponsor programs, and help improve communications between the community and the library.

Your used book contributions will be added to library discards, which combined, will provide for the best book bargains this spring.

'Mardi Gras in May'

Time is growing short to get advance tickets for "Mardi Gras in May," the benefit Beaux Arts Ball sponsored by the South Shore Art Center to be held Saturday, May 1 at Dreamwold in Scituate.

Ticket holders must be present to win the prizes announced by the committee; the costume award will be a watercolor by well-known artist Eugene Conlon while the door prizes will include a print "Fragments" by Berj Kailian of Weymouth, a drawing "Bogart" by Irena Roman of Scituate, a print "Smile at the Foot of the Ladder" by Jim Ann Howard of Scituate and a watercolor "Trees" by Joan Marson of Hingham. Three selected bottles of liqueur have also been donated as door prizes for lucky ticket holders. Drawings for the prizes will take place several times during the evening of festivities which starts at 8 and ends at midnight. Costume hats and masks are optional.

Advance tickets at $12 per person are available at the Art Center headquarters at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, at Schnabels Gallery in Hingham or from the following ticket committee members: Mrs. David Lizzotte, Norwell/Hanover; Anita Franks, Plymouth; Mrs. Vahan Kailian, Weymouth; Mrs. Donald Summers, Cohasset; Mrs. David Avery, Marshfield; Mrs. Stephen Tooker, Scituate; Mrs. Sydney Kalish, Quincy; Mrs. Henry du Laurence, Hingham. Tickets will be available at the door at $15 per person.

Ticket donations are tax deductible and will underwrite the South Shore Art Center class programs and building fund. For further information, telephone 383-9548.

Antique show and sale

The Beechwood Congregational Church will hold their sixth annual antique show and sale at the Cohasset Town Hall on Friday, June 4 from noon to 9 p.m. and on Saturday, June 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Antiques such as fine glassware, primitives, linens, clocks, furniture, jewelry, books and much more will be on display and for sale. There is ample parking and a public snack bar.

People like to collect antiques because they are a work of art that reminds people of an earlier time. Antiques are often works of art, such as painting or sculpture, but they can also be practical items such as furniture, lamps, household utensils, tools, musical instruments, and fine carpets.

This year, there will be a variety of sandwiches, hot dogs, coffee, tea, cold drinks and squares next door at the Second Congregational Church. Home baked goods will be available at the ticket area.

The raffle this year includes a variety of prizes, gift certificates, and dinners. Many thanks to the many local merchants who donated generously to our raffle. Tickets may be purchased from Linda Graves, Cheryl Kristiansen, and Beechwood Congregational Church members or at the door. The drawing for the raffle will be held at 3 p.m. on June 5, at the Town Hall.

Discount tickets are available through dealers and from Geraldine Ainslie and Linda Graves of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Come take a walk in the past and meet the many antique dealers from near and far who will be more than glad to talk to you about antiques and their history — an era where craftsmen took real pride in their work.

Three tennis girls go undefeated

Three members of the girls' tennis team are undefeated in South Shore League competition. Senior co-captain, Sue Dalrymple, has won three matches in the second singles spot.

She has conquered opponents from Duxbury, 6-2, 6-1; East Bridgewater, 6-0, 6-2, and Norwell, 6-3, 6-2. Dalrymple has not lost a set this season and has won a total of 30 games while losing 10 to opponents.

The first doubles team of co-captain Karen Murphy and Joy Pratt remained undefeated with three triumphs over Norwell, Easties and Duxbury.

Dalrymple, Murphy and Pratt defeated their male opponents, 6-2, 6-3, in recent action against East Bridgewater. Because there is no boys' team, three boys are allowed to compete with the girls.

Cohasset Coach Peggy Lynch said the girls were experienced with the male opponents since they played them last year. When asked if the boys play at full strength, Lynch said they don't ease up, "They pound the ball...they play like boys."

Cohasset beat Middleboro, 5-0 before school vacation. Winners for Cohasset were: Mia Graham, first singles; Krissie Ralff, second singles; Pratt, third singles; Diane Mullen and Jennie Mitman, first doubles; Elaine Mullen and Kate Cowan, second doubles.

The Skippers also lost to Duxbury, two weeks ago, by a 3-2 score. Dalrymple won the second singles match, 6-2, 6-1.

In first doubles, Murphy and Pratt won the first set which was a tie breaker, 8-6. The Cohasset duo clinched the victory with a 6-4 win in the second set.

Graham lost the first singles match in a three-set battle, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4. Ralff was defeated by Duxbury's third singles player, 6-1, 6-2. Diane Mullen and Mitman lost in the second doubles match. It came down to the third set in second doubles action, where Duxbury secured the victory with a 6-3 third set score. The Duxbury doubles team won the first set 6-4 and lost the second 4-6.

At Norwell on Monday, the Skippers defeated the Norwell Clippers, 4-1. Ralff, a junior, won the third singles match 6-7, 6-2, 6-1. She rebounded from the first set which was lost in a tiebreaker situation.

The Cohasset girls' tennis squad is 3-1 in the South Shore League. The Skippers are scheduled to play Rockland and Abington this week.

Varsity baseball falls to Norwell

The Cohasset varsity baseball team was defeated by Norwell on Monday, 7-5. The Skipper squad dropped to 1-3 in the South Shore League.

Senior co-captain Kevin Dooley left the mound after three innings with Cohasset down by two, 5-3. Junior Bob Meers pitched the last four innings for the Skippers and allowed two runs.

Big hitters for Cohasset were Dooley with a double, and sophomore Lee Reid with two timely singles. Coach Tom Burnell said Reid played a solid game at shortstop.

Burnell was encouraged with the team defense and precise pitching of Meers. Meers had been out with a shoulder injury since the opening game versus Middleboro. Cohasset triumphed over the Sachems, 6-2.

Senior Paul Buckley had two nice plays at first base, said Burnell. Buckley saved a wide throw and fell backwards to tag the bag for the putout. He also fielded a hard-hit grounder for another out at first.

Even though the Skippers lost to Norwell, Burnell said the Cohasset squad played better than in previous games. Against Norwell, the Skippers had one error and five hits. Norwell collected eight hits.

Before vacation, the Skippers lost to Duxbury, 13-5 and East Bridgewater, 13-10. Cohasset is scheduled to play Rockland and Abington this week.

Other players on the Cohasset baseball team are:Torin Sweeney, Mark Gunnville, co-captain Joe Becker, Rich Evans, Dana Infusino, Bob Dor[illegible], Andy Songer, Biff Broderick, Jack Malon[illegible], Bi[illegible] Cuff, Tom Stanford and Lee Wilson.

Now's the time . . .

. . . to open your pool,
We are now arranging appointments for pool openings starting at $70.00 plus chemicals.

HTH is offering our customers a factory rebate of $10.00 when you buy 100 lbs. of chlorine for $109.95.

We will do a free "10 test" water analysis. And so that you can enjoy your swimming season to the fullest, we offer free delivery on orders over $25.00 and a 10% discount on all orders over $50.00.

. . . to fix that leak,
We are experienced in leak detection and we will do minor and major pool repairs.

We offer weekly or monthly cleaning services to keep your pool in the best condition and ready for all this summer's special occasions.

. . . to put in the pool you wanted last year when temperatures reached 100°,
We will work with you to design a pool to fit your needs and site. A large swimming pool? A lap pool? A spa or hot tub? Choose from over 100 different styles made of stainless steel, aluminum, galvanized steel or structural polymer. Pools start at $4000.00.

. . . or to install a solar blanket.
To make the most of your pool investment by lengthening your swimming season, ask us about our solar blanket and other special pool accessories.

We have the best prices in the area. Please call and compare.

Water Dept. facing $ shortages, so non-payers may face shutoffs

People who let their water bills go unpaid for more than 90 days may soon find their water service disconnected.

Ben Curley, water department superintendent, says he's about to begin a program of water shut-offs that will affect hundreds of homes in town.

That measure — which seems fairly drastic — is the result of a mounting water department deficit.

By now the water department is owed $160,000. Last year the department ended the fiscal year with a $60,000 deficit. The deficits are created by slow and non-payment of water bills.

"We have to have the money to operate the department," Curley said. "We don't use town tax money. The water revenue is our only means of operation."

Last year when faced with the deficit, the water commissioners placed an interest charge on late-paid bills and began the system of shutting off water to places with large bills.

Last year there was a problem with a number of people owing more than $500. This year the problem has changed. The number of people who owe $200 has increased dramatically. There are few owing larger bills.

"I guess people felt as long as they only owed $200 they'd be okay," Curley said. The shut-offs last year involved people owing the larger amounts.

"Of course we can't shut the whole town off at once," Curley commented.

Within the next two weeks he plans to implement a program that will hit all parts of town in a haphazard fashion.

"Due to personnel the shut-offs will be scattered," he explained.

Anyone owing a water bill — no matter how small — for more than 90 days will be subject to shut-off.

The water will be turned back on sometime the next day due to a state law that gives the board of health the right to insist water be available to a household.

The town has had a history of people paying water bills slowly. Many people were accustomed in the past to allowing the bills to accumulate and eventually take the form of a water lient.

Curley said that was fine in the days when the department operated with a surplus. Those days ended with construction of the new water treatment plant. About half the water revenue that goes into the department goes straight out to pay off the bond and interest.

Crowell submits revised drug policy

By Donna Cogliano

School Supt. Eugene Crowell submitted a revised draft of the drug and alcohol policy to the school committee Monday.

The committee is scheduled to amend or accept the policy at their next meeting Monday, May 17.

After submission of the draft guide in April, the committee suggested the document be divided into three sections.

— A brief but flexible policy statement for school committee adoption.

— The administrative procedure and guidelines which would set forth the rules for implementation of the policy.

— An informational or educational section which would present pertinent facts to the students, parents and community.

The committee will tackle implementation of the guidelines after the policy section is approved. Administrative procedures and implementation of the policy concerns the issues of individual and locker searches. At a previous meeting, Rosee Duffy asked that a parent be present during any search.

The following draft of the drug and alcohol policy statement will be considered for adoption by the school committee at their next meeting.

Now there is a potential zoning problem

The latest on gypsy moths: confusion

The latest word on the town's plans for spraying to kill gypsy moths is: CONFUSION

One Selectman, Mary Jane McArthur, is planning to cover her car to prevent damage when the spraying happens later this month.

Selectmen plan to talk about the topic again at their meeting at town hall tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m.

The new problem is that the flags the town wants people to use to mark off their property to keep the aerial spraying away may violate the town's own zoning bylaw.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson said he has a request from selectmen to look into zoning questions.

The flags required to keep the helicopter from spraying a piece of land are supposed to be placed on the property line and four feet above the trees.

As most people in town know, the town has been fighting a family on Gammons Road for several years arguing that a fence or any structure must meet the setbacks of the zoning bylaw.

The town also has a bylaw restricting the height of things to something far lower than treetops.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, doesn't think there will be a problem. He doesn't think flagpoles are restricted.

McArthur made the comment about the cars at last week's selectmen's meeting after reading from a Union Carbide Report on the effects Sevin 4-oil has on automobile paint finishes.

Sevin 4-oil, made by Union Carbide, is used in gypsy moth spraying and will be used in Cohasset when the town is sprayed on two mornings between May 15 and June 1.

According to the report, there were some faint spots (loss of gloss) on white and metallic blue automobile panels that could be attributed to Sevin 4-oil. On the other hand, a single cleaning followed by a waxing will remove the spots and restore the gloss, the report said.

A series of tests were performed on automobile paint finishes last year to determine how they would be affected by Sevin 4-oil.

The report said: "Sevin 4-oil is an oil-based carbaryl formulation and potentially provides a much greater chance for damage to automobile paint finishes than wettable powder."

Two types of tests — immersion and spotting — were performed on four different colored automobile panels. The studies were done on white, tan, metallic blue and metallic gold lacquer panels.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur reported that the town counselor, Blake Thaxter, is owrking on a redraft of the contract with C and W AgAir Inc., on the question of chemical liability. He is also working on the trespassing issue.

Taxter has sent a revised draft of the contract to AgAir, but selectmen have not yet received a response. The revised contract should clarify liability for personal injury which might result from use of the pesticide "Sevin."

The revised draft has been sent to the company.

New home for the S.S. Arts Center?

The South Shore Art Center may move from its quaint red building on Ripley Road to more spacious accommodations.

Ubaldo DiBenedetto, president of the arts group, told frolickers at the Beaux Arts Ball Saturday night that the center has a $50,000 challenge grant that may help accomplish the move. They have until December to raise $50,000 to obtain the grant.

Where might the center go?

Margaret Dillon, executive director of the center, said the membership has been surveyed on just that question.

She said a press release on that survey with a one for the general public would be sent out from the center sometime this week.

It is known the center has looked into details of obtaining property in the Hingham Ammunition Depot.

The present building at the edge of Cohasset Village is considered too small. Members of the center have been talking about moving to new quarters for sometime.

They hope to own rather than lease their new quarters.

Cohasset's week ...

The license report

April was a big month for dog and fishing licenses at the town clerk's office. Assistant town clerk Frances Marks granted 23 fishing permits and 133 dog licenses.

Included in the dog licenses were 65 males, 65 spayed females and three females. Three kennels were also licensed. Marks estimated 15 dog licenses as new, while the rest were renewals.

Three Cohasset births and two deaths were reported at town hall. Marks said two marriage intentions were taken out during April.

Calling Gino DiGirolamo

Gino DiGirolamo has ice tea glasses waiting at the Mariner Newspaper office, 58 Main St., Marshfield. Gino won those at the open house drawing, April 16 in celebration of the Marshfield Mariner's 10th anniversary. Gino, call us or stop by to pick up the glasses, please, before the staff starts using them.

Community Center gift

The Board of Directors of the Community Center of Cohasset has received a donation from David Cutler, Publisher of the Cohasset Mariner.

The donation is a result of a subscription drive for that newspaper in Cohasset, and will be used for program development. Board members underline their appreciation to Mr. Cutler for his interest in the Center and the community.

Dog restrainment

A black and white dalmatian dog of 130 Doane St. was ordered restrained by selectmen last week. The board's vote was 2-0 with Rocco Laugelle absent (he attended a Norfolk County selectmen's meeting).

Dog Officer Joanne Cogill recommended restraint of the dog owned by Louis Maurer following an incident on Sunday, April 25. Coghill had advised Mrs. Mauer to restrain the dog prior to the selectmen's vote. According to Coghill the dog was restrained.

The restraining order stems from a recent Sunday morning incident where it was reported that the Dalmatian entered the Messner yard at 120 Doane St. and attacked a five month-old Siamese kitten. A 16 year-old Messner girl broke up the attack.

The kitten was taken to the veterinarian with a punctured lung and broken ribs. The kitten's survival was questionable.

Firefighter dinner dance

Cohasset firefighters will honor Deputy Chief Thomas Hernan and Firefighters Ralph Perroncello, Ernest Sullivan and William Nickerson at a dinner dance this month.

The occasion will be at Dreamwold, 74 Branch St., Scituate, Friday, May 14. Cocktails will be served at 7 with dinner to follow at 8:15.

The dinner, catered by Farrelly Caterers, will be family style roast beef and turkey with all the trimmings. Music will be by "The Emanons" with dancing until 1.

Tickets are $17 per person and are available at the Cohasset Fire Department Headquarters, 44 Elm St.

Tickets may be reserved by sending a check payable to "C.P.F. Local 2804," to 44 Elm St., Cohasset, Ma. 02025. Reserved tickets may be picked up at the door. For further information, call the fire department at 383-0261.

Conway kicks off campaign

Residents of several area towns were present, Sunday, at the home of Fran and Austin O'Toole to help Jack Conway kick off his campaign for U.S. Congressman from this district.

Conway who has already spent a good deal of time out meeting the voters told those present that the number one concern voiced by the people he has been meeting was the state of the economy. He underlined the necessity of bringing more job opportunities to the area.

Pier work on hold

All work on the Fisherman's Pier project on Government Island is on hold until disputes are resolved surrounding the awarding of the consultant's contract.

The selection of the consulting firm of Anderson-Nichols has been challenged by several other bidders for the consulting work. The challenges are being examined by the Office of Coastal Zone Management in Boston, which asked the town to cease work on the contract until the challenges are settled.

At last week's selectmen's meeting, the board approved a letter from Harbor Committee Chairman Charles Fink which sought a two-month extension from CZM for completion of the consulting work.

The contract was awarded to Anderson-Nichols Feb. 17. Work was to be completed between May 1 to June 30.

If Anderson-Nichols is disqualified as the consultant, the town would need additional time to select a new consultant.

Selectmen say no to regional water proposal

New legislation that would create a series of regional water districts in Massachusetts received a resounding thumbs down from Cohasset selectmen last week.

In rejecting the proposal for a regional district stretching from Cohasset to Seekonk, Selectmen Henry Ainslie Jr. and Mary Jane McArthur pointed out that Cohasset has already spent a substantial amount of money to solve its own water problems.

Under the regional plan, the ample supple of water in towns like Cohasset could be used to solve water problems in other communities, particularly in Brockton which has been looking for water beyond its borders for many years.

The regional water plan was introduced by state environmental leaders and calls for a 34-town regional district that would include Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Hanover.

The latest on gypsy moths...

"But we've gotten no reply at all," said McArthur.

Those residents who want their properties excluded from the aerial spray next month can expect no help from the town in marking boundries with fluorescent orange flags atop the tallest trees on their property lines.

"What if boils down to is that we don't have the money, equipment or authority to do so," said Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie, Jr.

According to opinions from town counsel and Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, selectmen said last Wednesday, the town should not help residents mount their exclusion flags. Ainslie said, the main problem is the lack of insurance for Laugelle's men when working on private land.

In a memo to selectmen, Laugelle said he also lacked the manpower to take on additional work. "It has been the policy of the Cohasset tree and park department not to enter private property except for emergency services."

Willa Berents of the Concerned Citizens for Sensible Gypsy Moth Control told the board that many residents aren't planning to fill out the exclusion forms. "They are reluctant to hand the form in," she said "because they feel they can't comply with AgAir's wishes."

"AgAir has given us an almost impossible task and the rights of nonconsenting citizens are being suppressed.

Berents summed up the situation this way: the town won't trespass on land to assist with the boundary markings but they will trespass in air space above properties to spray the Sevin 4-oil.

"We may very well wind up not spraying anything ever again, even street spraying," McArthur responded.

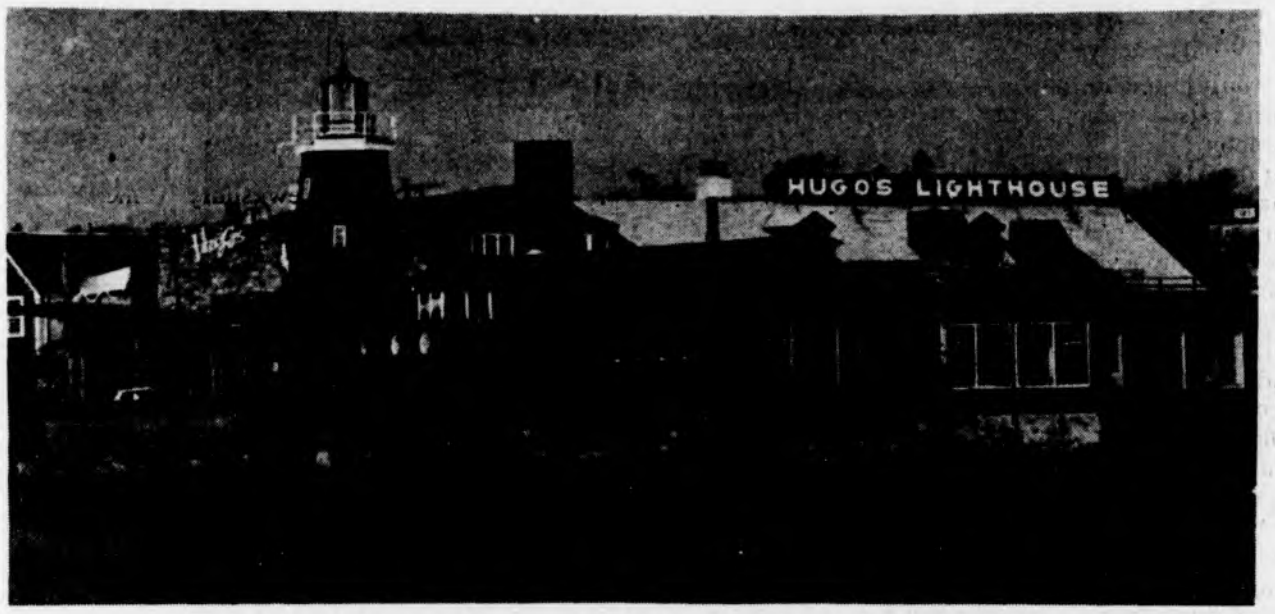
Hugo's to open with a new look on May 17

Hugo's Lighthouse, the weathered old fisherman's shack that evolved into one of New England's best known eating places, will re-open Monday, May 17, after extensive renovations.

The 600-seat restaurant, overlooking Cohasset Harbor, has been a cuisinary landmark on the South Shore for more than half a century. It was recently purchased by Cohasset Cove Associates, a group of Cambridge and North Shore business people.

The restaurant has been closed for several months while new equipment was installed, and the nautical motif refurbished in the dining rooms and lounges with their breathtaking view of the yachts and lobster boats in the harbor.

The new decor will feature a dance floor, cheerful broad-beamed fireplaces, an ocean view from every seat and room to accomodate wedding, anniversary and other parties of up to 250 people.



Heading the new ownership group as president of Cohasset Cove Associates is Walter Guleserian, who is also the owner of the Sheraton Commander Hotel, and Dertads Gourmet Restaurant in Cambridge.

Hugo's will be managed by partners Jay Maguire, in charge of operations, and Dan Leahy, as director of general sales. They are owners of Jake Cassidy Restaurants in Marshfield and Dennisport.

Chef Greg Reid is the former chef and owner of the Port House in Kennebunkport, Maine, a restaurant frequented by the family of Vice President George Bush, who has a summer home in the area.

The new owners also include Joel Abramson, sales manager of GTE; Gary Abramson, restaurant owner; James Collins, a certified public accountant; Edward Guleserian, co-owner of the Sheraton Commander and Dertads Gourmet.

Other owners are: Dr. Alan DerKazarian; Charles R. Laverty, Jr., real estate developer; David Lichter, owner of Broadway Supermarket; Paul Lohnes, president of Cambridge Electric Motor; William O'Brien, banker; Jacqueline Sullivan, retired Filene's executive.

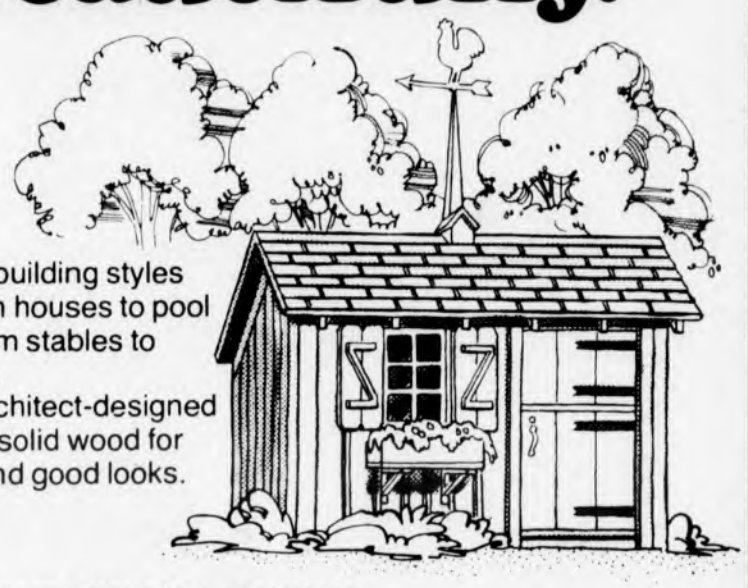
Hugo's Lighthouse will have a new look inside when it reopens May 17.

Also Joseph Tellier, former owner of Chez Dreyful Restaurant, Cambridge; and James Duff of Duff Spring Co.

Henry Brigham Kimball was the owner of the original building at the head of Cohasset Harbor. He bought the catch of the day from local fishermen, and people came for miles to buy his fresh cod, clams, and lobster.

Kimball's son-in-law, Hugo Ormo, began cooking the fish at dockside in 1922. At first, customers sat on lobster pots and barrels. Gradually rough tables and benches were added as the market expanded into a full-fledged restaurant.

Hugo Ormo died in 1946, by which time the restaurant had acquired its international reputation; two years later, it was bought by the late John Carzis.



Cohasset Cove Association bought it from the Carzis estate in February.

The new owners pledge to continue Hugo's Lighthouse as a world class seafood restaurant, retaining an award winning menu that includes Hugo's famous Shore Dinner, baked stuffed sole with lobster sauce and Scallopini Marsala.

Hugo's will be open seven days a week around the year, serving lunch, Sunday brunch, dinner with a full service cocktail lounge featuring live entertainment and dancing.

There are facilities for the handicapped and all major credit cards will be accepted.

Every Walpole small building is built to last. Beautifully.

18 small building styles from garden houses to pool houses, from stables to workshops.

All are architect-designed and built of solid wood for durability and good looks.

Traditional Walpole features include:
- Tongue and groove floor construction
- Pre-stained exterior
- Bolt-joined sections for easy assembly and disassembly
- Working hinged shutters to secure building in the winter
- Strong doors with tumbler-type key locks
- Raintight casement windows with operators
- Long-lasting asphalt shingles on roof
- Modular sections for custom redesign, expansion, or relocation.

Not a race—but fun—raises $2,000

By Donna Cogliano

Through peddle power, nearly 100 Cohasset cyclists raised money for retarded citizens Sunday afternoon.

At the 11th annual Ride-A-Bike, sponsored by the Cohasset Teachers Association, cyclists raised more than $2,000 in pledges from sponsors. Last year, bike riders took in $1,200 for the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens and its local affiliates.

Bicycle riders of all ages took advantage of Sunday's sunshine and rode various routes during a three-hour period (from 1 to 4 p.m.).

Older riders followed an eight-mile course which included the ups and downs of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. Younger riders were offered a shorter course of four miles.

Regardless of which course was covered, many youngsters cruised the respective courses repeatedly. By 3 p.m., several young people had accumulated 16 miles, and were still peddling for dollars.

Five-year-old David Nothnagle was awarded a T-shirt for being the youngest participant in the bike-a-thon. John Linsley, 56, was the eldest bicyclist.

Other T-shirt winners went to Mark Patrolian, 22, who cycled the most miles, 64; and to Jennifer Plante, 8, who collected the most money, $208.

Refreshments were served to participants at Town Hall; cokes were donated from Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Braintree. The communication council provided brownies and various snacks.

The Ride-A-Bike event was not a race, and participants were encouraged to peddle at their own pace and rest when necessary. One girl arrived at the refreshment stand, boasting she lost her mother at the first check-in point.

Several cyclists wore stereo headphones while others strapped radios to the handle bars of their bikes. One mother and son rode the course on a bicycle built for two.

In addition to a couple of flat tires, the sole casuality was to the vehicle driven by Ham and Shirley Tewksbury. The Tewksbury vehicle was supposed to aid stranded bicyclists but it broke down on its first time around the route.

Coordinators and assistants in the Ride-A-Bike event included:

Patrick and Maria Plante, Gene Kent, Ham and Shirley Tewksbury, Mary Brennock, Police Chief John DeBassio, Joe Brown (CocaCola in Braintree). Communication council members: Faith Bowker (president of the Cohasset Teachers Association), Irene Volpe, Ethel Gormley, Carol Wallace, Pat Bowen, Ken Cisneros, Chuck and Nancy McLaughlin, Kearin Dunn, Marie Price, Shirley Manna, Ruth Clark, Taffy Nothnagle, Karen Coyne, Helen Pratt, Mike Weydt, Dottie MacDonald, Alison Ayer, Doreen Flynn, Kevin Soule, Diane and Ken Saleski, Sarah Barrett, Dina Sestito, Anna Plante, and Pat Plante, Jr., Clark Chatterton and Ed Sheehan.

Donations from people who have not sponsored riders would be appreciated by the MARC. Statewide programs for the retarded have been greatly diminished this past year due to lack of funding. Call Pat or Maria Plante, coordinators, at 383-9263, if you can contribute.

☐James Sullivan of Cohasset, a sophomore at Norwich University, was one of four Norwich students who recently presented a paper entitled "Peer Culture in a Military Environment" at Mount Holyoke College.

After reporting the results of extensive research, the Norwich students drew a standing ovation from the other presenters during the 35th Annual Intercollegiate Undergraduate Psychology Conference at Mt. Holyoke College.

The same group of students also presented their research findings at a symposium conducted by the Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences at Champlain College.

Jim is the son of William and Joan Sullivan, 11 Ledge Way.

☐Mrs. Brian Tardiff (the former Brenda Curley) has been promoted to executive secretary to the president of Rumford Graphics in Concord, N.H. She happens to be the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Curley of Stratford, N.H. (formerly of Cohasset).

☐Peter Doggett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doggett , of 12 Hugh Strain Road, graduated last week from Brigham Young University with a Master's degree in Mechanical Engineering. He starts work this week with Douglas Aircraft in Long Beach, Calif.

Earlier in the month, Peter received an award for a paper he presented to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers (Intermountain Region contest) held at the University of New Mexico, in Albuquerque. He was one of two students representing B.Y.U.

☐Al Weisenfluh, happily integrated into his fifth decade, is the holder of a Bronze Medal won in a slalom race recently at Vail, Colorado. Al captured the prize in the "Over 40" race. Well done!!

☐Pat Sargent's pleasant face was missed recently at Dependable Launderers and Cleaners, but she had a good reason for her absence.

She was visiting her new granddaughter, Lauren Patricia, in Tampa, Florida, who was born March 23. Lauren who weighed eight pounds, three ounces at birth, is the first child of Bob and Kathy (Killian) Sargent, formerly of Cohasset.

☐Those of us around town who remember Ken and Pam Grew when Ken was assistant superintendent of schools will be pleased to hear of the success of their oldest daughter, Carolyn, who was recently notified that she has won an impressive scholarship to Boston College.

Carolyn, 17, is the Grafton Senior High School winner of the Worcester Telegram and the Evening Gazette Student Achievement Award this year. She was also a National Merit Scholarship semifinalist and has been a member of the National Honor Society for her sophomore, junior and senior years, and on the school honor roll all four years.

As a result of her performance on a Spanish examination, she was awarded a scholarship for a trip to Spain. Carolyn hopes to study economics and business in preparation for a career in marketing.

☐Several Cohasset decorators are represented in this year's Decorator's Show House in Wellesley. Sir Walter Scott's Library by Philip Smith and Donald Gardner of Creation Interiors is just the place anyone would be most happy to curl up with a good book in — especially with its very impressive collection of toy soldiers.

Marge Benson and Nancy Gesner of Benson and Gesner Interior Design presented a young girl's sitting room with sophistication and style, and Marie Johnston's of Johnston Interiors bath was truly elegant!

☐Several Cohasset students were lucky enough to spend a part of "April in Paris" recently which they visited accompanied by a teacher from the Cohasset High School language department, George Fortin.

The trip was such a success that many of the students are already planning their next one.

☐Over 250 friends and fellow teachers of Everett Dorr attended a special retirement dinner for him this past weekend at the Humarock Lodge in Scituate.

Both past and current faculty members, heads of departments and school superintendents attended the event in honor of "Evie" Dorr, a high school physical education teacher who has been teaching for 32 years. Several presentations were made and Mr. Dorr and his family were treated to a special skit on "the life of Evie Dorr" which was very well received.

☐Over 100 children "Rode a Bike for the Retarded," Sunday, in a special event which will raise about $2,000 for a very worthy cause.

Mrs. Maria Plante, Coordinator of the Ride-A-Bike was especially impressed by the enthusiasm of the participants which, she said, was "fantastic."

Barry candidate for senator

Thomas Barry, a Republican from Duxbury announced his candidacy this week for state senator from the Norfolk and Plymouth district.

The district includes the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth and is represented by Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth.

Barry, 45, is a graduate of Saint Columbville High School, and holds a B.S.B.A. degree from Boston University where he was a finance major. He has a master's degree in Business Administration from Babson College, and holds a certificate in banking from the American Institute of Banking. He has been a data processing professional for the past 24 years.

In 1980 he was reelected to the Republican State Committee and also serves as Assistant Treasurer of that body. He is a former member of the Duxbury Charter Commission, a past president of the Plymouth County Republican Club and a past chairman of the Duxbury Republican Town Committee. He was also a delegate to the 1980 Republican National Convention.

"The state senator from the South Shore should represent the legitimate interests of the people living in these seven towns," Barry said in a statement. "It is his responsibility to initiate and support legislative programs which enhance the economic, political and social well being of our area. Also, this office should not be viewed as a lifetime job for any individuals.

"Unfortunately, this has not been the case for South Shore residents. During the past 12 years, the liberal senator from Weymouth has supported the most wasteful, extravagant and incompetent legislation of any senator ever in the history of this district. Here is a fellow who voted to saddle his constituents with an income tax surtax and then voted himself a nifty pay increase one Halloween night. In recent months he has spent much of his time attempting to lead the 'Bring Back Dukakis' movement, at the expense of his legislative duties. The voters rejected his Halloween payraise; they will also reject him and his pal, Dukakis."

Barry continued, "It is my feeling that out of the host of problems that need to be solved for the South Shore, rising propety taxes and deteriorating transportation facilities are the most pressing priorities. As your state senator I shall aggressively pursue the return of our sales tax dollars and other state revenues to these towns in order to help stabilize local property taxes. In addition, I shall work with any administration to help hammer out a long range program to ensure adequate future transportation services for the South Shore."

Nix the water district

Now do you suppose that if you had told Chub Peabody in 1964 that his aborning M.B.T.A. would grow up to be a high-cost, nil service, ill mannered, inescapable monster for the South Shore, that he would have admitted as much?

"To the contrary!" Governor Peabody, would have said, "Each member town will have its own epresentative on the new agency's Advisory Board. Far from being taxation without representation, the M.B.T.A. is going to bring back your passenger trains so that in a few years' time you won't have those awful jams on Route 3....!"

That's about what Chub would have said, and if you would have believed him we'd like to have you get to know John Bewick, the present Secretary of Environmental Affairs in the Commonwealth.

Mister Secretary Bewick was in Hanover a couple of weeks ago peddling his proposed 34-town Southeastern Massachusetts Water Supply District (S.M.W.S.D.). In so doing he solemnly assured the asembled natives that his lately filed proposal was not an attempt by Brockton's legislators (who tend to be environmentally backward and politically forward) to garner water or money or both from some of their neighbors. The good Secretary also dismissed any M.B.T.A. analogy as "unfounded."

Well, we've boned up on some of the particulars of the water district proposal, and forgive us, Secretary, if as we read the lines of your proposal we are inclined to read between the lines of your assurances.

The lines that give us apoplexy are as follows (as reported recently in the Mariner):

The Commission shall designate sites for future water supply, set water rates, require member communities to place a surcharge above the cost of water production, based on water-use standards developed by the commission, and decide on inter-basin transfers." (Italics ours.)

Secretary, to us "designate sites" could mean, for example, a site in Scituate.

To us "set water rates" could mean, for example, Marshfield's water rates.

To us, "surcharge above the cost of water production" could mean that the environmentally foresighted, for example Cohasset, would be asked to subsidize the politically foresighted, for example Brockton.

To us "inter-basin transfers" could mean that Scituate and Brockton would have equal access to waters of the newly inundated let us call it "Lake Greenbush" (see "designate sites," above).

Now we are not unalterably or philosophically opposed to the inundation and higher taxation of a Mariner town, even if the beneficiary is a non-Mariner city. But like Abe Lincoln, we like our tyranny "pure and unvarnished with the dull alloy of hypocrisy."

If Brockton has failed to provide for its thirst beyond the kettle hole Silver Lake, and if Silver Lake has been running some several hundred inches below normal some several years running, and if Brockton now faces a grave emergency as a consequence of its perennial stupidity, and if the only solution for Brockton is help from its neighbors: pray, let us say so, Mr. Bewick. Pray, sir, don't tell us that you are acting in our interest when you are acting against our interest.

We may indeed be persuaded to support some regional water plan, even some Brockton-bail-out plan, but we do have the wit to comprehend a plan which in its mighty impartiality allows both the banker and the bank robber an equal share of the contents of the get-away car.

In sum, a thousand nos to the water district proposal as it stands. For if we are hyperbolic in envisioning "Lake Greenbush," we are not so in suggesting that the enabling legislation Mr. Bewick has drafted grants far too much power to the proposed agency and that such power would present grave risks for the towns and the taxpayers of the proposed district.

Commentary

A special gift of life

By Paul Steven Stone

I was thinking about how closely we are tied one to another; how the ripples of our lives intermix to create new patterns. I was thinking about the simple deeds we do, and how rarely we watch them spin out to distant and unexpected conclusions.

It was the floor that inspired my thoughts. More exactly, it was the deep waxed shine on top of the floor, which I and a group of companions had put down the evening before.

Here was a case where the whole was greater than the sum of its parts. Something more than a reflection has been added to that room, something greater than a clean, shiny floor. The green linoleum tiles were unified beneath the mirror-like sheen, and the room itself boasted a quality of light that hadn't been there before. I couldn't help but imagine the calming effect such an improvement must have had on the children whose classroom this was; and on their teacher.

The physical world is so often a metaphor for the mental; the clutter in a bedroom, on a dresser, in a backyard so often mirrors the clutter and confusion of the mind. The curious thing is we can attack the mess in the mind by cleaning up the trash in our backyard; that we can order our thoughts by hanging up our clothes and throwing last week's socks into the laundry bin.

So in a way, we not only cleaned and waxed a floor last evening, but we also brought a little light into the minds of the half dozen or more third graders whose room this was; and to their teacher.

Last night we gathered, as we did every Monday, to perform whatever chores were assigned to us. Some of us were doctors, mothers, writers, businessmen, secretaries, and lots of other things. We belong to a school where philosophy was studied in terms of practical possibilities, where ideas were valued for their usefulness in helping one to live happily and productively.

Once a week we met to give attention and care to this building where we held our classes. The cleaning duties were an integral element in our philosophical pursuits, since work done was a gift for others — without regard for personal gain — can lighten the spirit and bring order to the mind.

We had washed and waxed this floor as a gift — a gift to strangers we would probably never meet, and to children for whom none of us felt responsible. And now tonight I was sitting in that same room where the children sat each day, and I was considering the value of such a gift.

What effect did we have on their lives by the simple act of washing and waxing their floor? Was there less commotion today, and more understanding? Did the light that so richly filled the room filter into their mood? Did it make them happier?

What did it mean, I wondered? It was such a simple act. What power could it have had?

This curiosity of mine was more than a casual train of thought. The teacher whose classroom this was had undergone her own metamorphosis earlier this afternoon. She had died of a heart attack at the end of the school day; here in this room with the deep crystaline shine on the floor.

I wasn't thinking about the way she had died on this last day of her life, but on the way she had lived. My thoughts — and hopes — fixed on the light that she had hopefully experienced as a result of the work we had done the night before. I could almost picture her coming into her room this morning and noticing the brightness. It wouldn't have rung bells in her mind, or set off firecrackers, but it would have given her a good start on the day, a little lift when it could have been of most use.

We never know where the things we do may lead, into which corners the ripples of our lives may travel. A word said with love, a floor washed and waxed in a spirit of giving...each has the power to touch someone's life, to make a difference.

A woman died this afternoon, and I had helped bring a little light into her last day of life.

For me, that was a gift that would far outlast the waxed shine that now covered the classroom floor.

'Taming of the Shrew' is wonderful

By Patricia Desmond

The story is one that would be banned by today's feminists.

I'd forgotten all the stereotypes and categorizing of the ancient master. The last time I'd read "The Taming of the Shrew," I was a student, enthralled with the plot, action, humor, mastery that kept the words of Shakespeare alive these past four centuries.

The people of the Elizabethan Companie of Wayts and Players were wonderful. The latest production which continues this weekend at New North Church is one more piece of pure accomplishment for director Judy Holmes, producer Judy Hardy, cast and crew.

It is a lesson that should be drilled into the minds of any female who wonders about her place in the world. Any woman not ready for taming ought to study the play well, for without diligent care, the times might change.

I wonder if women over the centuries have had the same depressing feeling as Katherina moves toward Petruchio. Actually I doubt that's a normal reaction.

But by the time Katherina is ready to declare "A woman is moved like a fountain troubled, muddy, ill-seeming thick, bereft of beauty: and while it is so, none so dry or thirsty will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.

"Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper, thy head, thy sovereign, one that cares for thee..."

She had such spirit whether as Kate or Amanda Thomas. She had such true uppitiness. Such true scorn for the pre-ordained path.

I mourned for her as I mourned for too many others who need follow her footsteps before coming to their senses. Women indeed do come to their senses these days, though it may take some time.

But the path of the shrew Katherina is one to be ardently admired.

The shrew in all women is something that I think should be admired. The taming of that vitality is something anyone of us determined to find freedom should study lest it be our fate.

Bianca was lovely, flirtatious, everything I hope I may not ever imagine becoming. Bianca, the sweet, was exactly the character old Will seemed to describe in his work.

The story line moved with quick and needed action. The women progressed, though the haughty Katherine might not have been everything everyone expected.

Hardy is still very proud of snagging Michael Fennimore for the role of Tranio, that swishy, fantastic actor.

The Navy ... It's an adventure at the Naval Air Station

By Lois Martin

"The threat is real," he said, "Our mission is to detect, to track, and to destroy, if need be, that enemy."

Cmdr. Stephen Keith, officer in charge of VP-92, the Anti-Submarine Warfare Patrol Squadron, was talking about the Russian Submarine force, the greatest threat, he said, to the sea lanes.

Keith, a sober, goodlooking man, is assigned to the Naval Air Station in Weymouth. He has been with the Navy since 1966. He heads one of this country's seven submarine patrol units. The VP-92 is a watchdog of the shores, protector of the sea lanes, anticipator of any Russian aggression, especially the kind which would obstruct or threaten uninterrupted use of the ocean.

Keith and his fellow officers view the threat as one which is serious and the goal of the patrol is "to find the Soviet sub."

This man lives in Marshfield on part of the shoreline which he professionally is pledged to protect. His is a life of being at soccer and baseball games with his sons, of splicing in a bit of fishing and woodworking. And yet, surely to watch for Soviet, entirely unfriendly subs as a military career commitment, is not ordinary. It is a different one from that of his neighbors.

Still Keith commands people who are a lot like many of his fellow residents...through the Naval Reserves.

And that was the reason behind the invitation extended by the U.S. Navy to the media, all of it round Boston, the radio, the television, the daily and the weekly media, all those whose jobs involved the written or the spoken word. The goal April 24 was to inspire back into the service the men and women needed at Weymouth's Naval Air Station through media.

The officers, the brass indeed, were polished as they told the media unabashedly of the need for more reserves. Right now, they said, quoting from U.S. News and World Report, 55 percent of the nations' needs are met by reserves who use only five percent of the budget. "We have people problems," said the commanders, of which there was a full house." We need to keep the squadrons fully manned. We need flight engineers, ordinance men, in-flight technicians."

The Navy was advertising for reserves. The officials said the reserves used to be there for extra aid. But now they fill an essential role. And the Navy wants, not a few, but as many good men and women as they can get.

That Saturday's invitation was to fly with the regulars and the reserves in "simulated low level anti-submarine warefare...to demonstrate to tax-payers what they're paying for."

Commander Horst Kleinbauer of the U.S. Naval Reserve is the Commanding Officer of VP-92. He's a Northeastern University graduate with engineering degrees and he's a pilot for Delta Airlines.

In speaking of the submarine patrol, he said, "We are indeed ready to take part on the Atlantic side."

The C.O. had said at the beginning of the media's briefing, "we in the military must be different."

Well, one could suppose they are, in that few of us are indeed ready to take part in military action on the Atlantic side.

Perhaps among the many things the media learned that Saturday was how little we know or more succintly, how little we are aware, of the day to day dead seriousness with which the military practices getting ready for war...and darn close to home.

The P-3 needs 12 crew members. People on the South Shore who looked overhead that gorgeous day would have seen the two crafts flying in tandem. That time the crew was limited to four to allow more room for the media in the no frills flight.

And though the outsiders were stunned with the spectacle of the State of Massachusetts and its coastline from 500 to 1000 feet as well as a higher altitude, it learned some of what it takes to make up that 55 percent...the U.S. Naval Reserve.

Comdr. Keith used the verb "sanitize," when speaking of clearing sea lanes. And that perhaps bespeaks of the purist military, active duty person, someone who is "different" as the CO had said in clear discipline that few professionals practice. His work is in part with the reserves. He's the officer in charge.

Much of the VP-92's mission meets the goal of insuring that commerce (95 percent goes by sea if it isn't transported by land), can travel the ocean freely. So surface surveillance is part of the protection. And in doing that, reserves become not a luxury as part of VP-92, but a necessity, a requirement in national defense.

The Reserves have weekends of duty, a schedule, and two weeks of training elsewhere each year. In 1982 it will be in the Azores with the regular fleet. They fly to Jacksonville, Floriday and Bermuda routinely as part of weekend duty.

And when a situation like that in the Falkland Islands erupts, perhaps one could say they sharpen their vigilance that much more. Although there's been no increase in activity since that crisis began, according to the Naval commander.

Kim Coffey is the public affairs officer at the Naval Station in Weymouth. She has all the information. But of course they also have the 'written word' available. One of those pamphlets noted that a reserve pilot Lt. Charles Willy is also a resident of Marshfield. Of course, it's the South Shore which is home for many of the Reserves.

The plane in which the media was flown is a P-3 "Orion," a family member of a long line of antisubmarine warfare (ASW) aircraft built by Lockheed. The commanders had pointed to a history, well-entrenched tradition of safety and of not having to use the safety gear with which we had rapid training.

Peter Huke was one of the co-pilots to fly with the crew. He has been stationed in Brunswick, Maine and is back in this area now. Jack Gallant used to be part of the media. Now he's with the Reserves in public affairs. And it was Tom Trautwein, a commander with the Reserve, who was the executive officer, pilot-in-command.

He is from Cohasset. And he said the media on the two P-3s wouldn't expect to find Russian subs that day. But he's seen them, of course. He was on active duty from 1966 to 1971 and he's been with the reserves since. He works with Proctor and Gamble in Quincy.

It was Lt. Cmdr. Ned Rogerson who was the most visible member of the crew to the media. He saw to the seat assignments, the equipment, and he checked on all aspects of the plane's flight that wasn't involved in flying.

He joined the reserves after active duty and is a resident of Milton and a loan officer with Shawmut Bank. His helmet was decorated with original art creation by his four year old daughter.

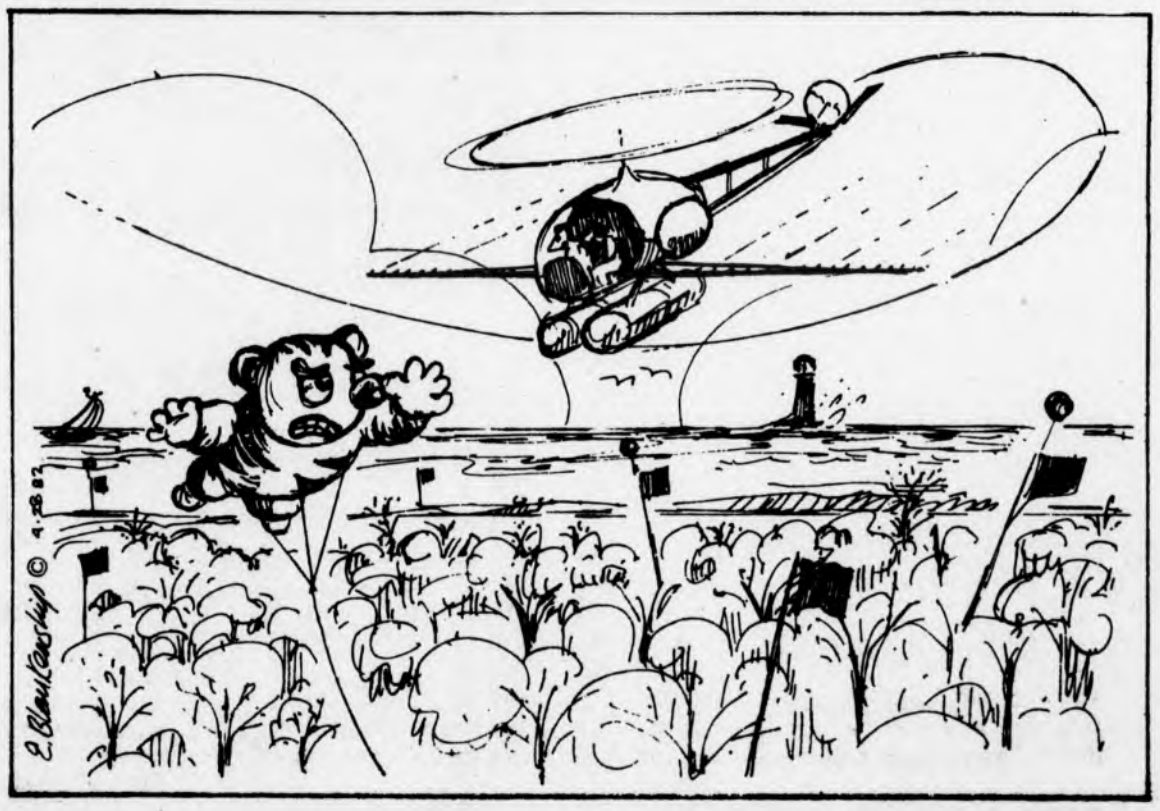
But on board the plane, Rogerson provided comfortable efficiency. The Reserves are probably less 'reserved,' more comfortable with the media than the career officers. They meld with casual civilians five days a week at least. But Rogerson had left his still employed efficient routine. Also on board was AMS 1 T.J. Hull, the flight engineer of Plymouth, AW 2 Dexter Rust, who lives in the Gloucester/essex area. He's been radar operator with the crew for 12 years.

The new passengers on board learned the sound of the command bell, the meaning of 'Condition 5' and the full measure of what Massachusetts' coastline is like from the air.

That day was crystal clear. The planes flew low level over Boston, after a sweep along the South Shore and a close view of the North River. Scituate was on one side of the plane and the rest of the world on the other.

It was a first flight for most of the media in a military plane. So there was a lot to be seen and learned from both inside and out. For the photographers it was field day, with a panorama of the technicolor world outside, cranberry bogs which looked like brick work, no foliage at all in the too slow spring, near roadways, and from the air no litter, not even in Boston. The low level view was similar to that from a balloon, faster to be sure at low speeds. But the low altitude favored architecture, giving a full view of Harvard, for example, and the Charles River's noontime regatta and later, the familiar cut of Provincetown and the unending strip of beaches on the Cape. It must be said, too, that a pool of pollution in Boston Harbor was like an open sore on that handsome landscape. No Russian subs were spotted that day. A larger freighter was accompanied by both the Navy planes until it gathered all the information it wanted. And the crew headed home.

Perhaps people in this area are unaware of how many rivers, ponds, bodies of water flow in and around our towns. And residents may not be aware of how large that Atlantic Ocean is, even the bit of it the planes checked that morning. There's plenty of room there for fishing boats...or for enemy craft the likes of which the VP-92 watches for everyday. They have what's called 'sonobuoy' that can be shot out of the aircraft to assist them. And they fired smoke bombs, something else which is routine in their work, including rescue missions.



What they didn't fire was the type of weapons, bombs they are prepared to use...if need be.

As surely as the media had been unexposed to some of the natural spectacle of the coastline, it probably gained, too, exposure to the work of the Reserves.

It was an experience that probably has found its way on the radio, television and newsprint. The Reserves looked like a reasonable way to add vigor and adventure and a bit of income to our life. And there's no doubt, the Reserves add important depth to the national defense. Who needs it? Apparently we do.

Crowell to seek bids for new school computers

The school committee Monday directed School Supt. Eugene Crowell to start bid procedures for purchase of computer equipment for the Deer Hill and Junior-Senior High Schools.

In a two-hour presentation to the school committee it was recommended by staff members that 11 microcomputers be purchased with various printers and accessories for the upcoming school year. The cost was estimated at $16,796.

The plans include three new computers for the Deer Hill School, seven for the Junior-Senior High School, and one for the business education department.

Deer Hill School Principal Kenneth Ekberg, Business Education teacher Doris Lahage and Charlie Davis, Math Department Chairman, submitted written and oral reports to the school board.

"We have a responsibility to the youngsters of Cohasset," said Ekberg. It's not a question of whether computers should be purchased, it's a question of when, said Ekberg. He outlined three levels of computer instruction for Grades 4, 5 and 6.

Ultimately, Ekberg spoke of a three-year sequential course of study for Deer Hill students which would allow each student one-half hour per week of hands-on experience with the computer.

The Deer Hill School currently has one microcomputer. With the purchase of three computers, plus one handed down from the High School, the Deer Hill School would possess five microcomputers.

Ekberg said that 40 pupils had originally signed up for the computer club at the Deer Hill School. The club was narrowed to 16 students and then to nine because of equipment limitations (only one microcomputer). "We underestimated the amount of interest," among kids today, he said.

School officials are leaning toward purchase of the Radio Shack's TRS-80 microcomputer. The Radio Shack models are portable, replacement of parts are the least expensive, and repairs can be made locally.

Lahage said statistics show that half the number of this year's graduating seniors will use a computer within a year of graduation.

Lahage cautioned the school board and administrators not do as the California schools have done. Computer education in California schools has focused on the math/science computer courses (34 percent) rather than the business computer courses (13 percent). Lahage said that 80 percent of the business world uses the computer compared to only 20 percent us in the math and science areas.

The computer age is exciting said Lahage. "Programming is one of the few fields where someone can get a job without a college degree." She mentioned three Cohasset High School girls who have secured part-time employment on the basis of their training on the microcomputer at the High School.

The computer was incorporated into Lahage's typing, speedwriting, business management, business math and accounting classes. Numeric entry, Trendex stock analysis, payroll, general ledgers, word processing (text editing), and COBOL compiling will be included in the business courses. The COBOL compiler and Trendex stock analysis are new software packages which are on order.

Davis spoke of the BASIC, BASIC-PLUS, COBOL, PASCAL, and ASSEMBLY computer languages which students would become familiar with during the next few years. Inservice instruction would be provided for teachers throughout the school system (many have already participated in computer classes). Estimated inservice instruction would cost $1,500.

Adult education computer classes could be offered to the community, said Davis. Courses could be geared toward a beginning and advanced level.

School board member John Langmaid III was concerned with the gap between the 7th and 9th grade computer instruction. The Deer Hill School would virtually offer computer instruction which is currently offered for seventh graders. The junior high school students would have units within their math and science classes to incorporate course application on the microcomputers.

Crowell highly recommended expansion of computers within the schools. "I don't mean to oversell this but you can't eliminate it either...(the computer) can be a fantastic tool if we use it," he said.

Costs for redesigning site location of the computers would be minimal ($1,000), said Davis. High School student Paul Riley, a member of Patrick Plante's mechanical drawing class, prepared a detailed site layout for seven computers, 21 students and a teacher. The tables were designed so that three students could fit comfortably at each computer.

Davis suggested that the room be kept at a steady temperature. A new or used air conditioner should be purchased, he said.

Crowell said that the new computer room could undergo changes over the summer months.

Bound Brook artisans open on Rte. 3A

Bound Brook artisans is an exciting new shop in the process of being organized by local crafters — a composite of approximately forty craftsmen with their own unique areas of expertise, who have joined together to create their own marketplace. Well-known area craftsmen were invited to participate and their articles carefully selected for quality and excellence.

Located on Route 3A in Cohasset, just south of Stop & Shop Plaza, the shop is a result of the cooperative efforts of each member giving of his time and talents. Shopping at this artisans' cooperative enables you to purchase at the artisan's price as compared to the retail market.

Come to the shop and meet the craftsmen. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. The shop opened on May 1. Among the crafts offered are: dolls, toys, childrens clothes, quilting, stencilling, photography, artwork, ornaments, flower arrangements, needlework, antique reproductions, spinning, and weaving. Demonstrations and classes will be offered to those interested.

Bound Brook Artisans offers to the general public a wide selection of unique and exquisite items.

Behind the scenes of the Dramatic Club

By J.A. Marshall

The spring production of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, "Strange Bedfellows," is in full swing.

The set, designed by Sheldon Ripley, is up, and was constructed by Burk Ketcham, David Wadsworth, Wayne Miessner, Jim Leonard, Sheldon Ripley, Scott Ketcham, Don Freiter, and Dwight DiBona.

The walls have been painted under supervision of Mr. Ripley by Don Freiter, Steve Freiter, David Wadsworth, Burk Ketcham, Wayne Miessner, Judith Chute, and Jim Leonard. To complement a custom painted stage setting, large props have been collected by Rosanne Ring of Cohasset.

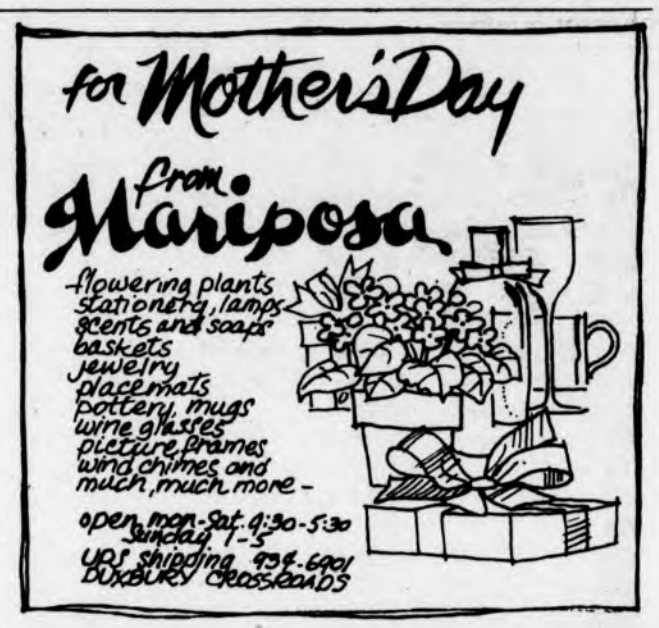
These will be accented by the ever present small props, assembled by Kerri Crehan, Carlene Laney, Maria Sestina, and any cast member who may have "just the thing" to answer a prop requirement.

Many of these people will be working back stage during the actual production, insuring that all the actors have what they need in hand or on stage at the moment the working props are called for.

While the prop people have been coordinating their work, production managers Eleanor Whitney and Don Freiter, have been organizing the rest of the crew. Make-up will be done by Cathy Cashin, while costumes are being gathered by Linda Cuff. The whole production work will be shown up by the lighting expertise of Arthur Paquette. The crew backstage during this presentation will be under the direction of stage manager Ellen Kelly, aided by stage secretary, Beth Perry. The sound effects for the production will be handled by Wayne Miessner. Very soon the posters, designed by Sheldon Ripley, will be on display, while the Town Hall sign, painted by Wayne Miessner, will be up on the front of the Town Hall.

The whole production work and coordination can be enjoyed May 20, 21 and 22 at the Cohasset Town Hall, when the Cohasset Dramatic Club presents Ryerson and Clements' 1980's rollicking comedy, "Strange Bedfellows." The curtain goes up at 8. Thursday night senior citizens are admitted free, and student tickets are $1.

Hingham Civic Music officers



The Hingham Civic Music Theatre, an organization which has entertained South Shore residents for many years and furnished scholarships to High School graduates interested in pursuing a career in the Arts, has announced its new officers for the 1982-83 season.

They are: Muriel Ross of Hingham, president; Betty Driscoll of Cohasset, vice-president; Barbara Brown of Hingham, recording secretary; Peter J. O'Loughlin, Jr. of Cohasset, treasurer; and Doris Herzberg of Hingham, corresponding secretary. Len Ross of Hingham was elected a Director for a three-year term.

The Civic Music Theater is pledged to continue its presentation of service to the community while promoting musicals and the theatre. HCMT will present "Camelot" on April 23, 24 and a Sunday matinee on April 25 and 30th and May 1, at the Hingham High School.

Ticket information can be obtained by calling Sandy Moore at 749-6419 or Ellen Bartolotti at 749-7894.

The Music Theater is constantly seeking new members to perform and work backstage on sets and make-up. If you want to become part of the show call membership chairman Mary Brown at 749-7789.

College meeting

On Tuesday, May 11, at 7:30 p.m. the CHS Guidance Staff will sponsor a College Admissions meeting.

The meeting will be held in the High School Dining Hall, and will end at approximately 9:30 p.m.

The Counseling Staff will explore the steps in the admissions, process, will distribute handbooks of post high school opportunities, and will discuss various terms such as S.A.T., A.C.T., A.T.P. Report, Early Decisions, Rolling Admissions, and Deferred Admissions. The staff will also briefly discuss financial aid and the changes in funding by the federal government.

S.S. Singles

South Shore Singles will meet Friday, May 14, at the First Parish Church in Norwell, at River Street and Rte. 123. The program will be a dance, featuring a new DJ, Dick Vogel, held from 8 to 11 p.m.

Tennis night will be held at the Cohasset Tennis Club on Saturday, May 15, and players of all abilities are invited. For tennis information and reservations, call Lydia, 749-0222.

Single adults in the South Shore are welcome to any South Shore Singles meeting. The group meets the second and fourth Fridays of each month. For information or directions call Gino at 337-7024, or Paul, 659-7152.

Flowers, Flowers, Flowers — There was beauty everywhere at the home of Joan Shockman of Meadow Lane last week. The occasion was the annual flower show of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, and it was judged most successful. Much of the credit goes to these ladies: Anette Sechen (L), horticultural chairman; Sally Wood, the co-chairman; Joan Shockman, co-chairman and hostess; and Vi Farrell, the entries chairman.

SPRING CHORAL CONCERT

Wednesday, May 5 CHS Auditorium, 7:30 p.m.

Featured will be the Junior Chorus, Senior Chorus and Barbershop Chorus and Quartet.

All are welcome!

CHS Senior Chorus will compete in the American Choral Directors Association State Competition held this year at Acton-Boxborough Regional High School on Saturday, May 8.

Grade 8 attended a presentation of Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," on Monday, April 12 as an "in-school field trip."

That book is part of the English curriculum for Grade 8. Mrs. Reade, Mrs. Alcott and Mrs. Wood's classes participated.

In an effort to alert and inform students about the dangers of driving while under the influence of alcohol and other drugs, students from Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School are joining an organization called S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk).

S.A.D.D. has four goals:

— To eliminate the drunk driver and save lives.

— To conduct community alcohol awareness programs.

— To alert and inform students of the dangers of alcohol and driving, and — To organize a peer counseling program to help students who may have concerns about alcohol.

Thursday, May 13, has been proclaimed as S.A.D.D. Day at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School. All students in Grades 10, 11 and 12 will participate in the program. The program will consist of speakers, film, and a question-answer and discussion period.

The speakers include: Cohasset High School students against driving drunk; Mrs. Carol Lawler, representative from M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Driving Drunk); Paul Deignan, South Shore Council on Alcoholism; and student representatives from Wayland High School (Founders of S.A.D.D.).

Michael Gill took eight Cohasset students to the State House recently for a conference concerning drunk driving. These students will be leading discussions.

There will be a Community Evening Program on May 13 from 7:45 to 10 p.m. at the high school auditorium. The topic of discussion will be "Alcohol Issues in the Community."

The program will consist of speakers, film and a discussion period.

Speakers include: Bill Spinks of South Shore Council on Alcoholism and Cathy Suk, a representative from M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Driving Drunk).

A film entitled, "The Mountain," will also be shown.

The discussion panel includes:John DeBassio, Police Chief; Mike Gill, school health education coordinator; Bill Spinks, and Cathy Suk.

PSO appropriation

The school committee approved a one-time $300 appropriation for the newly formed Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO).

The board's vote was unanimous. The appropriation will cover the costs of mailing and one guest speaker.

On March 24, the steering committee of the Communications Council voted unanimously to adopt the bylaws of the PSO. This organization will replace the Communications Council in the fall.

According to Patricia Baird, the PSO hopes to be a stronger, more efficient group than the Councils. Baird said the group wants to increase communication among teachers, staff, administrators and parents.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said, "The strength of this is that all parents are considered members."

A nominating committee for the election of an executive board to the PSO is working to have a ballot completed by May 18.

PSO seeks officers for executive board

The nominating committee of the newly formed Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) encourages parents to contact committee members if they have suggestions for officers of the PSO's executive board for next year.

The board will consist of a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, one or two school representatives, and standing committee chairperson for arts enrichment. METCO host families, volunteers, fundraising, publicity and PSO activities.

If you are interested in serving in any of the above capacities or on a committee, or if you would like to suggest a nominee, call any of the following:

Martha Equi, 383-0461; Marj Izzo, 383-6742; Jim Leonard, 383-6563 or 383-6781; or Pat Walsh, 383-1489.

A proposed slate of officers, PSO bylaws, and other information will be mailed to all Cohasset parents of school children by mid-May.

Deer Hill School spring book fair

Parents of students at the Deer Hill School are invited to attend the Spring Book Fair at the school library Thursday, May 6, and Friday, May 7, from 8:45 to 2:15.

Flyers describing some of the items to be available at the Fair have been sent home with students. Attached to each flyer is a schedule of class visits, so that parents may visit the fair with their child's class if they wish. Visitors are welcome anytime, however, and do not need to follow the class schedule.

The supplier for the Book Fair is the Bookport Shop in Hingham. The shop has worked with the school's librarian to provide the best available selection of books for middle school teachers. It's hoped that parents and children will look ahead to summer and take advantage of the fair to stock up for some good summer reading.

Proceeds from the fair will benefit the school library and projects of the Communication Council.

Senior class bloodmobile successful

The senior class recently conducted a successful bloodmobile, with 41 donors giving 39 pints of blood at the High School last Thursday.

This was the second bloodmobile during the school year. An emergency bloodmobile was held in November and 40 pints of blood were donated.

This was the 8th annual blood drive sponsored by the High School seniors, who make this one of their class gifts to the town. More than 400 pints of blood has been donated during the past seven years (since 1976).

The bloodmobile was under the direction of High School nurse Mrs. Carol Ciciotte and Corinne Cahill, chairman of the Cohasset's Red Cross Chapter. Ciciotte and Cahill were assisted by student volunteers.

The next Cohasset Chapter Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held June 14 from 1:30 to 7:15 at the Unitarian Parish House.

At the Beaux Arts Ball

By Patricia Desmond

A gypsy with a rose in her hair read palms by candlelight throughout the Mardi Gras in May at Dreamwold.

She gave away magic, good wishes and happiness to the people who danced to the tune of celebration for the South Shore Art Center.

Syma, who operates a potter's wheel by day at the Birds Nest in Hingham and turns clay into sculpted art work, brought her candle from table to table searching the palms of the frolickers.

She wouldn't say what she found in the palms of her other clients. But I can tell you I have a fairy godmother on my life line, still unexplored talent in the arts, imagination and the absence of worry lines.

I might tell more but my better judgment bids me keep my future a secret.

While Syma worked, friends and members of the South Shore Art Center enjoyed each other's company and danced for the Beaux Arts Ball.

Margaret Dillon, director of the center, said the costumes years ago at the ball were more outlandish.

"We got away from it for a while," she said. "This is the first time back to costumes since 1975."

Mr. and Mrs. Ubaldo DiBenedetto won first prize in the costume parade. She was dressed in a flowing black velvet gown from the 16th Century. He was dressed in 16th Century court attire — black tights, whatever that jacket is called — and carried a paint palette.

It was impossible to keep a straight face, looking through the crowd of ridiculous hats, silly colors and interesting smiles.

Shellie and Don Evans tour the dance floor. Left, Jane Strekalovsky gets a warm kiss from Arts Center President Ubaldo DiBenedetto who, with his wife Delia, won the costume contest.

Coast Guard report

FRIDAY, APRIL 23

2:32 p.m., 42 foot trawler "Puffin," homeport Boothbay Harbor, ME, with 2 people on board aground at the entrance to the Herring River. "Puffin" freed itself during oncoming tide.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24

11:45 a.m., 18 foot outboard with 3 people on board, owned by Manuel Rodrigues, Stoughton, disabled with engine failure at entrance to Scituate Harbor. Towed to Scituate boat ramp.

SUNDAY, APRIL 25

12:15 p.m. 24 foot inboard/outboard "Saturday Night" with 3 people on board, owned by Carl Hultman, disabled with engine failure by Minot's Light. Taken in tow to Scituate Harbor.

1:05 p.m., 20 foot "Hobie Cat" with 2 people on board, owned by Charlie Young, capsized by entrance to Scituate Harbor. Righted self with no assistance.

2:05 p.m., Duxbury harbormaster reports the 17 foot sailboat "Tommy's Dream," with 3 people on board owned by Tom Burgess, aground at Gurnet Point. Vessel suffered structural damage and was left on the beach awaiting commercial assistance.

5:32 p.m., Cohasset police report people calling for help in the vicinity of "Whitehead" by the harbor entrance. A 12 foot sailing pram with 2 people on board was unable to sail against the tide and was taken in two by fishing vessel Shell Drake.

7:46 p.m., Received call from C.G. Communication Station Boston, NMF-1, (Marshfield Radio) reporting that an 18 foot inboard/outboard was having difficulty navigating the South River. Upon arrival a vessel fitting the description was sighted anchored to the flats.

MONDAY, APRIL 26

Received telephone call from Mrs. David Lally reporting that her husband and Richard Mondeau were approximately 18 hours overdue from a fishing trip in a 17 foot Boston Whaler. The Marshfield P.D. reported that the Lally vehicle and trailer were parked at the Green Harbor Town Marina. A 41 foot utility boat was dispatched from Scituate to search to Manomet Point. At the same time harbormasters and Police departments were notified and a Urgent Marine Information Broadcast was released to inform all mariners to keep a sharp lookout. A Coast Guard C-130, fixed wing, aircraft was diverted to search lower Mass Bay and parts of Cape Cod Bay.

The cutter Cape Higgon and stations Point Allerton, Cape Cod Canal, and Provincetown were briefed and preparing to join the search. At 4:06 p.m., the F/V Joan M, Scituate, sighted the small boat with the people waving rags to gain their attention. The F/V Joan M, upon coming close aboard were informed of the boat's mishap. The F/V Joan M took them in tow to Scituate Harbor. Once safely ashore Mr. Lally reported that he had fired off 6 flares. Mr. Lally also reported that 6 vessels passed within 3,000 feet of the boat when he fired the flares.

TUESDAY, APRIL 29

4:22 p.m., Received radio call from the Plymouth harbormaster reporting a 21 foot outboard disabled off Rocky Hill, northwest of the Pilgrim power plant. Upon Coast Guard arrival the boat owned and operated by John Tufts, Jr., and 2 companions, was found to have a dead starting battery and towed to Plymouth Harbor.

Winners — Katie Horn, (L) and Karin Story won blue ribbons for their flower design entries in last week's Community Garden Club Flower Show. They are junior members of the club. (Greg Derr photo)

Golfers win two in first week of competition

By Donna Cogliano

The Cohasset High School golf team had a fine start last week with two wins and one loss. The Skippers beat Abington, 6-3, and Rockland 8½-½.

In an away meet at Duxbury, the Dragons defeated Cohasset 7½-1½. Last year, Cohasset and Duxbury shared the South Shore League title.

Cohasset coach James Franey predicts that his team will do much better versus the Dragons when they meet for the second time, on the Skipper's home course, the Cohasset Golf Club. "It's quite an advantage to be on your own course," he said.

Some 40 students tried out for the golf team. The team is very young and Franey said, "They should be a good team for the next three years, especially since they are playing this strong as only sophomores."

This year's squad is captained by senior Jack McNeill, a football and hockey standout for CHS. McNeill was played at the number two spot last year. This season, he started out as an alternate but is now playing as the number six golfer. Franey said McNeill's game is coming around and he should put in a strong performance for the Skippers.

Sophomore John Drago is the team's top player. Drago won all possible points last week except for a half-point. Drago had a steady week, said Franey.

Freshman Troy Chatterton is the number two player for Cohasset. He has been a starter on the squad since the seventh grade. Chatterton scored a 36 in nine holes at Abington's course last week.

Sophomore Jim Rooney contributed to the victory over Abington with a 38 score. Chris Powers had a 39 versus Rockland which was three points above par. Powers and Rooney have been playing at the third and fourth positions.

Charles Brady, Steve McMann and Jack McNeill have started at the fifth and sixth spots. Alternates for the varsity squad are Mike Cunning and Mike McNeill.

Franey said Jeff Hartwell, John Replogle and John Froic seem to be the up and coming, promising golfers for the Skippers.

Other members of the gold team include: Mike Abruzzese, Dick Caffrey, Mark Crough, Sean Cunning, Tim Curran, Doug Dalrymple, Joe D'Onophrio, Jim Dormer, Scott Duncombe, Kevin Dunn, John Hall, Joe Hoffman, Stephen Hill, Mark Lahive, Bobby Lynch, Doug Mantz, Ken McGrath, Donald Mulligan, Tom O'Brien, Steve Ralff, John Reilly, Paul Sheppard and Paul Winn.

Cohasset is 2-1 in the SSL. The team is scheduled to compete against Hanover at home on Thursday.

Skippers softball squad wins three

The Cohasset girls' softball team overpowered three South Shore League opponents last week. The Skippers triumphed over Rockland, Norwell and Abington by at least eight points in each contest.

Cohasset boosted its record to 5-1 in the league and 6-1 overall. The Skippers have lost only to East Bridgewater, 8-6, at the beginning of the season.

In the 15-6 victory over Abington, Gia Barresi collected three hits, including a double and home run. She had four RBI's for the afternoon. Cohasset led by one run in the fifth inning, 4-3. In the sixth inning the Skippers exploded for 11 runs.

Cohasset clobbered Rockland 19-8 in a makeup game on Friday. The Skippers clinched the early lead and led 13-4 after two innings. Barresi and Laura Hines both clubbed homers for Cohasset.

Last Monday Cohasset defeated Norwell, 13-5. Pitcher Liz Russell, Karen and Sara Froio, Sandblom, Carla Lucas and Madeline Roy were strong hitters for Cohasset during games last week.

Art Center works to be exhibited in Boston

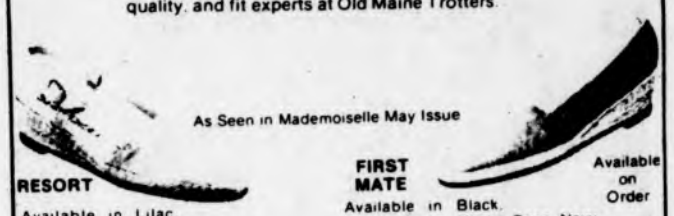
"The Intuitive Eye", an exhibition of South Shore art Center gallery artists, will be held in the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston's display area from May 17 through July 9.

The exhibition is presented by the South Shore Art Center, and was organized by Linda Summers.

The South Shore Art Center meets the challenge of the large and exciting Federal Reserve Gallery space by providing an extensive exhibit which incorporates the varied style and media of its gallery artists.

Eighty-nine paintings, sculpture, prints, photography and fine crafts were selected for the show. "The Intuitive Eye" documents past and present while offering a glimpse of the future through each artist's perspective.

Also, five antique marine paintings are on loan for the exhibit from the collection of the John Linsley's, Red Oaks, Cohasset.



Noted artists exhibiting include Dennis Kowal, Rosalind Farbush, Jim Ann Howard, Eugene Conlon, Constance F. Pratt, Margaret Dillon, Syma, Gail Bryan and Murray and Elaine Wentworth.

The exhibit is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m..

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

New officers named at Community Center

Many of the objectives which had been set for the Cohasset Community Center for this year have been met, Center President Kathy Stevens told members at the annual meeting recently.

Among those objectives, she continued, were the implementation of a vitally necessary energy conservation program, and the offering of a diversified program schedule with fees kept at a minimum.

At that meeting, two amendments to the bylaws were unanimously approved by members having to do with the setting of the annual meeting date to the last Monday in April, or within seven days of that date, and increasing the number of members on the board of directors from 15 to 17.

New officers for the upcoming year were elected. They are: Dee DeSantis, President; Rosemarie Mercurio, 1st Vice President; Nancy Kinchla, 2nd Vice President; Ray Kasperowicz, Treasurer; and Janice Batts, Clerk.

The following members were elected to the Board of Directors: Ed Goff, who will work on the Building Committee; Brian Noonan, on Bowling; and Claudia Story, on Publicity.

Special awards of appreciation were presented to retiring board members: Kathy Stevens, Paula Almeida, Marge Ritter and Dick Ainslie.

A letter home for Mother's Day ...

By Lois Martin

In the last few years, I've discovered missives in my mail that have caused my little face to brighten.

Who'd ever have thought my boys would write home. Not I, 'cause I'm a lousy correspondent, or so I'm told by people who claim they give thanks for Christmas because that's when I get a card or two written. And that doesn't happen all the time. I've seen a year when my Christmas greetings got dragged out toward Valentine's Day. Then there are others who say they've been tickled to death to hear from me but weren't able to read one word of my penmanship and they hoped I was saying everyone was fine. I was.

PATCHES

And when some sons left home with my pots and pans without handles, the opened boxes of Kleenex and all the lobster picks (I think), it came as a surprise that they'd write home. In the times they'd come back, a few things had changed and that made them either nervous or curious.

There have been some noteworthy letters. Among them one which came from the oldest, that fall when he was a haughty college sophomore, instructing everyone to keep clear of his room. That inspired his mother to write a letter by return mail threatening to rent his room out for a dog kennel unless he got off his high horse.

Then there have been the slightly homesick letters, the ones that warm the heart and send you to the phone to call and say every thing'll be magnificent soon and they are too. There are the late greetings, reports of the flu or a grand ski vacation. And there has not been a letter sent that didn't bring life to my mail box. A recent Easter card from the youngest (still home) had a notation that the oldest son would send a card one week late, the middle one would have lost his in a chemistry book and not have enough money for another, and that he was the only one in the crowd that had it together.

But my favorite letters are ones like we got last week. One was from someone who's happy and busy but suddenly felt far behind on home news, left out even. There was the information about a company softball team, the weather and a boss.

Then there was this: "Is Andy having a tough semester? Where is Terry going to college? Is Pansy still around? All these questions need to be answered!"

Well, here's the answer, Brian: 1) Because you boys insist on taking those dreadful engineering courses Andy's studying like the devil; 2) Terry probably will try to go to school where it's hard to tell the difference between a semester break, show biz and a reunion of the Class of '83; 3) Pansy Betsy Martin (the cat) is indeed around, refuses to go out much and we wish she could visit you.

Intriguing how brothers and family pets rate highest in the questions and comments of these letters. During the past year we lost our dog, in the most final sense of that past tense verb. We've all adjusted but we haven't forgotten that pets are part of our hearth.

From the University of Rhode Island, after an update on exams and a request for $50, came this question: "Has anyone got a new dog yet?"

'Not yet' is the answer. But someday we'll capitulate without reasonable pre-discussion.

Now here's the moral point of all this for those of you whose little darlin's are driving you crazy with their insatiable thirst for a quarrel over a cereal box, a place in the front seat and a turn on the telephone.

Brothers who used to do all this, forcing a woman to ask only for peace at the kitchen table on Mother's Day, actually come to care about one another even more than they do the family dog or cat. They can't wait to see one another.

So even though there are times you wish 12 year-olds could be juniors at a college or work independently in California for a month or two, the good news is they probably will later. And if so, your mail box is due for the best stuff its ever had.

Happy Mother's Day!

Daffodil sandwiches? Could be, for they were all over Nantucket on Daffodil Weekend, the island's eighth annual spring rite. Wherever we went in the sea-faring historical town, yellow, orange and white blossoms bobbed and danced in the stiff spring breeze. Cobbled ways such as Rose Lane, Chicken Hill, India St. and Madaket Road had clumps of jonquils behind white picket fences bordering the old brick sidewalks. There were thousands of daffodils on Polpis Road, a million planted since a garden club member had the idea for the festival, with more bulbs planted each year. In addition to the Daffy dinner dance on this very special weekend, it was the occasion for tailgate picnics and though daffodils decorated many of the cars in the antique cars parade, you weren't apt to find them in your sandwiches, but Janet Moore offered this

DAFFODIL CAKE

1 c. cake flour
1/2 c. sugar
1⅓ c. egg whites
1/4 tsp. salt
1¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1 tsp. lemon extract
1 c. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 tsp. almond extract
4 well beaten egg yolks
2 T cake flour

Sift 1 c. flour with ½ cup of sugar, 3 times. Beat egg whites until frothy, add salt and cream of tartar. Beat till stiff and glossy. Add 1 c. sugar, a little at a time. Sprinkle over egg whites and fold in thoroughly. Sift flour mixture in a little at a time. Fold lightly. Divide batter into 2 parts. Into one half, fold egg whites and 2 T flour and lemon extract. Put vanilla, egg yolks and almond into other half. Put the 2 batters alternately into an ungreased angel cake pan. Bake at 320 degrees for 1 hour. Leave in pan until cool.

Three thousand one hundred and eighty-eight miles due west of Spain and two and one-half hours out of Hyannis by boat lies the crescent-shaped island of Nantucket, about 16 miles long by six miles wide. Cottages with weathered wooden shingles and stately red brick mansions are seen in towns such as Siasconset, Madaket, Tuckernock and Wauwinet. In the bookshop on Broad St. I picked up the cookbook "From the Galleys of Nantucket" and came home to find quahogs on sale in our local supermarket, so hastened to make these

QUAHOG CAKES

1 c. ground quahogs
2 eggs
2½ c. Bisquick
1/2 c. quahog juice
2 T cooking oil

Beat eggs well in bowl big enough to mix it all in. Add quahogs and juice, add flour (Bisquick) and mix lightly, add oil last. Drop by tablespoonfuls into hot fat (1/8" deep). Smooth out to about 1/4". Cook until brown then turn and cook other side. Serve hot with plenty of butter.

Good restaurants are everywhere, among them, the Mad Hatter. Here is their recipe for

HERB BREAD

1 pkg. yeast in
1/4 c. warm water
3/4 c. scalded milk
2 T sugar
1½ tsp. salt
1 beaten egg
1 tsp. ground sage
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
2 tsp. celery seed
3½ c. flour
2 T shortening

Combine sugar, salt and shortening with milk. Add yeast and mix well. Beat in egg, nutmeg, sage and celery seed and 2 c. flour. Beat hard for 5 min. Add rest of flour for soft dough. Knead about 8 min., until elastic and let rise until double. Punch down, shape and let rise again. Bake 30 min. at 400 degrees. Makes 1 loaf.

SALE ENDS MAY 8th

It's happening in Cohasset

Tom Rush concert

Roger's Music in Cohasset Village will be selling tickets to "Tom Rush in Concert" playing Sunday, May 23, at 8 p.m. at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham.

The concert is being sponsored by the Foster Arts Fund Committee of the Foster School PTO in Hingham.

Cancer Support II

There will be a meeting of Cancer Support II, for women 50 years and over who have been diagnosed as having breast cancer, on Tuesday, May 11, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the 2 East Conference Room of the Jordan Hospital.

These meetings are sponsored by the Jordan Hospital and are free of charge. The meetings are open to all Plymouth County residents, no matter where treatment is received. For further information call Monica Fallows at the hospital, 746-2000, ext. 286.

Caprilland Farms bus trip

The Program Committee of the Cohasset Community Center has planned a special bus trip to Caprilland Farms in Coventry, Connecticut, Wednesday, May 12 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This historic farm of Adelma Simmons has often been featured in such publications as "House Beautiful" and "Gourmet Magazine." The trip will include transportation, a lecture and tour of the various gardens and a lunch at a cost of $20. Membership in the center is not required for the trip but reservations must be made by May 5. For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 to 1 p.m.

Family Forum buffet

The Pro Family Forum of the South Shore will host an evening buffet at the Marshfield Country Club Sunday, May 16, starting with a social hour at 5 p.m.

The organization will address issues "that affect welfare of the family and recognizes that the burden of his taxation seriously weakens the traditional family..." Edward F. King of the Citizens for Limited Taxation will be the guest speaker. For tickets call Mary Sheehan at 834-6303 or Marie Sturgis at 545-3696.

'Festival of the Arts'

Artists and photographers are invited to submit entries for the juried art and photography show to be held at the sixth annual North River Arts Society "Festival of the Arts" June 26 and 27.

The festival this year will be held in a new location — in and around the GAR Hall, Old Main Street, Marshfield Hills, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days.

The juried art show will be in the GAR Hall; the photography show in the adjacent garage. The festival will be a walking street tour, with neighbors on all sides opening their barns or front yards for some aspect of the festival.

Prizes offered for the juried art show include $200 for best in show, and $75 first prizes in each of four categories: (1) oils and acrylics, (2) watercolor, (3) graphics, pastels, and mixed media, and (4) sculpture.

A $200 best in show prize will also be offered for the juried photography show, with $75 first prizes offered for the best black and white photo and the best color print.

Artists and photographers are to drop off their framed entires at the GAR Hall on Thursday, June 17, from 7 to 9 p.m. or Saturday, June 19, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Judging will take place June 21. Entries are to be picked up after the festival ends from 4 - 6 p.m. Sunday, June 27 at the GAR Hall.

Paintings and photos must be matted and framed and may be no larger than 6 feet. There is a $4 entry fee.

Judges for the juried art show are Joseph Hussar, well known South Shore oil painter; Timothy Nichols, Boston artist, and instructor; and Nathalie Nordstrand, award-winning North Shore artist in oil and watercolor.

Robert Gorrill, president of the South Shore Camera Club, will judge the photo entries. Gorrill is also a photographer, teacher, and studio owner.

Artists and photographers will be notified by postcard of the judges' decision prior to the festival.

For information, call Peggy Slade at 837-3438.

Cooking with food processors

The Community Center will offer a special course, Cooking with Food Processors, taught by Jan Doherty, May 11, 18, and 25 from 7 to 10 p.m.

The program will offer a chance to get to know the food processor, and the best procedures and techniques to use with it. Included in Class I will be hor d'oevres and dips; in Class II, sorbets and "ice cream"; and in Class III, salads and dressings. The $45 fee includes food costs and recipes.

There are several workshops scheduled at the Center. On Saturday, May 15, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., Marylouise Slotnick will teach a program on Childcare which will expose participants who want to care for children to some of the problems and solutions involved. The main emphasis will be on safety in the $3 program.

Jane Doherty will offer a combined workshop on Summer soups and Pastry in her workshop on Cooking with a Food Processor, Monday, May 17, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. The cost of the program is $15 which includes food and recipes.

Well known area quilter Mary Struzziero will offer a special workshop on Applique on Thursday, May 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., at a cost of $6.

Registrations are now being accepted at the Center. Further information is available by calling 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

School briefs . . .

METCO PLAN APPROVED

The METCO plan for school year 1982-83 was unanimously approved by the school committee Monday.

The proposal calls for an additional full-time aid, who would work at the Deer Hill School.

There are currently 48 METCO students within the Cohasset School system, and student participation is expected to remain the same for next year. There will be 23 METCO students at the Junior-Senior High School, 15 at the Deer Hill School and 10 at the Osgood School.

Though cities and towns were asked to submit a level funded budget request, Cohasset did not do so.

The school committee approved a $140,571 proposal for federal aid to pay the costs of the program. Last year, a $117,592 budget was approved for METCO. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the increase represents inflation, scheduled salary increases and the addition of one aid.

WINDOW REPAIR

The Carmone Corporation of Sharon was awarded a contrct by the school committee Monday to repair windows at the Deer Hill School.

The Carmone Corp. had the low bid among five bidders. Low bid was $6,924 and the highest bid was $10,850. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said that about $2,000 was spent in architectural fees regarding the repair project.

STUDENT ADVISORS

Two recently elected student advisory members to the school committee were welcomed to the school board on Monday night.

Junior Paul Johnson was re-elected and sophomore Justine Hoffman earned her first seat on the board.

SCHOOL CALENDAR

Approval of next year's school calendar and discussion of school committee goals will be topics included at the school committee's next meeting on Monday, May 17.

The school calendar and school committee goals were on the agenda for Monday's meeting but were postponed until May 17.

SCHOOL BUS PURCHASE

School Supt. Eugene Crowell bought three used school buses at an auction in Whitman two weeks ago. With a telephone consensus from the school board, Crowell purchased three 1972 buses for a total cost of $3,600.

At Monday's meeting the school committee finalized the deal so that the buses will soon arrive in town. The board's vote was 4-1 with school board member Martha Gjesteby opposed.

Gjesteby opposed the purchase because she said that she has always favored contracting bus services for the schools. The buses were bought from Walter LaBonte, an industrial auctioneer, on Thursday, April 22. The buses will replace two older ones from the 1960's.

Crowell learned of the Whitman auction while attending the Massachusetts Transportation Conference in Hyannis during school vacation week. Crowell said some 200 buses were out for bid.

Even if one bus breaks down, the school will still benefit tremendously from the deal since new buses sell for $24,000, leasing costs $9,000 per bus and contracting bus service would amount to an additional $45-50,000 above the current $80,000 for costs of operation.

Crowell said the buses are in excellent condition and were used by the Plymouth school system on a limited basis in the past. He said one bus has a small portion of rot, but otherwise the buses are in fine condition for the interior and exterior.

The two buses being replaced will be used for parts. And the school system will have a total of eight buses operating on a daily basis with two as spares for emergency situations.

Spring concert

The Cohasset Junior and Senior High choruses along with the Barbershop Chorus and the Barbershop Quartet will hold a Spring Concert Wednesday, May 5, at 7:30 in the Cohasset High School Auditorium.

There will be a special guest presentation by the Brockton Harmoneers, an adult barbershop group.

Admission is free.

Historical Society flea market

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its gigantic Spring Flea Market at the Lothrop House, Summer Street, Saturday, May 22, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

This event, which has become an annual one for the Society, is in the nature of a fundraiser for the maintenance of the Society's museums at Cohasset Center and for continuing the restoration of the Lothrop House itself.

There will be tables filled with books, utensils, clothing; everything from jigsaw puzzles to lampshades, and an almost limitless variety of pre-owned articles to suit most everyone's needs.

Hot dogs, cold soft drinks, and home-baked food will be served on the grounds of the Lothrop House.

Dealer spaces are available at $10 per reservation. Call Mrs. Parker at 383-0773.

As with most flea markets, the best selection is available to those who arrive early, so plan to come to the Lothrop House right after breakfast, if you can. You may be able to find, at a true bargain price, some of those things you've always wanted, but never quite got around to bringing home.

An enthusiastic group of volunteers will be present to help find the articles of your choice, and the home-baked food will be unforgettable.

Mark the date of the Lothrop House Flea Market on your calendar; that's May 22, and plan to attend. You will be helping a worthy cause.

Rec Center offers canine classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for a dog obedience training program scheduled to begin Wednesday, May 19.

The program will be held on the Town Common beginning at 6:30 with a second class, if needed, at 7:30 p.m. The fee will be $15 per dog for the eight-week session.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice and pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience.

Owners are required to bring their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed. It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

The classes will have a graduation "fun match" and ceremony to demonstrate their newly acquired skills at the end of the eight-week session. The two classes will be combined for this and will start at 6:30. More will be said in class.

Laurie Ann Goodrich will instruct the course in Basic Canine Obedience with the Cohasset Recreation Department beginning Wednesday, May 19.

As an experienced professional handler at the breed and obedience level, Miss Goodrich has handled dogs in each dog group as well as rare breeds. She has been an assistant trainer at Wilder's Dog Training School in Scituate since 1976, having much experience with both purebred and mixed breed dogs.

She is a Certified Obedience Instructor in Canine Obedience at both the Beginning and Advanced Levels through Newbury Junior College in Holliston. She also holds a B.A. in Psychology with a minor in Biology from Boston State College where she did her psychology practicum at the Stone Zoo in Stoneham, graduating cum laude.

To register, call the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791. Class size will be limited and enrolled on a first-call, first-registered basis. Non-residents will be accepted for an extra $1 fee charge on a space available basis.

Sixty plus Club to meet

The Cohasset Sixty Plus Club will meet Thursday, May 20, at the Unitarian Parish House. The coffee hour is at 12 noon. An important meeting will follow with the election of officers.

At 1 p.m., Rev. George H. Mosely, will present a program titled: "Martha's Vineyard in Sight and Sound." His colored slides have music and sound effects, of the various activities on the lovely island.

Thursday is S.A.D.D. Day

CHS students take aim at drunk driving

By Donna Cogliano

There's a serious, well-organized effort in Cohasset this week to combat drunk driving. Though the program grew out of the schools, a special evening will be provided for the entire community tomorrow (Thursday) night.

Thursday has been proclaimed S.A.D.D. Day at the Junior-Senior High School. S.A.D.D., an acronym, which stands for Students Against Driving Drunk, was founded by a group of Wayland High School students last year, and is now spreading throughout Massachusetts.

School Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill designed the student and community programs. He has scheduled pertinent speakers, films and discussion periods for S.A.D.D. Day.

Gill is certain the auditorium will be packed during the day program since Grades 10 to 12 are required to attend the assembly. The evening program is not just for parents of school children, but for the entire community. Gill encourages townspeople to attend, "I'd love to fill the auditorium if I could."

S.A.D.D. Day at the High School will feature the following speakers for students. Mrs. Carol Lawler, of Weymouth, whose son was killed and family members injured in front of Abbadessa's Restaurant last year; Paul Diegnan from the South Shore Council on Alcoholism; student representatives from Wayland High School and Cohasset High School Students Against Driving Drunk.

Students will view a film entitled, "The Last Prom" with a discussion period to follow.

Lawler is a fabulous speaker, said Nancy Clapp, chairman of the Health Education Advisory Council. She talks about the affects of her son's death on family members as well as the physical injuries that family members sustained in the tragedy. "She doesn't use scare tactics," said Clapp, "But the way she speaks is honest and very deeply moving."

"I think the formation of the M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Driving Drunk) organization is a vehicle which has...helped many of these parents to deal with their own grief — feeling that they are doing something so that perhaps their child did not die in vain," said Clapp.

Drinking problems seem to accompany Prom time and senior week activities, said Gill. The program aims to convince students to have a sober driver at the wheel. Gill hopes the campaign will carry through the summer months.

Included in the S.A.D.D. Day is a contract which will be offered to Prom students and their parents. The contract is an agreement between parent and child, that the parent will respond to a call home for a ride if the child or driver of the vehicle is intoxicated. Essentially, the student is promising to call for a ride if such an incident arises, and the parent is promising to pick up the couple or couples from wherever they may call.

"We're not saying that drinking is okay," said Gill, "but we're admitting that it is a problem. The

Overtime hits the Fire Department

Lack of personnel is termed the cause

Cohasset's undermanned Fire Department is now spending $500 a week for overtime.

Overtime spending has continued since early March, and Acting Chief Roger Lincoln believes the situation will get worse before it gets better, particularly since vacations started this week.

To date the Fire Department has spent $26,055 for overtime this year, nearly $8,000 more than the budget called for.

In March, selectmen approved a $4,000 transfer for the department, but that money is gone as well, and the department is now dipping into the unused salaries of the three vacancies.

Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said there is $13,000 left in unused salaries for the fire department. That amount should carry them through the remaining two months of fiscal year 1982, he said.

The personnel shortage has been caused by four retirements, and by the fact that state law requires that two EMT's must staff the ambulance on all shifts.

The present shortage of EMT's has aggravated the department's personnel problems.

Selectmen have requested a list of firefighters with EMT certification from the Civil Service, but no one knows when the list will arrive. When it does, said Lincoln, selectmen plan to make two more firefighters EMT's.

The fire department is currently staffed with 21 men when it should have 24. There are 10 EMT's and ideally, Lincoln would like to have 16.

"The less people you have doing the work, the more prone you are toward injury," he said. For example, four people are needed to lift a person on a stretcher.

Before Proposition 2½ became law, and before the retirements took effect, the department was staffed with 28 men. There were seven assigned to each shift when all three stations were operating. Today there are five men per shift "...the bare bones needed to run this operation," said Lincoln.

The Acting Chief said most of the overtime money has gone toward staffing the ambulance in accordance with state law (two EMT's per ambulance).

Last month, Lincoln reported to selectmen an EMT course would cost about $1,200 per man, although less expensive courses may be available.

Selectmen schedule Sevin spraying on May 20 & 21

Cohasset will undergo an aerial spraying for gypsy moths on May 20 and 21, weather conditions permitting.

The controversial pesticide Sevin will be sprayed from a single helicopter between 5:30 and 8 in the morning, with school openings to be delayed until 8:30.

The spraying job could be completed by two helicopters in just one morning but Selectmen prefer one pilot who, says chairman Henry Ainslie, "knows the lay of the land."

High winds or rain could delay the project for a day or two, but it is scheduled to be completed by May 27.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said the details of delaying school will be handled by School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

School yards and Lily Pond will not be sprayed, but tree and park department crews will spray around the perimeter of the schools from ground level, said Laugelle.

As gypsy moths are among those public nuisances whose suppression and control are within the statutory province of the local superintendent of insect pest control and as the superintendent, his employees and agents may enter property for such suppression and control, it would seem that the Town may control public nuisances anywhere within its boundaries regardless of objections from private citizens. However, any rights in that regard should properly be balanced by certain precautions such as using due care in the execution of an agreement with the contractor hired to perform the spraying; ensuring that the contractor's licenses are current; that his insurance policies cover all helicopters to be used in the spraying; and, ensuring that the chemical substance is one that has been approved by the appropriate federal and state agencies.

Richard A. Henderson
Assistant Town Counsel

Local radio stations will broadcast the latest word of the aerial spraying and public notices will be published in the press as well.

The town will try to honor the wishes of property owners who don't want to be sprayed and have submitted exclusion forms.

The deadline for submitting such exclusion forms to the selectmen's office was April 30. Some 34 property owners submitted the exclusion papers.

"We have the right to spray wherever we want but there are a concentrated number of exclusions, (where) we may cut off aerial spraying completely," said Ainslie. "We will be looking at these areas to see if we can exclude some areas."

Last week, Selectmen were informed by Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson that the board does have the right to spray the entire town with the pesticide Sevin.

In an April 20 letter, selectmen had asked Town Counsel for an opinion on two questions: what

Historian needed

The Cohasset Community Center is looking for a volunteer for Center historian to keep a scrapbook on the literature and photographs of the center through the years.

There is much valuable information about the center that has been written but unfortunately is not available because it is scattered throughout the town. Anyone interested in this important responsibility may call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

McKinnon 'Steak Bake'

The Committee to Re-Elect Senator Allan McKinnon will hold "Steak-Bake V," Saturday, June 19 from 6 p.m. to midnight at the Pilgrim Tennis Club, Kingston.

The committee's biennial steak-bakes have become a summer tradition on the South Shore, regularly attracting over 1,500 friends and supporters from Senator McKinnon's seven-town Norfolk and Plymouth district which stretches from Weymouth to Duxbury.

The evening begins with cocktails at 6 p.m.

Tickets are available now from Dorothy Durgin, dinner chairman, 267 Washington St., 337-3343 (after 6 p.m.).

Selectmen's briefs

SELECTMEN'S MEETING RESCHEDULED

The selectmen's regularly scheduled meeting of Wednesday, May 19 has been rescheduled to Tuesday, May 18 at 8 p.m.

The meeting was changed because Selectman Rocco Laugelle will attend a Norfolk County meeting of selectmen on Wednesday.

TAXI PERMIT ISSUED

Selectmen decided last week to offer Joseph McMath of Scituate, a taxi permit on a six-month trial basis. Cohasset has only one licensed taxi driver at this time.

DUMP & BEACH STICKERS

Dump and beach stickers are on order for the town. Selectmen voted last Wednesday to buy 4,600 stickers for $606.

Originally selectmen wanted to buy plastic decals because of numerous complaints last year that the stickers wouldn't stick. However, Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said the decals would cost $1,209 and only $700 had been budgeted for stickers.

The stickers will be 3 by 3 inches in size and brightly colored.

FIRE CHIEF APPLICATIONS REVIEWED

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln is one of 20 applicants being reviewed by the Fire Chief Search Committee.

Committee Chairman John Thompson said members are in the process of reviewing applications to narrow the field for personal interviews.

The committee plans to recommend the three best qualified candidates to selectmen in mid-June, said Thompson.

Appeals board hearing

A staff member of Sen. Allen McKinnon will be available for residents Thursday, May 13, at 10:30 a.m. at Town Hall.

If this is inconvenient, please call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

McKinnon staff available

The Board of Appeals will hold a public hearing May 25 to consider an application from William Figureido.

Figureido is seeking a zoning variance that would allow him to live annually in his 35-foot trailer at 37 Park Avenue, from May 1 to Oct. 31.

The May 25th hearing on the request will be held at 8 p.m. in Town Hall.

Hugo's wants parking on Gov't. Island

The owners of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant are seeking to lease a lot at the rear Government Island on Border Street for valet parking during their busiest months of business.

Selectmen took the request under advisement last Wednesday and said they would seek legal advice on the matter.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing Hugo's, and Walter Guleserian, said his clients would install a vandal-proof gate at the back parking lot. Hugo's would only use the lot during their peak dining hours, he said.

The town would also have a key to the gate, and fishing vehicles could still park in the lot during the day.

Humphreys said peak hours for Hugo's might be from 7:30 to 11 p.m. The restaurant would provide at least one attendant at the lot whenever it's used for valet parking.

The lot is presently barricaded and scattered with litter and broken beer bottles, he said, adding that Chief John DeBassio had indicated the lot is a real trouble spot for police. "He (DeBassio) felt that our presence would alleviate the problem," said Humphreys.

Guleserian said a lease arrangement could benefit the town and his operation. Humphreys said his clients do not want to see their customers end a pleasant evening with having to retrieve a towed or ticketed car.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said if the Board rents to Hugo's, then others "will come hollering." For instance, the recreation commission wanted to construct a pool at the site a few years ago. The Sailing Club and Art Center were also denied the lot in the past. Some people feel the town should get out of the rental business, said Laugelle. On the other hand, he argued, that Parker Avenue residents, who complain about the lot being a hangout, would stand to benefit from a proposal like this.

Selectmen may approve the request on a trial basis — not a long term commitment.

May 20 & 21 are the Sevin days...

authority do selectmen have concerning aerial spraying, and does the town have the right to spray private property against a citizen's wishes?

In issuing his opinion, Henderson responded that selectmen are required to appoint a local superintendent of insect pest control (Peter Laugelle) whose duty it is to destroy certain public nuisances within the town. Gypsy moths are defined as public nuisances.

"Entry upon private property to control a public nuisance such as the gypsy moth is not considered a trespass," said Henderson, adding that it would be reasonable to conclude that aerial spraying likewise would not be considered a trespass.

The Henderson response also said selectmen should carry out the December town meeting vote using the recommendation of their pest control superintendent as to the method of eradicating gypsy moth infestation.

Since gypsy moths are among those public nuisances which may be controlled by the town, Henderson wrote, "It would seem that the Town may control public nuisances anywhere within its boundaries regardless of objections from private citizens."

"We could spray the whole town if we want to, but we want to please the town," Selectman Ainslie told a group opposed to spraying with Sevin at the board's meeting last Wednesday.

Anglers beware: stay away from Weymouth herring run

Poachers who've been violating the Weymouth Herring Run are in line for fines up to $1,000, according to Mary Toomey, chairman of the Back River Study Committee and other conservation organizations.

The greater danger is that the theft of the herring and accompanying destruction of the ladders in the Herring Run will diminish the herring population and in turn decrease the number of bluefish and striped bass that come into Hingham Harbor.

The Weymouth Herring Run has long been in disrepair. Back in the early 70's, the state took control of the run since the town hadn't been keeping it up. Now the run is back in the hands of townspeople — Miss Toomey is chairman of the Herring Run committee.

Work has been underway on the ladders which lead to Whitman's Pond, a spawning place of herring for untold numbers of years.

The committee has been trying to bring the herring population back to the numbers of the past.

"There was a time when 100,000 herring would make the trip," Miss Toomey explained.

This year there would have been 12,000 to 15,000 herring battling the current to spawn in Whitman's Pond if not for the problem with poachers.

"At first we didn't realize what was happening," Miss Toomey said. "We don't know how many fish were taken."

The Weymouth Police have caught two poachers since they became aware of the problem. A Boston man was arrested at 2 p.m. Saturday. A Cohasset man was given a citation early Monday morning.

This year no permits are being issued for fishing in the Herring Run. Next year there will be a limited number of permits available.

"We're trying to get control of it," Miss Toomey explained.

She said someone had blocked off a resting place along the ladder using material torn from the steps and taken away 100 pounds or so of the trapped fish. Herring is selling for 30 cents a pound.

"We're lucky if several thousand make it this year," Miss Toomey said.

The herring who do make it to spawn in Whitman's Pond will return to sea. The young will also leave the pond to return three years from now.

Unlike salmon who die from the effort of the battle against the current, the herring return year after year to the same spawning ground.

Miss Toomey guesses the new work on the ladders and the accompanying tighter policing of the run will mean the herring population will increase. But it will take about five years for the numbers to mount up.

The new penalties for violation of the herring run range from fines of $10 to $1,000. The fines are the same for interrupting the fish without permission or for vandalism. Restitution is required for cases of vandalism.

Under state law it is also possible to lose other fishing permits.

The regulations are new for Weymouth.

"We do not intend it to become a scenic run," Miss Toomey said. "We want it to be a working run.

"The striped bass and the bluefish won't come into the Harbor if the herring don't come."

By now there are two spots on the run that need repair due to the poachers.

Learn to draw at the Art Center

Anyone who wants to learn "how to draw" should register now for the Basic Drawing class to be taught by Virginia Moore at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

The class will start Monday, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. and continue for eight weeks. It is geared for both beginning and intermediate levels with the weekly 2½ hour sessions planned to cover composition, structural form, perspective, light and shade.

Teenagers may enroll with permission of the director and the teacher. Enrollments, with fees, must be made in advance of the start of the class.

Ms. Moore studied at Massachusetts College of Art and received her diploma from the Art Institute in Boston. She has taught privately, in the Hull Adult Education classes and at the South Shore Art Center.

For further information, call 383-9548 or drop by to visit the Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

contract is to bridge any communication gap that students might have with their parents."

"The contract is worth a try," said Clapp, "It's been done in other communities, but what works for one doesn't always for another. There are youngsters in the community who would perhaps be in situations where they might be afraid to call home."

The contract is geared at those young people who don't have the best of communications on the home front, she continued. "It's not condoning drinking, under any circumstances."

"We have to work on the premise that we are never going to be able to entirely wipe out drinking...that's very unlikely," she said.

The School administrators and the Health Education Advisory Council support the S.A.D.D. program.

"What we are trying to do is to educate our children in Kindergarten through Grade 12 to respect their bodies wholly enough whether it be food problems or drugs and alcohol," said Clapp, explaining Health Education Advisory Committee's philosophy.

"All you can do is put it out there. And if you only make a difference for one child, it's worth every single bit of the hours of planning, the thought, the time, the reviewing and everything that goes into it — it's worth it," she said.

Carol Sandblom, a member of the Health Education Advisory Council endorsed S.A.D.D. "I think it's a marvelous program...Mike (Gill) has done a beautiful job of putting it together. He seems to have the support of the students. Hopefully, we can use peer pressure to a good advantage."

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell is equally enthusiastic; saying he is in complete support. "Just like any public school administrator, we worry about the drinking and drug problems." Basically, the program is telling students that if they drink — they are not to drive.

Though no one would predict how students might respond to S.A.D.D., there are indications the program will succeed.

Last month, Gill and eight Cohasset High School students attended a statewide S.A.D.D. conference for high school students at the State House. Five students and two teachers were invited from each school. However, Gill arranged to send eight Cohasset students who wanted to attend the conference.

Cohasset student representatives at the conference were: Mary Jo Mahoney, Jack McNeill, Diane Gunnville, Justine Hoffman, Jack Maloney, Ginger Ralff, Jackie Plante and John Replogle.

The community evening program will begin Thursday, in the High School auditorium, from 7:45 to 10 p.m. The topic is "Alcohol Issues in the Community". A film, "The Mountain" will be shown. Bill Spinks, of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, and Cathy Suk, a representative of M.A.D.D. will be the guest speakers.

Gill, Spinks, Suk and Cohasset Police Chief John DeBassio will participate in a discussion panel.

S.A.D.D. has four goals: to eliminate the drunk driver and save lives; to conduct community alcohol awareness programs; to alert and inform students of the dangers of alcohol and driving, and to organize a peer-counseling program to help students who may have concerns about alcohol.

The S.A.D.D. organization is expanding from Massachusetts into New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

S.A.D.D. pins and bumper stickers are on order for Cohasset students and vehicles.

REFLECTIONS'
"HOLISTIC HEALTH, INC." TO OPEN IN HARBOR AREA THIS MONTH

REFLECTIONS - COHASSET HARBOR: Reflections' Management announced this week it is entering into a new phase of health care.

The health center, called Holistic Health, Inc. will offer several programs on nutritional counseling, hair analysis, and meditation techniques.

In addition to skin care with all natural produts, vitamins will be sold at Holistic Health, Inc.

Mark Mincolla will direct the health center which will be located behind the Reflections Hair Salon on Elm Street.

In coordination with the salon, facial massages and skin care will be available from a trained and licensed esthetician, Ms. Linda Ladrigan.

Vitamins being sold at Holistic Health, Inc. are from Conford, California, and can't be bought on the market anywhere, Mincolla said. "They are only sold to doctors."

He added: "They are the Rolls Royce of vitamins and I'm carrying them only because I believe in them."

Mincolla has a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology from Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire and a Master of Arts in Holistic health and nutrition from Goddard.

He has practiced holistic health for himself over the past 12 years.

"Nutritional health has become more popular in society, recently, along with athletic exercise," Mincolla said.

Mincolla, who has already spoken with many of the medical doctors in town, said "We in no way intend to be diagnostic or prescriptive. We don't want to compete with the medical professions."

The Holistic Health Center staff will act as counselors, consumer advocates and guidance counselors for individual health needs at the community level.

"We hope to fill the void where people are interested in caring for themselves better," Mincolla said.

For further informatin about the health center, contract the staff at Reflections Hair Salon.

Evening seminars will be offered.

☐There's very little that can be more pleasing than watching and listening to young people sing, and the recent Spring Choral Concert at the high school was no exception.

The songs performed by the junior and senior high choruses were both varied and pleasing. The Cohasset Barbershop Quartet and their guests, the Brockton Harmoneers, were a delight to everyone. A special hit was one song which was individually dedicated to School Superintendent Eugene Crowell. The taped interlude of electronic music provided an interesting exposure to a new and exciting music form.

After the performance, Director Bryan Marks received many comments on the fine quality of the students' performance.

☐Among the special awards presented at the Spring Choral Concert, two very special awards were received by senior Jon Durant. For his work in music, Jon was given the Gold Seal Music Honor Award and the Creativity and Leadership in Electronic Music Award, both of which, judging from the recent performance, were well deserved.

Awards were also presented to: Amy Urmson, who received the Frederic Chopin Piano Award; in Barbershop, awards for Harmony Versatility were given to Ken Breitkreuz and Fred Zotos, and Mike Ellis was chosen Barbershopper of the Year; awards for section leaders for junior chorus went to Alto Sandra Best and Soprano, Susie Tehranian; pins for two years participation for junior chorus went to Sandra Best, Kim Wright, Susie Tehranian and Julie Litchfield.

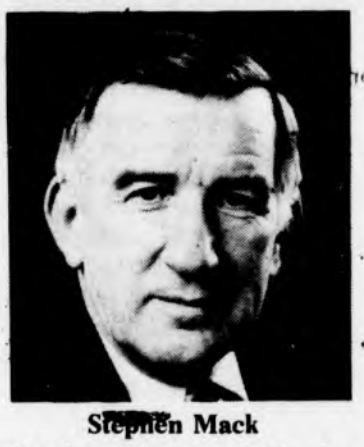
Seniors who received special recognition for their contributions were Johanna Arola, Mike Birmann, Jon Durant and Mike Ellis.

☐Coast Guard Storekeeper 3rd Class Michael MacDonald, son of Joseph and Agnes MacDonald of 49 Ripley Road, has graduated from Storekeeper School.

A 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School, he joined the Coast Guard in August 1980.

Cmdr. Tom Trautwein

☐Navy Cmdr. Tom Trautwein of Cohasset is a member of Anti-Submarine Patrol Squadron 92 (VP-92) which uses the P-3 Orion aircraft to patrol the shipping lanes of the North Atlantic.



Based at Naval Air Station, South Weymouth, the squadron participates in two weeks of annual operational training each year in addition to monthly weekend duty at the base. In the past, the squadron has conducted training exercises in Florida, the Azores, Spain and Bermuda.

Trautwein joined the Navy in February, 1966.

☐Robert Bird of 4 Surrey Drive has been promoted to District Manager of the K-Mart Corporation.

In that position, he will be responsible for 13 stores in Southern New Hampshire, and Massachusetts. Prior to his promotion, Bob served as general store manager in Weymouth, and then in Somerville.

The Birds will soon be celebrating two very important occasions — Bob's 25th year with the K-Mart Corporation, and the 25th anniversary of his graduation from Brown University.

Stephen Mack

☐Stephen Mack of Main St., has been elected senior vice president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company (IMI) of Boston.

Mack joined IMI as director of advertising in 1973 and prior to his most recent position, was vice president of corporate communications.

He has been active in Boston advertising for a number of years, having served as account executive at BBD&Q and vice president of John C. Dowd, Inc.

Mac has a B.S. in journalism from Boston University and a Masters in counseling from the University of Massachusetts.

☐Michael Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan of 708 Jerusalem Road, was recently elected vice president of his senior class at Assumption College, Worcester.

Michael is a student senator of the Student Government Association and vice chairman of the Dorm Council. He is a business management major at Assumption.

In the fall, as part of his senior year curriculum at Assumption, Michael will serve an internship with the Norton Company in Worcester specializing in the marketing area of that firm.

His future plans include graduate work in business management to attain a Master of Business Administration degree.

☐Stephen Kravette of Jerusalem Road was among the featured speakers last week at an all-day career conference seminar at the Park Plaza Hotel, Boston.

Kravette spoke on the subject of his third book, "How To Get A Job In 30 Seconds" which is scheduled to be released for sale at the National Book Show in Anaheim, Calif., at the end of this month.

His other books are "Complete Relaxation" and "Complete Meditation."

☐Four retiring firemen who have contributed well over 120 years of work to the town will be honored at a special dinner next Friday evening at Dreamwold in Scituate.

They are: Department Chief Tom Hernan who was appointed in 1948; Ralph Perroncello and Ernest (Hot) Sullivan who were appointed in 1950, and Billy Nickerson, appointed in 1958.

Many local dignitaries are expected to be present at the dinner and presentation which is being planned by members of Local 2804. A family-style roast beef and turkey dinner "with all the trimmings" will be served after which there will be dancing until 1 a.m. The cost is $17 per person, and checks may be sent to C.P.F., Local 2804, 44 Elm Street. Reserved tickets may be picked up at the door. Further information may be obtained by calling 383-0261.

Entry information available for So. Shore Arts Festival

Entry information is now available for all artists and photographers who would like to enter the 27th Annual South Shore Arts Festival to be held July 2 through 5 on Cohasset Common.

This national Festival is the oldest continuous outdoor Festival in Massachusetts and is sponsored by the South Shore Art Center.

This year's Festival chairman, Lisbeth Koopman Wyman of Weymouth reports there will be juried shows with cash awards in painting, drawing, graphics, sculpture (3-D) and photography as well as an invited exhibit and the traditional Members' Show.

An impressive panel of jurors will make selections for the exhibit and also serve as a jury of awards.

They are: Fred Walkey, former Director of the DeCordova Museum and presently owner of the Walkey Gallery in Concord; Carole Bolsey, painter and instructor at the DeCordova Museum School and whose work is represented by Condeso/Rawler Gallery, NYC, the Clark Gallery and the Naga Gallery; Nathan Goldstein, chairman of the Foundation Program of Study at the Art Institute of Boston and author of "The Art of Responsive Drawing" and "Painting: Visual and Technical Fundamentals."

The Photography jurors are Ulrike Welsch, freelance prize-winning photographer formerly with the Boston Globe and author of "The World I Love to See," and Stan Grossfeld, Globe Photographer, winner of many press photography awards.

Entries must be delivered to the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset Friday, June 11 from 4 to 8 p.m. or Saturday, June 12 from 10 to 4 p.m.

Richard Hunter to perform at Broad Cove Chorale

A program featuring music for harp and French horns with women's voices will be presented at Broad Cove House, Hingham, Sunday afternoon, May 16, by the Broad Cove Chorale.

The hour- long recital will be held in the spacious music room at 4, and followed by a garden reception.

Harpist Richard Hunter, choir director and organist at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, and accompanist of the Fine Arts Chorale, Weymouth, will be the featured guest artist.

He is a student of the world-famous harpist, Lucile Lawrence. The four French horns of the Hingham Civic Orchestra will add their mellow tones to pieces by Schubert and Haydn, while the centerpiece of the concert, the "Harfenlieder" (harp songs) of Brahms, features harp and two horns with the chorus. Daniel Pinkham's "Clear Mirrors," written last year for the same combination of instruments, will receive its second performance ever, as Margo Euler directs the Chorale in its spring recital.

Members of the Broad Cove Chorale from Cohasset are Sarah deLima, Mary Anne Hansen, Marilynn Humphreys, and Diana Rousseau.

Tickets for the concert must be purchased in advance; seating is limited and there will be admission at the door without previous reservation.

Tickets are available at the Hingham Square Bookshop or by calling Kathy Reardon (749-0162) or Marilynn Humphreys (383-9873).

Sevin from heaven

The best we can say about Cohasset's impending rain of Sevin from Heaven — a rain on the gypsy moth, its predators, the human race, the rest of the environment, and Mary Jane McArthur's car — is that history records numerous instances when our ancestors, too, found their reason defoliated.

One thinks of Red-scares, hula-hoops, burnt witches, and (some years later) burnt brassieres.

Such hysterical periods are much like the gypsy moth caterpillar itself: they are cyclical and come to a sudden end quite naturally. But until they do, no application of pesticides — in these cases the universal pesticide reason — will do a bit of good.

So we fear the Selectmen of Cohasset are bound and determined to dim their own lustre along with that of collegue McArthur's car. But always hopeful for the miraculous, we here offer our Selectmen a small repast of those slimey, hairy, crawly, ubiquitous little buggers: the facts.

— The gypsy moth was accidentally released into Medford in 1869 by a fellow in search of a silk moth that could survive in North America. In an environment devoid of its natural enemies, the gypsy moth spread throughout the Northeast by the early 1920's.

— During its seven week caterpillar stage, which begins early in May, the gypsy moth dines voraciously on the young leaves of apple, alder, basswood, hawthorne, poplars and most especially oaks. When trees are thus defoliated several years running they become vulnerable to other pests such as borers, which can cause the partial or complete death of a tree. Mankind's rocksalt can also kill trees, weakened by the gypsy moth.

— When deciduous trees are unavailable, gypsy moths will eat the needles of conifers. In doing so they can kill a conifer in a single season.

— Woodlands defoliated by gypsy moths are unsightly, but neither whole forests nor the long-term economic value of forests is threatened. Forested land in New England is in fact many times greater today than it was in 1869.

— Gypsy moths have developed some natural enemies in America, which include mice, shrews, Calesoma beetles, chickadees, bluejays, catbirds, robins, and most importantly nucleopolyhedrosis virus. The last is a wilt disease carried chronically by some gypsy moths. The disease tends to become epidemic in time of moth overpopulation and cause the sudden disappearance of the infestation. Thus, the gypsy moth is naturally cyclical. Periods of infestation are inevitably followed by periods of remission lasting many years.

— Nonetheless, gypsy moth caterpillars are nasty and annoying pests in a number of ways, among which are these: They make an audible crunch while eating and are said to have frightened children old enough to wear designer jeans. They have an affinity for swimming pools and there are recorded cases of their entering the trunks of swimmers, as well as one recorded case of entering the nostril of a Marshfield attorney, who although unwilling to take a sobriety test, stated that he was not drunk. Tennis courts are another attraction for the caterpillars, where they get crushed under foot and have caused many a double fault.

— Notwithstanding such environmental hazards to pleasant suburban living, the gypsy moth poses no threat whatever to human beings.

— The pesticide Sevin, however, probably does pose a threat to the environment. It kills bees and butterflies as well as a few gypsy moths. It kills the gypsy's natural predators, thus interfering with nature's cyclical remedy for the problem. Sevin's past use is strongly linked with fish kills in Duxbury and other nearby towns. It can damage the paint finish of a car. It can be ingested through the skin by pregnant women, and there is some evidence that it could have a teratogenic effect, which, parents, means it may cause birth defects.

— But one thing Sevin apparently does not do is effectively control the gypsy moth population. Both Sharon and Attleboro have used the stuff for several years, and both towns still have the things crawling about and squishing under foot.

That's enough, lady and gentlemen of the Board of Selectmen. We could go on, but we think we've made the case against Sevin from Heaven. We think you darn well better wake up and do your duty and terminate your ill-thunk plan to chemically aereate us over an overrated caterpillar.

Enough of your blithering excuses. Cancel the contract with C & W Ag Air, pay a breach-of-contract penalty if necessary, and save those silly "day-glo" flags for the next election.

You may need them then.

Observations...

...Did you notice in Monday's two overturned trucks on the expressway...the North Shore got lobster. The South Shore got scrod.

Sevin decision was too hasty

Letters

To the Editor:

At a Special Town Meeting in Decmeber, 1981, Cohasset citizens made a hasty decision to appropriate $50,000.00 for gypsy moth spraying this Spring. In January, 1982, shortly after that vote was taken, the State Department of Environmental Management, Division of Forest and Parks, recommended against spraying the chemical Sevin for gypsy moth control but in favor of using the biological substance, B.T. (Bacillus thuringiensis).

Following what our Selectmen call the "intent" of the town meeting vote, another hasty action was taken when they signed a contract with C & W Ag Air Service of Hanson, in early March, 1982, for the purpose of aerial spraying of the town with Sevin 4-Oil. Our Selectmen contend that the State letter, which was sent to all cities and towns, never reached their attention.

During our regular Town Meeting in April, a resolution was introduced by citizens concerned with the advisability of using Sevin. The non-binding resolution, which urged the Selectmen to reconsider spraying with B. T. rather than Sevin, was passed by a large majority vote.

Cohasset Selectmen have continued to refer to the "intent" of the December vote as binding them to aerial spraying with Sevin, despite the contrary opinion of State agencies that B. T. should be used.

With the time for spraying only about a week away, citizens have learned that State and Federal reimbursement funds, of as much as 50 percent, are available to our town for ground spraying with B. T.

We might ask a number of questions about the manner in which the spraying decision was made:

1. Should such decisions be arrived at during special town meetings before state guidelines, as to appropriateness of spraying substance to be used and as to manner of receiving maximum reimbursement, have been determined?

2. Does the spraying of the non-approved substance present a risk to our well-being?

3. Can we afford to pass up large state and federal reimbursements, by using the material not approved by the State?

4. Are the Selectmen really bound by "intent" when the manner of spraying and substance to be sprayed were not stated in the warrant article?

5. Is it appropriate for town officials to sign a contract in which the supplier of services has very limited liability for faulty action in the process of spraying?

6. Have the Selectmen protected the well-being of the citizens by signing a contract which favors only the company's interests?

Keeping teachers on their merit

To the Editor:

On May 17 the Cohasset School Committee must fish or cut bait on the major issue facing American Education today. The issue: are teachers retained for their professional teaching ability or for their union seniority?

In the past Cohasset has been able to make its staff reductions from its non-tenured staff. Now in 1982 will be the first time the School Committee has had to choose between tenured teachers.

The contract with the Cohasset Teachers Association states that the School Committee: "...it shall, consistent with existing law, retain those teachers who it deems most qualified. If the committee determines that all other factors are equal, length of service in the Cohasset school system shall govern." Thus, one can see the School Committee has a free hand in retaining the most talented staff, as very seldom are all factors equal.

It appears the school administration is giving into union seniority by recommending to the School Committee to drop two of the newest tenured teachers. It would be interesting to know if the evaluations of these two teachers supports such a recommendation.

It is my understanding that the School Committee was given the recommendation to drop these two specific teachers in December of 1981. Actually, teacher evaluations for this school year were done in March and April of 1982. How a recommendation can be made four months prior to the 1982 evaluation date defies all logic.

Should these recommendations of the administration be accepted by the School Committee without a full open public discussion, it would be tragic. This type of management by the School Committee would make it difficult in the future for the Cohasset School System to attract and retain those teachers with good teaching ability, scholarship and high professional standards.

We cannot afford as parents and educators to allow the professional ability of our teachers to be replaced by union seniority when it comes to which teachers will be retained in our school system. Should union seniority dominate, it will hasten the demise of the public school system as we know it today and will further fire the cause of the "Voucher-System" now being discussed on the federal level.

AFS auction succeeds both ways

To the Editor:

The AFS Auction Evening on May 1 was a great success both for AFS supporters who came away with armloads of bargains and treasures and for the Cohasset AFS Chapter, which will now be able to offer financial assistance to AFS students from Cohasset High School.

The Chapter would like to thank the Auction Evening Committee for their diligent work in organizing and preparing this event.

It is also grateful to the many businesses and individuals for their generous donations of goods and services, to the Cohasset High School AFS Club members for their enthusiastic help, and to all the AFS supporters for their spirited participation and bidding at the Auction Evening.

Too young to be grey and wise

By Patricia Desmond

You couldn't tell she dyed her hair unless you knew her last month or looked at the part of her hair with a microscope.

The color was what her hair should have been even in those years when it was black coffee. It became her, as her mother said.

Men seemed reluctant to comment on the change. Her steel wool locks turned cafe au lait one night. And the men she knew didn't realize or pretended they didn't.

She guessed men felt that remarking on her new hair color was like referring to an unzipped zipper — something too intimate for an acquaintance to presume.

Women seemed to babble interminably about how much better it looked.

She didn't know which she preferred — having someone ignore the very obvious or go on and on and on about it.

The decision to cover the age marks of her hair hadn't come lightly.

She felt — deep in her soul — that the act was deceitful, untrue to her inner personhood.

She wondered why she'd done it. This radical departure from years of scrupulous honesty with herself, with her friends, with anyone who might be so curious as to ask her a question.

She wondered even more the second time she bought the magic dye. Buying it embarassed her that time.

The first time the purchase had been an impulse. Walking through a drug store between the rows of teeth gleemers and the packages of lip gloss, she had stopped by the boxes of bleach and dye. She stopped without premeditation, stared for a few minutes, and chose something called deep honey blonde.

She hadn't been embarassed at all, paying for it with her shoulder length grey hair just as straight as ever.

Of course it didn't come out honey blonde. She managed to streak some blonde highlights where there'd been deadly dull grey and the rest of the brown/black mop softened. Cafe au lait.

The second time the purchase was planned. As planned as a first degree murder.

She somehow felt she needed to wear a sign — dyed hair — to regain her estimation of herself.

That night in a dream she saw clearly that dyed women ought to be wearing the grey D, just as Hester Prynne wore her scarlet A.

In the dream, she saw a burning field. Marsh grass in smokey flames — somehow, as only a dream can manage, the field was set on a cliff, high above a murky sea. The waves, white-capped and swelling, slapped against a beach of rock. More jagged rocks scaled the side of the cliff.

She could see herself in the dream, standing and watching the burning field. She wore the grey D on a dress a gypsy might have created. Her cafe au lait hair was blowing loose, longer than in real life. She watched the scene — fire, water, rocks and wind. And watching it she knew she was safe from the basic elements. She was an observer.

When she woke from the dream, she wondered once again why she had colored her hair. She wondered why she was obsessed by such a vanity. She wondered why she had become a woman of medium brown hair even in the middle of a subconscious night.

Her double bed with its pink sheets and maroon blanket felt cold. She reached out for a sweater, fuzzy and lilac. Slowly she moved away from the bed that now seemed comfortless.

Looking into her silver-rimmed bureau mirror, she saw someone familiar. She couldn't quite remember how she looked before the ritual color bath.

Looking in the mirror, her eyes asked the question, again, louder.

"I wasn't ready to feel old," she finally whispered. "I wasn't ready to think of myself that way — all grey and serious.

"Grey means serious and wise and no longer young." She picked up the brush on the bureau and smoothed through the color she found to ward off age and other forms of truth.

"Will I ever be ready to realize mid-age?" she asked herself.

She brushed harder, looking herself in the eye. Seeing a person still too young to be grey and wise.

Commentary

Proper payment for re-runs

Claire McDonough

Dear Claire:

I am writing to you because I need advice. Like yourself, I write a regular column. However, my writing is syndicated and based on problems people have. You just wouldn't believe the personal stuff folks will put on paper and mail to a complete stranger. You also wouldn't believe how much money you can make responding to their letters whether you solve their problems or not.

Well, anyway, lately the problems just haven't been interesting. I mean, the regular news coverage tells all about people who lost their social security, can't send their kids to college, don't trust their politicians, think they're going to be wiped out by a big bang, or wonder why the heck they have to send their tax dollars and/or their children to places they can't even find on a map. If I print their letters, my readers will think they're experiencing deja vu.

So I solved my own problem. I started sending my editors letters I got a few years back when everyone worried about acne, love, nosey neighbors, and what to do with the other woman. I figured if my readers felt deja vu, they'd think it was something they'd seen on "General Hospital", right?

It worked for a while. I changed the names and a few of the details, although I pretty much left the solutions the same. And I've always suspected that nobody on the staff of any of the papers reads my stuff anyway. But then, some readers with freaky memories and a flair for detail (they must have been Virgos, don't you think?) started to notice, and the papers are getting pretty snarky about it.

Claire, I feel that if something was good once, it should be even better the second time around. Don't you agree? And don't you think I should be paid both times? Feelings Hurt in Chicago

Dear Feelings:

I'm with you, kiddo. Any editor who doesn't understand what you're doing is an insensitive clod and a prime example of the Peter Principle.

If people want to read about unemployment, they'll find everything they want to know on the front page, and anyone with a more personal problem tells it to Jerry Williams or Pat Whitley.

Actually, I recycle Around Town all the time. That way, folks get to enjoy their vacations two times for the price of one, and couples who have only one baby can get congratulations and presents twice.

Everyone's happy, and I get paid double. (Wot? Ed.) So far, my editor hasn't noticed. Tell yours to wake up and smell the coffee. The way things have been going lately, they may want to start reusing headlines.

Claire

A statement from the selectmen on gypsy moth spraying

(Selectmen last week issued the following statement on aerial spraying of gypsy moths. Ed.)

The Town of Cohasset, by vote of a special town meeting last December, will undertake a program to control gypsy moth infestation by aerial spraying during the period May 15 through June 1, 1982, between the hours of 5 and 8 a.m. Suitable notice will be given prior to commencing operations.

It is anticipated that no more than three mornings will be required to complete the entire town. All highways entering the town will be posted, prior to the spraying period, for the benefit of motorists.

The product known as "Sevin" will be used and will be applied at the rate of one quart per acre.

The spraying will be done by C & W Ag-Air Service.

Individual properties may be excluded from the program by the owner making application to the Board of Selectmen and marking his/her property in accordance with standards established by the applicator and accepted by the town. It should be noted that while properly marked areas will not be sprayed, aircraft will fly over those areas in a regular flight pattern coverage of the town.

Precautions will be taken by the town and should be taken by its inhabitants to enhance their safety. As far as the town is concerned, spraying will be limited to the hours 5 through 8 a.m. on days when weather and wind conditions permit. Opening of schools will be delayed so that children will not be needlessly exposed to the spray. Ample notice will be given prior to spraying. The individual property owner can cooperate by covering automobiles, yard items, toys, gardens, etc., the night before spraying.

If you have any questions, please call Mr. Laugelle who will issue further instructions as the date for spraying approaches. He may be contacted at 383-0228.

Tennis girls win three more, now 7-1

The girls tennis team won three matches last week and improved to 7-1 in the South Shore League. Karen Murphy and Joy Pratt remained undefeated in doubles play.

Murphy and Pratt blanked their Hull and Rockland opponents last week with scores of 6-0, 6-0. Against Hanover, Murphy and Pratt gave up three games enroute to a 6-1, 6-2 victory.

Cohasset defeated Hanover 3-2. The Skippers ended Hanover's undefeated streak with victories in both doubles and the third singles matches. Hanover's Karen Geromini and Paula Kelley have been undefeated for three years at the first and second single spot. Cohasset's second singles player Sue Dalrymple snatched two games off Kelley but lost the match 6-1, 6-1.

The Skippers' third singles player Krissie Ralff defeated her opponent, 6-1, 6-1. Cohasset's second doubles pair, Jenny Mitman and Diane Mullen clinched a tiebreaking first set victory and overcame the Hanover pair in two sets, 7-6, 7-5, 6-2.

In the Rockland contest, Cohasset's first singles player Mia Graham won her match 6-1, 6-2. Ralff, Murphy, Pratt, Dalrymple, Elaine Mullen, and Ann O'Connell were all winners for Cohasset. The Skippers won the meet, 5-1.

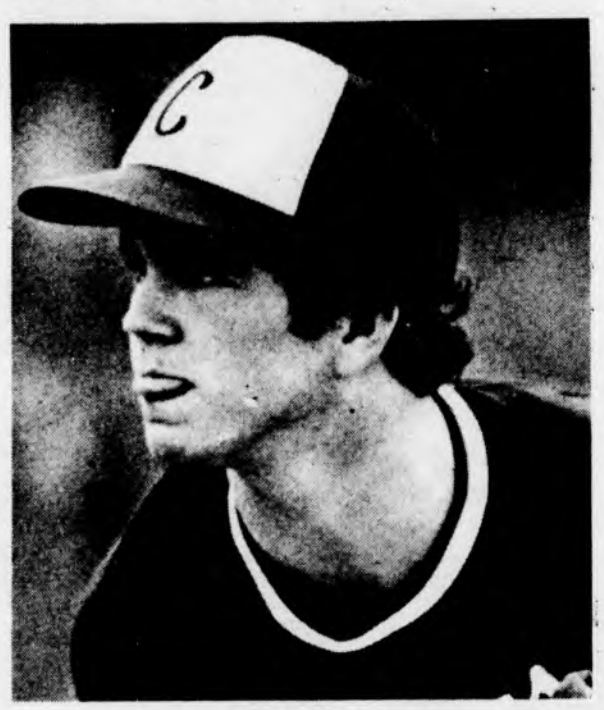
The Skipper tennis team finally played Hull last week in a game which had been postponed since early April because of the blizzard. The wait was worth it as Cohasset dominated the Pirates with 4-1 outcome.

Though Graham lost her match to Hull's Ann Cogliano, Cohasset Coach Peggy Lynch said it was Mia's finest game this season. The three-set match continued long after the Cohasset softball team had surpassed Hull, 6-0, on an adjacent field. Including warm-up time the match lasted about three hours.

After losing the first set, 6-2, Graham plugged away at her opponent for the second set, 7-5, victory. The third set was evenly matched but Cogliano clinched the important game winning points for the third set, 6-3, victory.

The four matches won by Cohasset versus Hull were: Dalrymple, 6-3, 6-2; Ralff, 6-4, 6-1; Pratt and Murphy, 6-0, 6-0; Diane and Elaine Mullen won by forfeit.

Athlete of the week



Meet CHS Kevin Dooley, this week's "Athlete of the Week" for his contributions on the baseball field.

Dooley is co-captain of the Skipper squad and is no stranger to athletics at Cohasset High School. He quarterbacked the football team in the fall.

Cohasset Coach Tom Burnell described Dooley as a versatile and valuable team member. Example: Last week, Dooley played in the outfield against Hanover and at second base against Hull. He came to the mound late in the Hull game and did some relief pitching.

Burnell attributes Dooley's keen athletic talent to his sharp reflexes. "Basically," said Burnell, "Kevin is a talented athlete. He is valuable because we can use him at a number of positions. He's very, very quick. He has sharp reflexes and that enables him to adapt to several different positions."

Dooley has a .280 batting average. Dooley's teammates admire the senior co-captain. "They have respect for his abilities as well as his leadership talent," said Burnell.

Coastal Youth Soccer is now at the halfway point

Cohasset spring soccer, playing in the Coastal Youth Soccer Association (CYSA) this year, is at the half-way point of the season.

One of the surprises and an indication of the growing interest in soccer, is the strong showing of the younger teams. There is an abundance of talent in all divisions, and a lot of excitement at Milliken Field every Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Come on out and see some fun soccer.

Here are the results to date:

— D Division (10 and under), Coach John Hughes, (scores unavailable), 3 wins and 2 losses.

— C Division (12 and under), Coach John Anderson, Sacred Heart 7-1; Pembroke 7-1; Scituate 6-1; Kingston 5-0; and Sacred Heart 5-2.

B Division (14 and under), Coach Martin Acevedo, Pembroke 4-0; Scituate 1-4; Norwell 0-0; Duxbury 0-2; Plymouth 1-6.

B2 Division (14 and under), Coach John Gaston, Kingston 2-2; Carver 0-1; Marshfield 4-2; Norwell 0-1; Kingston 0-0.

A Division (16 and under), Coach Charlie DeSantis, Scituate 0-2; Norwell 0-2; Pembroke 3-6; Duxbury 0-4; Hanover 3-2.

AA Girls Division (19 and under), Coach Jack Duncombe, Plymouth 0-1; Pembroke 1-2; Norwell 1-0; Scituate 0-1.

A Girls (16 and under), Coach Jack Duncombe, Duxbury 0-3; Scituate 3-0; Hanover 0-1; Scituate 1-0; Plymouth 3-2.

Softball girls lead the South Shore league

As the halfway mark of the softball season approaches, the Cohasset girls find themselves sitting atop the South Shore League standings.

The Skippers are in first place with a 8-1 league record. They've beat everyone except East Bridgewater which was one of their first games.

The girls are ahead of last year's schedule, by far. They finished 8-8 in league competition last year and did not qualify for the tourney. Things are looking bright for the softball squad and not only do they have a chance for tourney action but they could win the league title.

Duxbury, Middleboro, and E.B. are the three opponents that have troubled the Skippers. But the girls came out ahead of Duxbury and Middleboro by two or three runs.

In other action the Cohasset squad has defeated most opponents by at least eight runs or more. Last week was an exception when the Skippers scored only six runs en route to a victory over Hull.

Cohasset downed Hanover 24-5 last week. In that game the Skippers crossed home plate eight times in both the second and fourth innings.

Against the Indians, Gia Barresi had four hits and collected five runs batted in. Sara Froio and Janet DiGirolamo contributed to the win with two hits each.

In the Hull game, Liz Russell had a superior performance at the plate and collected five hits. Other powerful hitters for Cohasset were: Madeline Roy, Laura Hines, and Janet DiGirolamo. Stacey Thompson and Karen Froio were defensive standouts in the field for Cohasset.

Steve Keating again leads Maine football team

Steve Keating

For the second straight year Cohasset's Steve Keating has been elected Captain of the University of Maine Black Bear football team.

Coach Ron Rogerson made the announcement at the Annual Spring football banquet, held May 1 at Killarney's Restaurant in Bangor.

The 6'3", 240 pound offensive lineman is the third Keating brother to play football at Maine.

Steve's brother, Chris, a 1979 Maine football captain and current Buffalo Bill's linebacker, was the guest speaker at the dinner attended by over 400 players, parents and boosters.

Around town

☐"It's not a venture that everyone would immediately think of, but it certainly is necessary," says Don Livingstone of the new family business which he and his sons have just started.

Don, a retired vice president of a large savings and loan association, is most enthusiastic about Rooterman for which the Livingstone's have the franchise from Milton to Plymouth with a two-year option for Plymouth to Hyannis. "It's a good size operaion," he explains, "which requires a fair amount of capital investment and experience."

Both he and his son Jack who has done previous work for Rooterman studied the ideas for several months before deciding to make the commitment. Jack is the owner of a painting contracting business in the area with which he also plans to continue. Another son, Bob, will also be affiliated with the family business.

The main area of concentration for the company is in cleaning, pumping and installing all types of pipes and drains. And, "everyone," Bob notes, "whether home or restaurant owner, is a potential customer."

☐It's never too early to plan for an event such as the Village Fair, and members of the Central Committee are doing just that with a "Spring Day" to be held on June 5 in St. Anthony's parking lot.

To cut expenses, the Committee hopes to raise money in advance for procuring items necessary for each committee's tables by collecting items from residents as they spring clean. What a great idea. There will also be a plant table and a bake table.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter preps for boating season

If you spot someone tampering with the town floats at an odd hour of the night, take another look before calling the police. The trespasser just might be Harbormaster Harry Ritter preparing for another boating season.

For example, recently on one early morning (2:30), Ritter was pushing floats into the water at the town creek. He needed an extremely high tide to accompany placement of the floats and he got it. He also got drenched in a pouring rain.

As the boating season approaches, Harbormaster Ritter's 40-hour week grows more irregular. There is rarely a normal eight-hour work day, and usually his schedule revolves around the tides; lunch, for example, always a low-tide meal.

Cohasset is not a community of summer cottages which means the town suffers fewer summer complaints that plague places like Scituate. Still, there are the inevitable complaints of summer and for the harbormaster, that means complaints about moorings; or the lack of them.

This year, about 400 boats will be moored in town waters, but that is little solace for the 283 boat owners on the waiting list who, being on the outs, are staring at a wait of five to six years.

Unless Cohasset decides to widen the harbor, there is little Harbormaster Ritter can do other than caution patience.

He does warn that mooring owners who buy larger boats should consider using a stronger mooring. Otherwise, their large boats are apt to break away and damage other boats in the harbor.

Aside from the soothing of the impatient, Ritter is preparing to enforce a number of rules designed to maintain tranquility in the harbor.

Common violations include speeding boats, overloading boats, failing to carry the required number of personal flotation devices (PFS's), and cutting inside aids for navigation.

Towing water skiers, aqua planes or similar devices is prohibited in the harbor except in connection with water carnivals or in areas designated by selectmen.

Fishermen are not permitted to clean fish on town floats or piers, and discharging oil, refuse or waste is strictly prohibited.

Boats should not be tied to a town landing or pier for more than 30 minutes.

Anyone skindiving in the harbor must display a red-and-white diver's flag while submerged. The skindiver may operate in the harbor only from a boat attended by anothe person.

Mooring fees, said Ritter, are $1.50 per foot, and skiffs can be tied to a float for $15.

The harbormaster's office hours are on Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

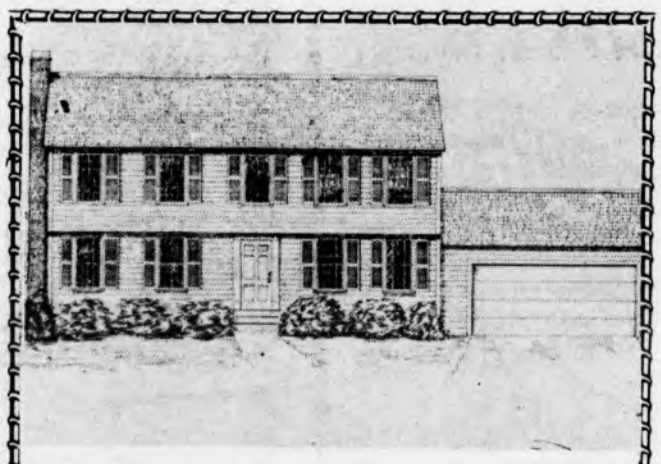
Harbormaster Harry Ritter prepares for another boating season.

Celebrate spring with OMNI

Come celebrate life and the birth of a new spring in Hingham on May 15.

OMNI, The South Shore Center for Life and the Arts, a non-profit educational multi-service center, invites the public to attend SPRING SONG, a May festival to be held on Saturday, May 15 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main St., Hingham.

The OMNI staff, who hail from all over the South Shore, will provide a medley of events. Hingham residents Joanne Cavatorta (co-owner of Hingham Grain and Spice) will offer mini-astrological readings, while SYMA (The Bird's Nest) will give palm readings (75 cents). Dancer Jean Marie Mellichamp of Quincy will create clown faces (50 cents), and Kathryn McGlynn will teach line dancing (50 cents). Marshfield residents Maureen Shortt will demonstrate kiniseology through tolerance testing ($1, from 1 to 4 p.m.) and Mary Johnson will examine Native American artifacts. From Scituate will be Marilyn Hardy offering postural examinations ($5, Feldenkrais) and Rita Roberts, OMNI President, who will be preparing the lunch for the day with Joanne Cavatorta. Other OMNI staff assisting in the festivities will be Dr. Kathleen Herlihy of Plymouth, Attorney Kathleen Snow of Hull, Peggy MacKinnon (weaver and woodworker) from Pembroke, and musician Joseph Wall.



There will be open registration for the second five weeks (beginning May 23) of the current OMNI classes. The day will conclude with a raffle drawing ($1 a ticket) promising prizes of a Belly-Gram from athryn McGlyn, a massage from nurse and integrated health practitioner Bettye Budlong, a will prepared by Attorney Snow, property research by cultural anthropologist Mary Johnson, and a Movement Integration session with counselor Marilyn Hardy.

Tennis squad owns second place

The boys' tennis team beat three South Shore League opponents last week. The Skippers downed Middleboro 3-2, Hull 4-1 and Hanover 3-2.

Cohasset has a 6-1 record which is good enough for second place in the league. Cohasset faces Duxbury, the first place team, on Thursday.

Winners for Cohasset last week were: Shannon Collins, Rob Tis, Todd Henry, Bryan Ramsey, Jim Sturdy, Rich Tinory, Paul Riley, Bill Davenport, John Colocousis, Linton Young and Skip Urmson.

Middleboro falls to CHS golfers

The Cohasset High School Golf team triumphed over Middleboro, 9-0, last week, and improved to a 3-1 record.

The Skippers have a hold on second place in the South Shore League. Duxbury is undefeated, in first place.

Troy Chatterton recorded the best score for Cohasset with a 39 after nine holes versus the Sachems.

Jim Rooney, John Drago and Charles Brady all finished with scores of 41. Captain Jack McNeill had a 43; Steve McMann, 45 and Chris Powers, 44.

Last week's scheduled meet with Hanover was postponed.

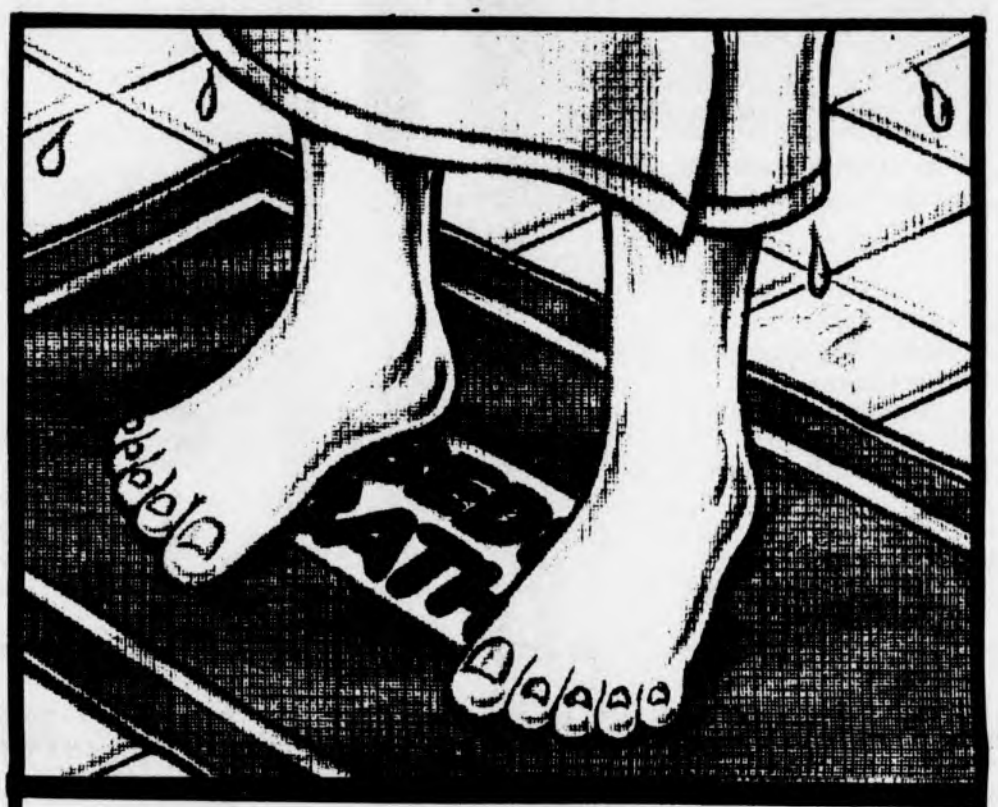
Coast Guard report

SUMMARY OF WEEKLY SEARCH AND RESCUE

SATURDAY, MAY 1

2 p.m., Plymouth Lighthouse, the Gurnett, reports a dead 35 foot whale grounded 300 yards off Saquish Neck. The New England Aquarium, Boston, was notified so that they could study the remains before the Coast Guard towed it well offshore. Prior to the arrival of aquarium personnel the carcass floated free and was not located.



SUNDAY, MAY 2

8:06 a.m., The Scituate Coast Guard 41 foot utility boat was conducting a search in the vicinity of Saquish Neck for the remains of the dead whale. During the course of the search an overturned 10 foot skiff was discovered. The immediate area was searched for people and/or debris in the water with negative results. The vessel itself looked as though it had been in the water quite some time. The skiff was righted, dewatered and towed to the Plymouth harbormaster. The skiff had no identification.

10 a.m., The 24 foot inboard/outboard "Saturday Night" owned by Carl Hultman with three passengers on board reported they were broken down. The vessel, three miles off Scituate, was towed into Scituate by the C.G. 41 foot utility boat.

MONDAY, MAY 3

3:21 p.m., The C.G. 41 foot utility boat discovered a 50 yard by 50 yard oil slick in the vicinity of the Scituate gong bouy. Samples were taken of the slick and from a lobster boat operating close by the area.

Many opt for a "safe" color scheme for their homes while their instincts tell them otherwise. Most intuitive choices are based upon a heartfelt preference. Smothering this potential for drama and excitement to choose something safe is unfortunate. With the help of a decorator or designer, your initial color preferences can be explored and explained. By analyzing possibilities in color, including accents and interplay, the decorator or designer can help make your home a reflection of your true self. It is part of their role to extract your intuitive choices and build upon them with expertise.

You can line up 5 people, show them one particular color, and the odds are pretty good they will all see that color a little differently. When you plan to paint and/or wallpaper, BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE suggests you come see us first. We have a wise selection of paints and wallpaper for you to choose from but we also take the time to find or mix the exact shades and colors you have in mind. Stop in and see us at 763 Country Way in No. Scituate or call 545-3624. Our hours are Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 and we welcome Master Card and Visa. DECORATING TIPE: Allow your family to voice their color preferences. It is also their living space.

S.A.D.D. DAY AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

In an effort to alert and inform students about the dangers of driving while under the influence of alcohol and other drugs, students from Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School are joining an organization called S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk).

S.A.D.D. has four goals: to eliminate the drunk driver and save lives; to conduct community alcohol awareness programs; to alert and inform students of the dangers of alcohol and driving; and to organize a peer counseling program to help students who may have concerns about alcohol.

Thursday, May 13, has been proclaimed as S.A.D.D. Day at Cohasset High School. All students in Grades 10 through 12 will participate in the program. The program will consist of speakers, a film, and a question-answer and discussion period.

The speakers include: Cohasset High School students against driving drunk; Mrs. Carol Lawler, representative from M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Driving Drunk); Paul Deignan, South Shore Council on Alcoholism; and student representatives from Wayland High School (Founders of S.A.D.D.).

Michael Gill took eight Cohasset students to the State House recently for a conference concerning drunk driving. These students will lead the discussions.

There will be a Community Evening Program on May 13 from 7:45 to 10 p.m. at the high school auditorium. The topic of discussion will be "Alcohol Issues in the Community."

The program will consist of speakers, film and a discussion period. Speakers include Bill Spinks of South Shore Council on Alcoholism and Cathy Suk, a representative from M.A.D.D.

A film entitled, "The Mountain," will also be shown.

The discussion panel includes: John DeBassio, Police Chief; Mike Gill, school health education coordinator; Bill Spinks, and Cathy Suk.

Here is the schedule of senior activities from May 17 to Commencement on June 6.

June 6: Graduation, 3 p.m., South Shore Music Circus.

The above listed activities are the only senior activities sponsored and/or supervised by C.H.S., and for which attendance is required.

Class Night is held to provide an opportunity for the presentation of awards and scholarships. Most recipients will have made applications, but some seniors will be honored without having applied. The School will not tolerate public embarrassment to sponsors by a recipient's failure to attend.

Graduation is a public acknowledgement of an earned diploma. If a senior is not in attendance, this achievement will not be noted on June 6.

Early release day

Thursday, May 13, will be an early release day at the elementary schools only.

There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Deer Hill, 12:45 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 12:55 p.m. Lunch will be served in both of these schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee. The faculty at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools will discuss Student Placement for the 1982/83 School Year.

Hingham PTO sponsors Tom Rush

On Sunday, May 23 at 8 p.m. the Foster School P.T.O. in Hingham will present Tom Rush in a rare solo appearance.

The concert will be held at Notre Dame Academy, Main St. (Rte. 228) in Hingham and will serve to establish the Foster School Fund for the Arts. The fund, set up by the P.T.O., will provide financing for the school's popular Artist-in-Residence program. Its money will also support other enrichment programs related to the cultural, visual and performing arts.

Tom Rush, a successful folksinger, songwriter and recording artist, recently played to a sellout crowd at Symphony Hall. The Boston Globe reviewed the evening as "triumphant" and "magical." For the Foster benefit, Rush has also offered to donate proceeds from the sale of his albums that evening to the Arts Fund.

Tickets are $8. and are now available at the Hingham Public Library, Hingham Square Bookshop, Hingham Music Center and at Roger's Music in Cohasset. Seating is limited so those interested are advised to buy their tickets early.

A total party service.

What your party or social gathering needs is what we provide. Our business is meeting all of your requirements and expectations about creating a successful event. We prepare and serve our own food, set up your bar complete with bartenders, recommend photographers, musicians and entertainers. We can even arrange for a reception hall or a tent. And after we do it all, we clean it all up.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Catherine and Harriet Beecher Stowe, those early feminists, held that cooking is an art and that women reign supreme when in the kitchen. Nineteenth century females were inspired when told "the hand that rules the skillet rules the world" and that in those flour-bedecked palms rested the destiny of the Republic. But it wasn't until prepared foods and time-saving devices came along that women were truly liberated and able to expand their realm far beyond the kitchen. Short of hitching up the horse and buggy, there was little chance of escaping the home fires, but with our car calling from the garage, we are free to take a break to savor food someone else has prepared. That's exactly what many of us did when Sandy Littlejohn and her committee served this dish for a League luncheon called

SPINACH-MUSHROOM QUICHE

4 pkgs. chopped spinach, thawed and drained
4 oz. shredded cheddar cheese
1 pkg. fresh mushrooms
Mix in blender:
1 c. milk
1/2 c. parmesan cheese
1/2 c. salad oil
1 c. Bisquick
1 c. cottage cheese
4 eggs

Add chopped spinach, sliced mushrooms. Pour into lasagna pan. Sprinkle cheddar over top. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Cool 15 min. before serving. Serves 8 to 10.

Even those women who lived in city apartments were still cooking in fireplaces until just after the Civil War and it wasn't until the 1870s that the cooking stove and its consequent supply of hot water freed the family cook of heating water, starting up the range at the crack of dawn and emptying ashes that left a layer of thick dust in every nook and cranny. Ann Grassie of Hingham is one of our senior citizens who may remember such scenes in her childhood home, but keeps her modern oven filled with her prize-winning breads, cakes and desserts such as this

STRAWBERRY CREAM CHEESE PIE

Blend 1/3 c. sugar with
1 heaping T cornstarch, add
1 c. thawed or crushed strawberries with juice
Cook on stove top until mixture is thick. Cool. Beat together:
8 oz. cream cheese, softened, with
1/2 c. sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla

Spread cooled strawberry mixture into baked 9" pie shell. Pour cream mixture over top and spread evenly. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 min., or until golden brown.

For many of us the kitchen loses its charm when spring gardening beckons. The trouble is that along with breaking your fingernails (and back) and getting sunburned on the nape of your neck, you work up a tremendous appetite. A request from Ginny Whitmore for a recipe for dandelion jelly, reminded me that this weed that originated in ancient Greece, can be "harvested" for your evening meal. Native Indians used the dandelion medicinally, the Italians often use it in place of chicory in a salad and the french still grow it commercially. The next time you yank up a handful keep in mind it is a good source of vitamins A, B, C and E. Greens and buds may be cooked and served like spinach, or with a French dressing, used in a salad. The very young buds, fried in butter, taste similar to mushrooms. My book by Leona Woodring Smith offers recipes for Dandelion Sandwiches, tea, wine and omelet; everything but Ginny's requested jelly. If you know of one, please call before the 15th when she needs it for a talk she's giving. Meanwhile, here's how to make a

LUNCHEON DANDELION OMELET

4 eggs
1/2 tsp. water
2 T butter
4 T dandelion buds (sauteed)

Whip eggs with water about 30 strokes. Put butter into omelet pan and when it foams tilt pan to coat sides. Add eggs and stir until liquid sets. Just before folding over add washed dandelion buds which have been sauteed in butter for 2-3 min. Garnish with crumbled bacon. Serves 2.

Dramatic Club to compete at Brandeis

This Spring is a busy one for members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, who, in addition to preparing their regular scheduled production at the Town Hall, have seen their last Fall's production of the comedy "Table Manners" accepted for performance at this year's Brandeis Festival.

While cast and production crews are hard at work on the Spring show, "Strange Bedfellows," last Fall's cast is readying a scene from their November performance for the annual competition at Spingold Theater.

The 29th Annual New England Theatre Conference (NETC) Community Theatre Drama Festival will be held in the Spingold Theatre at Brandeis University, Waltham, from May 26 to 30. Twenty-one Theater Groups from New England communities will perform a variety of productions, covering a full range of dramatic and musical offerings. Among the participants will be the Cohasset Dramatic Club, which will present "Table Manners" by Alan Wyckbourn.

This production will be directed by Valerie Lester of Scituate, and is scheduled to be performed Thursday, May 27, at 8:30 p.m. Cast members will be: Davis and Andrea Dassori of Hingham, Sarah DeLema of Cohasset, Lee Dunne of Scituate, Harry Heineman of Scituate and Derek Holmes of Hingham.

Working on the production staff are: producer Scott Ketcham, stage manager Alice Duffy; lighting effects will be by Arthur Paquette. The festival will be presented in six sessions over the five days. Each entrant has approximately one-half hour to perform the drama of its choice. In Cohasset's case this will be the hilarious "dinner scene" from "Table Manners."

Tickets are availabe at the door. Admission to the entire festival including the finals, is $20. Tickets for each session are $3.50 per session and $4 for the finals. "Table Manners," as presented last Fall by the Dramatic Club, was a superbly cast and finely acted production, and the Club's entry to the Brandeis Festival features one of the funniest scenes from the play.

VEC banking at Angelo's

The VEC (Value Exchange Corporation) "Supermarket Banking" program is now on-line at the Hanover branch of Angelo's Supermarket.

Angelo's customers holding banking cards with the VEC symbol can deposit and withdraw money from both checking, NOW accounts and statement savings accounts during supermarket hours, six days a week.

Card holders interested in learning whether their banks are participating in the VEC "Supermarket Banking" program should inquire at bank offices.

Coast Guard open house

Scituate Coast Guard Station, Edward Foster Road, First Cliff, will be conducting an Open House May 15, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., in conjunction with Armed Forces Week.

There will be video tape presentations, 14 and 21 foot outboards with equipment on display, and a 41 foot utility boat open for visitors at the Scituate Town Marina from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

60 Plus cookbook

Cohasset's Sixty Plus Club members have compiled a cookbook.

Some of these excellent recipes have been in their families for many years, tried and true, good cooking for enjoyable meals.

Their book will be on sale at the next meeting, Thursday, May 20.

Montessori spring fair

A Spring Fair will be held at the Montessori Community School on Rte. 123 in Scituate Saturday, May 15 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be games, clowns, crafts, fun photos, balloons, a bake sale, food, face painting, a plant sale, yard sale, and an airplane ride raffle at the Open House.

Food courses at Center

A combined workshop on summer soups and pastry preparation with a food processor will be offered by the Cohasset Community Center on Monday, May 17, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. The $15 fee includes all food and recipe costs.

An opportunity to learn the exciting technique of applique will be offered by Mary Struzziero in a special workshop Thursday, May 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at a cost of $6.

Registrations are now being accepted for these workshops. For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Historical Society flea market

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Flea Market Saturday, May 22 at the Society's Headquarters House, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street.

The event runs from 9 to 2.

This flea market is a fund raising venture to assist in the repair and maintenance of the Society's museum buildings at Cohasset Center and for continuation of the restoration of the Lothrop House.

There will be hot dogs, soft drinks, and delicous home baked food aplenty sold in the yard at the Lothrop House; flea market bargains of many types will abound.

Visitors are advised to arrive early, when the best selection of items is available. Flea market items will range from books, clothing, kitchenware, elecrrical equipment to games, puzzles, and bric-a-brac.

Thousancs of pre-owned items of every description will be available at bargain prices.

Dealer's spaces are available at $10 per reservation. Dealers may call Mrs. Parker at 383-0773 or 383-6930 for reservations.

Center slide lecture

The topic may be ancient history but the public still has time to take part in a fascinating investigation blending history and art.

Berj Kailian of Weymouth, Member of South Shore Art Center and Vice President of Copley Society, Boston, will present a slide lecture on her rubbings of katchkars (Armenian stone crosses) Wednesday, May 19 at 8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center.

Stone carvings provide American historians a rich documentation of our heritage. Ms. Kailian, who is extensively travelled in Armenia and Europe, offers a visual presentation documenting one facet of early western civilization. The lecture will explain the exquisitely detailed crosses and their wealth of symbolism. The translation of history into exciting contemporary collagraphs makes for an evening not to miss.

Reservations are requested with a donation of $3 per person at the door. Both the collagraphs and collection of rubbings are on exhibit presently at the South Shore Art Center Gallery, 103 Ripley Road.

For more information call 383-9548.

FISH meets over coffee & surprises

Cohasset FISH held a short but exciting meeting recently at the Second Congregational Church. The twenty-five members present discussed the agency's program, and enjoyed coffee and refreshments.

The invitation promised "surprises" and there were two of these. Eleanor Cooney took over as the new general chairman succeeding Gertrude Hooper who had served in that capacity for about seven years.

Miss Hooper was completely surprised by the presentation of a Tourister suitcase, a gift of appreciation from the members of FISH.

With summer approaching, FISH needs more members who are willing to give one day a month, either as a driver or as telephone back-up. Anyone interested is urged to call either Mrs. Cooney the new General Chairman, at 383-1517, or Miss Hooper, who continues as calendar chairman, at 383-1111.

FISH provides a service badly needed in Cohasset by driving patients to doctor's appointments in nearby towns. The drivers have found the work both interesting and very rewarding.

Choral Art Society in concert Saturday

The Choral Art Society with William Sano directing will perform Mendelssohn's dramatic oratoria, "Elijah," Saturday evening, May 15, at 8 at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate.

Among the soloists are Pamela Wolfe and Andonea Guilbault of Norwell; Ian Fishman, Scituate; Kyle Bradford, Boston; Diana Rousseau, Cohasset; Linda Healy, Duxbury; and Susan Bennett and Carol Nickerson, Marshfield.

Jill Crafts of Cohasset is the Society's accompanist, and Dorothy Bales, Boston violinist, is the concertmaster of the orchestra.

Ruth Sibley of Norwell is in charge of the reception following the concert; Nancy White of Cohasset is chairman of patrons and sponsors; and Henry Dunbar of Brant Rock is in charge of the program and advertisements.

Tickets at $3.50 ($2.50 students and seniors) are available from members of the chorus and at the door.

Social Service League elects new officers

The 70th Annual Meeting of the Social Service League of Cohasset was held in St. Stephen's parish hall April 27.

New officers elected each for a term of two years are: Mrs. J. Spencer Langford, president; Mrs. Uve F. Hublitz, vice-president; and Mrs. William F. Bell, assistant treasurer.

New directors were elected for a three-year term are: Mrs. H. William Adams, Mrs. Julian S. Hartwell, Mrs. Timothy A. Marsac, and Mrs. Joseph Nedrow.

Board members continuing as directors are Mrs. Robert W. Henry, Mrs. David Chittim, Mrs. John J. Riley, Mrs. Samuel Wakeman, Miss Gertrude Hooper, Mrs. Noel Ripley, Mrs. Russell J. Sandbloom, Mrs. Frederick Garrison, Mrs. James Hooper, chairman of family service, and Mrs. Alvin A. Merrill, consignment shop manager.

Engagements

Lahage—Lane

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund P. Lahage of Cohasset are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Miriam, to Gregory R. Lane. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Lane of Douglas Manor, New York.

Both are graduates of the University of Rochester in Rochester, N.Y.

They plan to reside in Atlanta, Ga., where they are employed.

A July 10 wedding is planned.

Obituary

John Bishop

John Bishop, (76) a freelance writer who covered several major naval battles in the South Pacific during World War II, died last week of cancer.

Among the major naval engagements and amphibious assaults he witnessed were the retaking of Saipan and Tinian Islands by Allied forces in June-July, 1944. He also wrote about the preparations for the invasion of the Phillipines.

Bishop's articles were published by the Saturday Evening Post and Harper's magazine.

Born in Mt. Kisco, N.Y., he moved to Cohasset in 1929 when he married the former Virginia Ayers. He was active for many years in St. Stephen's Church and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

He attended St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H., and Harvard College.

In addition to his wife, he leaves two sons, John Jr. of Cambridge, Samuel S. of Old Lyme, Conn., and six grandchildren.

Services were held Tuesday at St. Stephen's.

Nursing Home Week

The Cardigan Nursing Home's theme for National Nursing Home Week Celebration is "Love is Ageless."

The home at 59 Country Way, will sponsor a neighborhood fair Saturday, May 15, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair's schedule includes a prize pet contest at 10 a.m., offering cash awards for the most unusual and best dressed pets.

Cash awards will be given to winners of the water balloon contest at 11 a.m. and children ages 6-16 years old are encouraged to enter the pie-eating contest, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

"King Ludwig's Bavarian Band," back by special request from staff and residents, will entertain at noon. Band members, dressed in alpine costume and playing German style musical instruments, will perform on the home's front lawn.

Other attractions include a home made craft display, white elephant, baked food, raffle tables, pony rides, games and children's prizes.

The fair will be held indoors, weather permitting.

She took a bite out of the Big Apple & loved it

By Lois Martin

I never loved New York before.

That might not have been nice but it was the truth. From what I'd seen of it, New York City was a huge pulsating giant. When you'd drive through it, it would throb at you, its tenament houses steaming too close to the road, its hard times people and places pressing on the passer-through with near arrogance, an air of "You don't like it...ya know what you can do...doncha."

PATCHES

After last week's visit to NYC, I can't say that I've lost my heart to the city. But I did get to know it better and I feel we made a favorable impression on one another.

What I did love was my three days there. Each year, if I offer the package correctly, the New England Telephone Company remands some of its employes (the public relations crowd) to NYC. They are each asked to bring a'date,' from the media (cute). And the little group visits Bell Laboratories and A T & T in New Jersey.

Those places are something else again. (For that portion of my education I refer you to an upcoming news/feature story on the state of your telephone... probably appearing next week..)

Carolyn McKeon, public relations manager of our area for the company invited me to go with her. She and I had met when I'd asked the company's help in getting history of local phones. (That's coming in story form, too, later, later.)

We stayed at the St. Moritz, or Saint Moritz. That's a grand old hotel near Central Park. It offers its guests treat-type amenities, her own tooth-brushes, shampoo, sewing repair kit, and on an odd schedule elevator service.

Judging from the styles, limousines and good stuff we saw there, we here are "dressed to the nines," the nines were probably shipped in from New York. My word, how enlightening. The style for many women consists of a suit or unobtrusive skirt and blouse affair, bottomed out with a pair of jogging sneakers, on the has been side. Up top, though they have little microphones and wires dripping from their ears, attached to a radio, I gathered hung snug at the waist.

Actually, I'd have been content to spend more time in front of the hotel, seated in a little patio chair, starring at the city folk. I was informed by those who stayed out later than I did, (though I distinguished muyself I thought) that the hotel that attracts its quota of wealthy through its doors during the day, sees an impressive group of free lancers in heels pass by its portals during the late night hours.

Swish on the inside...swishing on the outside...

But the only unusual sight I saw outside was a llama with its master who earned his keep and that of his pet by inviting people to have pictures taken with him/it/her. Carolyn and I now smile on a Polaroid print. Another momento I have of that brief time is a splotch of llama saliva on the front of my dress. One woman on hearing of the llama, asked brightly, "Fernando?" No.

But believe me, I have far more than that. I met only pleasant cab drivers. True they were impelled to get to the destination seemingly over rooftops and other vehicles or by way of sidewalks, it seemed. But not an unkind word was spoken. And the room service people, not to mention the omelet, terrific.

In fact the only fear we entertained at all was that rather puzzling threat, the elevator. There was a general understanding that someday we'd get on it and never be seen again in our lifetime. One man, a stranger, said to me on the 14th floor..."Please tell my wife you saw me get on."

There were the horse drawn hansom carriages across from the hotel, used to excite the quaint instincts of tourists. One man from Maine, that great state directly to your north, said he'd had to come down all the way to New York City to get horse leavings, deposits, ———— (fill in blank) between his toes.

Oh, there was time for enrichment in technology at the imperious Bell Labs. It's intimidating to be near such purist research. Magnificent, I think. Heaven knows I learned as much as a computer-unwise person could...And the AT&T complex. As we drove in one woman said..."You'll notice the Bell Systems flag is just slightly higher than the American one..."

At any rate, I took one big bite out of the Big Apple and I loved it. Now to get hold of an antidote for llama drool. If it's not successful, you'll spot me at a dressy occasion in my nifty new black dress, marked with the remembrances of a photogenic llama.

Selectmen's briefs...

JUROR SELECTED

Arthur King was chosen by selectmen last Wednesday for jury duty. He is scheduled to serve Monday, June 7.

GAS PERMIT

Selectmen granted Boston Gas a permit to run a new gas supply for Kimball's by-the-Sea. The board's vote was unanimous.

POPPIE FUND DRIVE

On Memorial Day weekend, the Scituate VFW will conduct their annual Poppie Fund Drive. Selectmen approved the request for the dates of May 27, 28 and 29.

MUSIC CIRCUS LICENSE

The Music Circus was granted a Sunday license by selectmen last Wednesday. Shows are scheduled to end at 10 or 10:15 p.m. on school nights.

TITLE SEARCH AUTHORIZED

Selectmen voted last week to instruct town counsel to begin a title search on the Jones Site. In a letter to the board, Sewer Commissioner Gerard Stanton said, "We feel that a determination of a clear title should be made before any construction or preparation thereof is begun."

The Jones Site is a parcel of land to be used for the new sewage treatment plant.

Music Circus schedule changes

Ronald Rawson, producer at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, has announced the following additions and changes to the summer theatre's 1982 line-up.

Rodney Dangerfield, originally scheduled to appear Sunday, July 25, has had to withdraw to fulfill a motion picture commitment. Grammy Award-winning recording artist Roberta Flack has been scheduled to fill the July 25 date.

Because of a tour conflict, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme's Aug. 3-7 engagement has been postponed until the 1983 season.

Scheduled to appear for the August 3-7 week will be popular comedian Shecky Greene along with Ann Jillian, familiar both to television audiences as the wise-cracking Cassie on "Living It up," and to Broadway audiences for her performance in the hit musical "Sugar Babies." She was most recently seen in ABC's critically-acclaimed and top-rated musical biography based on the life and career of Mae West.

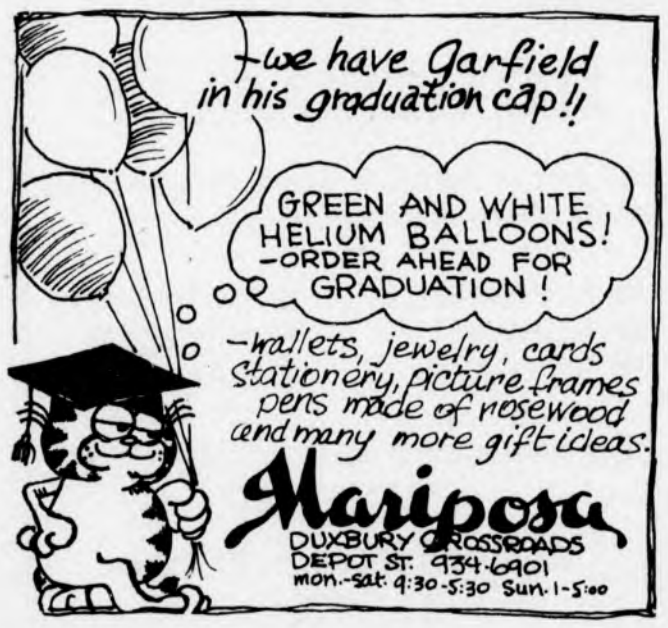
Known for her stunning face and figure, Miss Jillian is becoming equally well known for her singing and dancing accomplishments in cabaret and concert performances.

Music Circus favorites Sandler & Young have been booked for a one-day, two-show appearance, Sunday, Aug. 22.

Crystal Gayle, originally scheduled to appear Monday, Aug. 23, has cancelled her summer concert tour, which includes her Cohasset date.

Popular singer-songwriter Gordon Lightfoot is scheduled to close out the 1982 season Sunday, Sept. 12.

Non-subscribers who have bought tickets to any of the cancelled performances may receive a refund by mailing their tickets to the Music Circus and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.



Subscribers, and others who wish to do so, should retain their Steve & Eydie tickets and present them at the box office window before performance time to receive a $5 per ticket downward price adjustment. The tickets will then be honored for the Shecky Greene-Ann Jillian Show.

The Music Circus box office will open for general ticket sales Saturday, May 22, at 10 a.m. The theatre's charge-by-phone line, 383-1400, will also open on that date.

Conservatory piano concert

Guest artist Christopher Kies will give a piano concert in Cox Recital Hall at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham on Sunday, May 23 at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Kies, a former faculty member, is now assistant professor of music at the University of New Hampshire. He is a graduate of the New England Conservatory and Brandeis University and has studied piano with Russell Sherman, Theodore Lettvin and Ylda Novik and composition with Arthur Berger, Martin Boykan and Donald Martino.

TWO BRAND NEW ARRIVALS TO SERVE YOU BETTER

24 HOUR BANKING

At Hingham Institution for Savings

It's fast. It's convenient. It's easy. It's safe. It's anytime.

GENIE is our 24 hour teller machine. With it on the job, you can make deposits or withdrawals anytime; 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

It's fast.

It only takes a minute to make a deposit or withdrawal with GENIE. And since it's so quick there's never a waiting time.

It's convenient.

You can sign up for our GENIE 24 hour teller machine at any of our 4 offices.

It's easy.

GENIE is located in a safe and secure foyer. When the bank is closed, simply insert your GENIE card in the electronic door opener. A buzzer will sound, indicating the door is open for you.

Insert your GENIE card into the slot indicated in the right-hand corner. A door will open, revealing a screen and a keyboard.

Enter your personal identification number, and follow the instructions on the screen.

A supply of envelopes is provided, below the face of the machine for deposits and payments. Fill out the envelope, enclose your transaction and place the envelope in the deposit slot.

It's safe.

The enclosed foyers where GENIE 24 hour teller machines are located are locked, and only those who have a card can get in.

It's anytime.

Anytime banking means the bank is at your disposal when it's convenient for you, not the bank. Even if it's two o'clock on Sunday morning you can make a deposit or withdrawal.

Inquire at Customer Service or call us at 749-2200 for more information.

New tax at $54.75 is unchanged

The town's tax rate is $54.75, the same as last year. The state certified the town's valuation, this week, at $225 million.

Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin said tax bills will "hopefully" be mailed out next week. Property owners will be charged at a rate of $54.75 per thousand.

But Town Treasurer-Collector Gordon Flint said it takes about three to four weeks to mail out the bills once Arlington Trust begins processing the tax bills.

Wilkin said, once people receive their bills they will have one month to file for an abatement.

The state certification postpones revaluation until the new fiscal year. It also approves the past fiscal year's budget.

There had been some concern the state would bring the town to task for spending more money than Proposition 2½ guidelines seem to allow. The guidelines called for town's at less than 100 percent valuation to use as the base for 2½, the old state equalized value for the town plus a small percentage increase for inflation.

Last year at budget setting time the town used $225 million as the base in the belief revaluation would soon be completed and the figure justified.

Obviously the revaluation is incomplete.

The tax bills are due 30 days after receipt. These are the bills that should have been paid by May 1, had the rate been set earlier.

SADD Day at Cohasset High School

An assault on driving drunk

By Donna Cogliano

Carol Lawler, whose 15 year-old son was killed by a drunk driver last year, stood at a podium at Cohasset High School last week and delivered a simple message.

"Become involved with this group," she said of SADD, Students Against Driving Drunk. "Learn what alcohol does to your bodies and learn how to say no."

Last Thursday was SADD Day at the junior-senior high school, and Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill designed a morning program on drunk driving for students in Grades 10 through 12. There was also an evening session for parents.

Both audiences heard lectures on drunk driving statistics, the law and saw a film called "The Last Prom." But the most moving part of both sessions came from the mothers, Mrs. Lawler and from Mrs. Kathy Suk who also lost a son to a drunk driver.

Mrs. Lawler described what happened in front Abbadessa's Restaurant in Hingham last July when her son Paul was killed.

"My husband was knocked down. My five year-old was whipped from my hand. She will be scarred for life. My son (Paul) was pinned between the van and the restaurant, and died five days later.

She narrated another drunk driving accident, explaining how a boy, who would have graduated this year, was severely injured. She said the car was traveling home at a high rate of speed and hit five trees. She read a statement from the 16 year-old's mother that said, "He has lost the ability to read, write, and reason. He has lot almost all his memory. The son we brought home from the rehabilitation center was a completely different person. He is dearly loved, but a new person."

Paul Deignan of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism told students about the proposed Passenger Liability Law where a passenger would be held accountable for riding with a drunk driver.

In Sweden, Deignan said, one person volunteers not to drink on an evening out. So it is settled ahead of time, and everyone knows who will do the driving.

Cathy Suk, whose 16 year-old son was killed last August in Norwell, was driving home from work with her son and his girlfriend when they were struck by a vehicle. The drunk driver doesn't even remember the accident, she said.

Suk urged parents on Thursday night, "Talk to your children in an adult manner. Don't point a finger but get the problem across...this is the worst kind of death to face."

"This is a small group here," she added, "But it is a start We're trying to save lives — stop deaths on the highway."

"It doesn't matter what age you are. you have to make a choice when you're drinking that you won't drive. It's the most violent way to die. And don't think it's not going to happen to you. I didn't think it would happen to me."

'Strange Bedfellows' this week, pg. 24

Mrs. Suk described the accident which occurred on Route 53 where she was hit in the front of the car by another vehicle traveling 85 miles per hour. "When I cameto my senses, I heard crying in the back seat. My son's girlfriend couldn't answer me. I looked for my son and to my horror all I saw was his lower body...I was frozen. To see your child lying there not moving, not talking."

The boy's upper body had been pushed through into the trunk. Mrs. Suk said her son lived for an hour and a half at the hospital. During that time, "The cries were a nightmare for me," she said.

"It's very rarely that the drunk driver dies," she added.

As a result of the discussion Thursday night, Police Chief John DeBassio issued a press release Friday which answered parents questions about their liability when serving alcohol to minors. Several parents has raised objections to the traditional senior skip day which was held Friday.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said, "Senior skip

A conversation with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

By Patricia Desmond

Her husband figures she earns 55 cents an hour, all campaigning considered, but Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray loves her job.

And she doesn't favor the pending legislative pay raise.

Sitting in the living room of her home on Margin Street, the third term representative looked up and said something about needing to dust.

Chris, her four-year-old grandson, walked into the room just then and asked if he and "Papa" could go up to the attic.

The attic is where the toys are.

"I save everything," Mary Jeanette explained.

She's a woman following in her father's footsteps. A woman who's grown accustomed to working at the legislature long into the night. A woman who spends her weekends in her husband's company going from one function to another.

Her father introduced her to the basics of campaigning when she was five. That was the first time she marched in the Memorial Day parade.

"I was brought up on it," she said. "Memorial Day was the biggest day of the year growing up — except for Christmas.

"It was just the way it was — for God and country."

Her father, Nate Hurowitz, was a past commander (three times over) of the George Mealy American Legion Post. That's one of the few steps Mary Jeanette hasn't taken yet. She's a past president of the American Legion Auxiliary, though.

The other step she didn't take was into professional basketball.

"People just always assumed I would get into politics," Mary Jeanette said.

"When the late Lester Gates stepped down, he asked if I'd run. Lillian was six, Nate was eight and Phillip was 12.

"Phil (her husband) talked to me about it. He said

Democratic workers

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will accept the names of registered Democrats who are interested in being election workers.

The list will be submitted to the Town Clerk by May 27. Anyone interested should call either Karen Corcoran at 383-6767 or Margy Charles at 848-9306.

School committee meets

The school committee will meet next Monday, May 24, at 8 p.m. in the Junior-Senior High School.

Approval of the drug and alcohol policy, School committee goals, and appointment of non-union personnel will be on the agenda.

School days schedule

Schools will open on Tuesday, September 7 for the next school year.

School closing could be as early as Thursday, June 16, but with five snow days schools could continue to June 23.

School vacations are: Thanksgiving, November 24 at noon through Friday, November 26; Christmas, Thursday, December 23 at noon through Friday, December 31; Winter, February 21 through 25; and Spring, April 18 through 22.

Studds' income disclosure

In releasing complete disclosure of his 1981 income, assets and liabilities, area Congressman Gerry Studds revealed that he received less than $2,100 in income from all sources of his Congressional salary of $62,000.

Studds said he paid $12,096.99 in Federal, state and local taxes for the year and said his statement contains personal information of greater scope than required by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

Selectmen to rescind some boat fees

Selectmen have apparently overstepped their authority in establishing some harbor fees.

That opinion was one of several advisories from Town Counsel Blake Thaxter last week.

According to a letter from Thaxter, selectmen are not authorized to charge a boat decal fee, a small boat tie-up fee nor can they set mooring fees for lobster cars, private floats or commercial floats.

Recently, Selectmen had established a $3 boat decal charge and a $15 fee for skiff tie-ups to town floats. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said, "I wish we would have these things brought to our attention before and not after."

The board is allowed to charge mooring permit fees but not boat decal or private float fees.

CONSTABLE ISSUE

In another question posed to Thaxter, selectmen wanted to know if they could appoint Scituate harbormasters as constables for Cohasset.

Thaxter responded that a by-law would have to be amended, changing the singular term constable to "constables" to appoint more than one constable.

NO TO HUGO'S

On still another issue, Thaxter advised it would not be proper for selectmen to lease the Government Island parking lot to Hugo's Lighthouse for its overflow valet parking.

Selectmen were authorized by a 1946 town meeting vote to buy the island, namely, "for recreational, proprietory, utilitarian or any other municipal purpose for the benefit of Cohasset."

"Although town residents might benefit indirectly by an increase from any leasing arrangements and hence a municipal purpose would be served, it is doubtful that such an indirect financial purpose was intended by the 1946 Article," Thaxter wrote.

And finally, on another matter, Thaxter told selectmen that town meeting action would be necessary to merge the Government Island Committee and Harbor Study Committee into one Harbor Study Committee.

David Place to be honored at Pier 4

David Place, former moderator of Cohasset, now General Counsel for the United States Air Force will be honored at Pier 4 on Thursday, May 20 at 12 noon.

A graduate of Milton Academy, Harvard College and Harvard Law School, Place was a partner of Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett of Boston. Prior to his Washington appointment, Place served as Assistant United States Attorney, Trustee of Massachusetts Trustees of Reservations, Corporate Member of the New England Deaconess Hospital, Director of International Institute of Boston, Past President of Dana Hall School and former Vice Chairman Greater Boston Red Cross.

Other business to be conducted at the Annual Meeting includes the election of officers. Nominees for one-year terms are: Robert George of Sherborn, President, Ann Blackham of Winchester, Vice President; Senator Edward P. Kirby of Whitman, Vice President; Oliver W. Stalter of Needham, Treasurer; Merrie Lynch of Cohasset, Secretary. Nominees for three-year term as Directors are: Anthony Annunziata of Worcester, Edna Bogosian of Watertown, Wayne Budd of Malden, Maudyea Campbell of Newton, John Callahan of Boston, Daniel A. Cronin of Concord, John R. Lakian of Westwood, John Sears of Boston, Thomas Trimarco of Beverly and Thomas L. P. O'Donnell of Hingham. Nominee for two-year term as Director Maureen Rooney of Boston. Nominees for one-year term as Director Gwen Bloomingdale of Rehoboth, Jeanette Bowes of Barnstable, Roberta Brundrett of Cambridge, Kenneth Horak of Milton and Marshfield and Foster Aborn of Hingham.

To make reservations call 227-2478 or Nan Doherty or George Shaw of Marshfield.

Selectmen's briefs...

RESIGNATIONS ACCEPTED

Selectmen accepted the resignations of Arts Lottery Council member Denise Ripley and the town's Dog Officer Joanne Cogill. Cogill will leave the post on May 31.

The board said they are seeking a replacement for the dog officer position.

FIRE STATIONS TO BE SOLD

The Beechwood and North Cohasset fire stations are up for sale. Last week, selectmen voted to advertise the sale of the buildings. Only the buildings are for sale, and once sold, must be removed from town land.

PIANO TUNING

The town hall piano is scheduled for a tune-up. Selectmen agreed, last week, to allow the Second Congregational Church to arrange for a tuning of the piano. Since the church group would pay for the tuning, the board will subtract tuning costs from the group's town hall rental fees.

CHANNEL FIVE REQUEST

Channel Five, WCVB-TV has requested a permit from selectmen to film a commercial on the common. The board took the matter under advisement last Wednesday to meet with officials of Channel Five to obtain more information.

As part of their 10th anniversary celebration, September Productions Inc. of Channel Five wants to stage a county fair atmosphere on the common to be filmed June 4 and 5 as a commercial.

Selectmen were concerned that heavy trafficking of people and equipment which would cause lawn damage. Board Chairman Henry Ainslie Jr. said it was his understanding that the commercial would not even recognize the town as Cohasset.

"I don't think the common should be used for a commercial purpose," said Selectman Mary Jane McArthur.

According to production plans the props and some 200 actors and actresses would be brought in by Channel Five for the filming. Filming would take place aerially, and from the ground level.

TOW ZONE ESTABLISHED

Selectmen voted to establish a tow zone in front of two businesses in the Harbor cove area. The tow zone would include four parking spots in front of Harbor Liquors and Margie's Seafoods.

The proposed town zone has been a 15-minute parking zone with frequent violators. John Muncey of Harbor Liquors and Margie Ritter of Margie's Seafoods told selectmen that patrons of Hugo's, Kimball's and the American Legion Hall take up all the spaces in front of their shops.

Violators park for three and four hours at a time said Muncey.

Police ticket the vehicles when you call it to their attention but the spaces are still occupied unavilable for shop customers, he said.

Artists to be chosen for gallery membership

Artists, photographers and people who create fine crafts are invited to submit their work to the gallery selection committee of the South Shore Art Center Gallery for consideration for membership in the gallery.

Original work must be delivered to the center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset between 12 and 4 p.m. May 21 and picked up on May 25. Five pieces must be brought in for those working in painting, drawing or pastels. Ten pieces must be submitted for those working in photography, sculpture, crafts. Slides may not be submitted.

Artists who are chosen for gallery membership are eligible to exhibit one work each month in the Center Gallery and to have five small works in the bins. They are also eligible to apply once a year for consideration for a one or two-person exhibit in the "Invitational gallery."

The selection committee meets three times a year to review work and the next meeting will be in September. The May committee will select shows for the 1982-83 season in the Invitational gallery.

School Board cuts staff by 2½ positions

The school committee voted on Monday to reduce the teaching staff by 2½ positions for next fall. Last year at this time 33 school staff positions were eliminated.

The reductions were part of the budget proposed last winter, which was accepted by Town Meeting.

Carol Lash, a grade 5 teacher at the Deer Hill School was not reappointed. She was a non-tenured teacher.

Jane Corry, a tenured Osgood School teacher, who has been on maternity leave, opted for a leave of absence and turned down a half-time teaching position.

Doreen Flynn, who is a full-time grade 2 teacher at Osgood School this year, was appointed a half-time teacher for next year. Though specific teaching assignments have not been finalized, Flynn is scheduled to teach half-time at the kindergarten level next year.

A group of concerned parents rallied in support of Flynn but school committee members said she would be rehired, full-time, next fall only if there were a substantial enrollment increase over the summer.

Parents said there would be a large kindergarten as well as large classes in grade 2 because of the reduction of 1½ teaching positions at the Osgood School. Principal Jack Creamer is planning to provide extra aid instruction at the grade 2 level next year. Though their were four first grade classes this year, next year's grade 2 will be divided into three classes of 25, 22, and 22.

In the kindergarten, 1½ teachers are scheduled to take on 68 students for next year. There were two teachers this year in the kindergarten with some 70 children.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell based his recommendations for staff members on three factors: constraints by law, compliance with contracts between the school committee and the teacher assocation, and professional judgment.

Crowell outlined his criteria for deciding who is the most qualified teacher: area of teacher certification and number of recent years of experience in that area; quality of a teacher's classroom performance; contribution to the school and community in various functions, school clubs, athletics, etc.; academic background and flexibility with different age groups; educational needs of the Cohasset School System; if all things equal, the most senior teacher would prevail.

In the votes to appoint various tenured and non-tenured teachers, School Committee member Martha Gjesteby opposed the half-time appointment of Flynn. Gjesteby, who received four letters recently from the community opposing Flynn's job reduction, favored a full-time appointment for Flynn.

day is not sanctioned by the school department."

Crowell said the administrators don't usually know when the skip day will be held until late. "We don't know except from rumor. It is difficult to pin it down. They (students) are very clever in keeping their arrangements to themselves," he said.

School Committee member Richard Conley was opposed to the senior bash on skip days. He told the audience that last year he took six drunk students to the hospital at 11 a.m. They were in a car accident. "Students have 75 years to celebrate, we don't need a party before graduation," Conley said.

Chief DeBassio tracked down the whereabouts of the scheduled senior skip day party on Thursday night. After contacting the parents about their liability, the party was called off. Several kegs of beer were returned to the package store, said DeBassio.

Minors may not possess or drink alcoholic beverages unless with the permission and in the company of their individual parent or guardian. Any party host who serves beverages to a minor in clear violation of the law will be prosecuted, said DeBassio.

In combatting drunk driving, speaker Joyce Curran said, "Let it begin with me as a parent...what I can do to control it. It has to start with us. We have to be the first ones to reach out."

REFLECTIONS' "HOLISTIC HEALTH, INC." NOW OPEN!

REFLECTIONS - COHASSET HARBOR: Reflections' Management announced this week it is entering into a new phase of health care.

The health center, called Holistic Health, Inc. will offer several programs on nutritional counseling, hair analysis, and meditation techniques.

In addition to skin care with all natural produts, vitamins will be sold at Holistic Health, Inc.

Mark Mincolla will direct the health center which will be located behind the Reflections Hair Salon on Elm Street.

In coordination with the salon, facial massages and skin care will be available from a trained and licensed esthetician.

Vitamins being sold at Holistic Health, Inc. are from Conford, California, and can't be bought on the market anywhere, Mincolla said. "They are only sold to doctors."

He added: "They are the Rolls Royce of vitamins and I'm carrying them only because I believe in them."

Mincolla has a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology from Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire and a Master of Arts in Holistic health and nutrition from Goddard.

He has practiced holistic health for himself over the past 12 years.

"Nutritional health has become more popular in society, recently, along with athletic exercise," Mincolla said.

Mincolla, who has already spoken with many of the medical doctors in town, said "We in no way intend to be diagnostic or prescriptive. We don't want to compete with the medical professions."

The Holistic Health Center staff will act as counselors, consumer advocates and guidance counselors for individual health needs at the community level.

"We hope to fill the void where people are interested in caring for themselves better," Mincolla said.

For further informatin about the health center, contact the staff at Reflections Hair Salon.

Evening seminars will be offered.

☐John Roy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Roy of 53 Old Coach Road, has been awarded first prize of the Ferguson Prizes in Economic Essays at Trinity College. The presentation was made at Honors Day Ceremonies at the College, recently.

The Ferguson Prizes in Economic Essays are awarded annually to seniors for the two best essays on topics approved by the department.

A senior at Trinity majoring in Economics, John has been active in junior varsity sports and as a member of AIESEC. He is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School and has spent a portion of his time in college studying at the London School of Economics.

☐The competition was difficult but despite simultaneous scheduling with a Celtics game last week, the Instrumental Concert at Cohasset High School was a success. The versatility of the players was evident in the variety of pieces they performed which ranged from "the Greatest American Hero" to Vivaldi's "Concerto in B Flat."

For the Junior High School Jazz Band, the outstanding seventh grader award went to Eric Maki. Robert Schultz received an award for outstanding dedication and improvement and John Kornet for outstanding dedication and versatility.

Glen Hochkeppel and John Kornet's names will be added to the outstanding award placque in the band room.

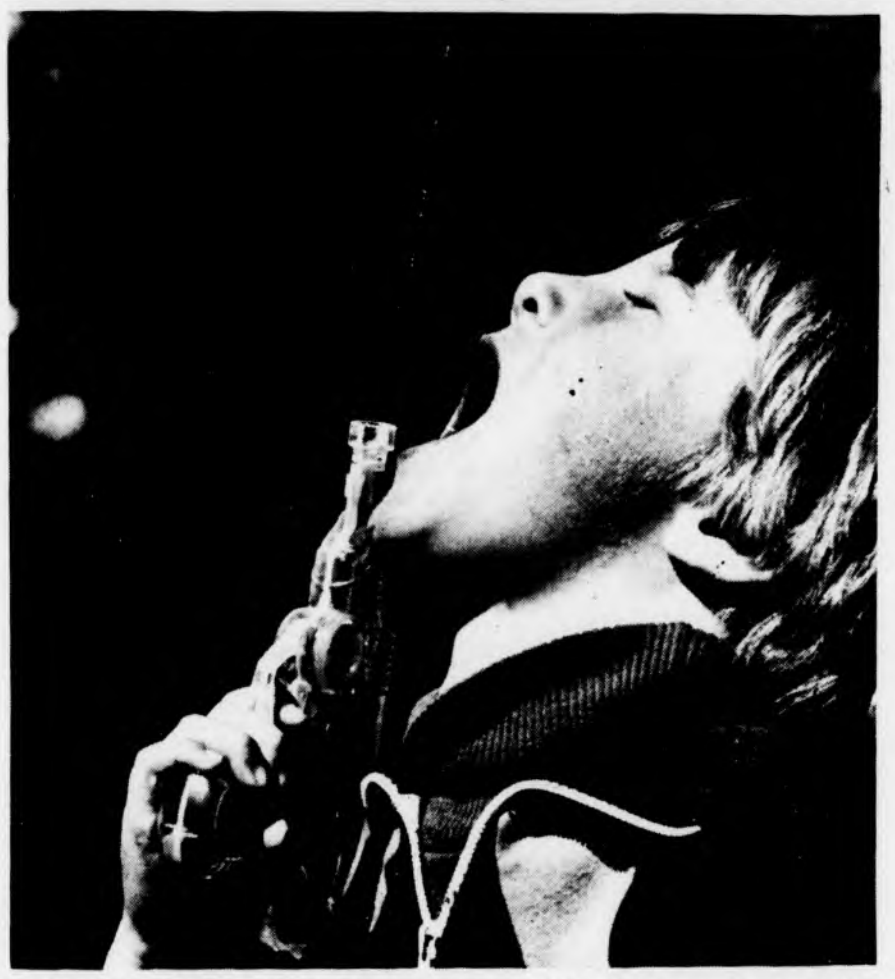
For the Junior High School Concert Band, Eric Maki was chosen as outstanding seventh grader. Cynthia Conklin and Heather Davenport received the Directors Award. Cynthia Conklin also was honored with the Gold Seal Award for Outstanding Instrumental and Vocal Performance.

For the Senior High School Jazz Band, John Kuntz was chosen outstanding junior high school member. The outstanding freshman was Christopher Crowley. Also outstanding were sophomore, Peter Caruso; junior, Guy Martin; and senior, Jon Durant.

Christopher Crowley also received an award for his service and versatility.

For the Senior High School Concert Band, John Kuntz was chosen outstanding junior high school member. Outstanding freshman was Victoria Spooner, sophomores were Elizabeth Maguire and Julie Hoogeveen, and junior, Paul Winn.

Mary O'Brien was chosen most valuable band member. The John Philip Souza Band Award was presented to Mike Birmann and the Music Honor Award to John Durant.



Band Director Jeffrey Dodge was also honored with a special round of applause by his students and the audience in appreciation for his contribution to the school's music program.

☐Every fisherman has a favorite fish story and a group of Cohasset residents out on a special charter boat from Singer Island in Florida, recently came back with a "whale of a tale."

The group included the Meers men, Barron Salvador, Scott Ripley and Ken Eckberg. They had only been out five minutes when Bob Meers Jr. caught an impressive sailfish, a keeper it was. His father, Bob, not to be outdone, pulled in a 12-foot, 402-pound buck shark. Both the sailfish and the shark are now being mounted and will soon be displayed in a place of honor by the Meers.

Also on that trip Scott and Barron caught a 50-pound Amberjack which was used for bait. Word has it that the biggest fish of all that day was hooked by Ken — a giant shark which went after the amberjack...but it got away.

☐Ruth Keefe is well known around town for her successful brunches and at least part of the reason could be her "mimosa punch."

COOLING OFF — Toby Horn keeps cool the hard way by squirting himself with a water pistol.

It's a welcome alternative to the usual Bloody Mary and so easy to prepare. Place two ice cubes in a champagne glass, add half full of orange juice, a "thimble" of Galiano or Apricot Brandy and fill the rest with champagne.

☐Congratulations are in order for the Deer Hill students who through their results in the New England Mathmetics League test ranked 11th in New England and second in Norfolk County.

The test is administered to schools throughout New England and the top five scores from each school are submitted. Sixth grade student Marybeth McNamara deserves special recognition for coming in 25th out of the top 40 students.

Four retired firefighters honored by their peers; say they don't miss the night shift

By Donna Cogliano

Four recent retirees of the Cohasset Fire Department were honored Friday at a dinner dance at Dreamwold in Scituate. All tolled the four firefighters served Cohasset for a total of 121 years.

Though they don't miss the overnight shifts, Deputy Chief Thomas Hernan and firefighters Ralph Perroncello, Ernest Sullivan and William Nickerson say they are not ready for the rocking chair.

At age 56, Hernan has completed 33 years of service on the fire department. He was promoted to captain in 1957 and appointed deputy chief in 1973.

Hernan said he misses his comrades but not the schedule of working Sundays and holidays. "It's great to be home on weekends and holidays," he said.

The most memorable fire for Hernan was the Wiseberg fire on Jerusalem Road a few years ago. It was a tough fire to combat because of the extreme cold and high winds. "It was one of the coldest nights I've ever put in."

Hernan also remembers the Cox Estate fire. Though he was not on duty that night he was called back. After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1943, Hernan served in the Navy for three years. He and his wife, Peggy (Marks), have four children, Kathy, Carol, Tom, and Jack. They also have five grandchildren. Nickerson, 49, retired last year after 24 years of service to the town. "It took me a year to get used to retirement. It's not what it's cracked up to be," he said.

The two most memorable fires for Nickerson were at the Cliff Hotel in Scituate and Paragon Park in Hull. While battling the flaming roller coaster with Hingham firefighters, the hose whipped loose and struck Nickerson. He wound up with a broken foot.

Nickerson is married to Barbara (Fraizer) and they have six children, William R., Linda, Brenda Jean, Robert, Richard and Cynthia. They have three grandchildren.

He graduated from Hingham High School in 1952 and served three years in the Navy.

Most of the time, Nickerson worked as a pump operator. "I've enjoyed my work," he said.

Sullivan and Perroncello started the very same day on the force and retired on the same day (March '81). They are both 57 years old and graduates of Cohasset High School. Both served the fire department for 32 years.

Sullivan remembers the "good old days" when he was paid $70 a week for working 72 hours. Back then the deputy chief used to put in 84 hours a week. The shifts consisted of 10 hours days or 14 hours at night.

When Ralph and Ernest joined the department it was staffed with six men. Before Proposition 2½, there were 28 men on the squad. Today the department is staffed with 24 positions.

Sullivan remembers the summertime atmosphere when he was stationed in the cove. It was a lively area with people coming to dine and dance at Kimball's or Hugo's.

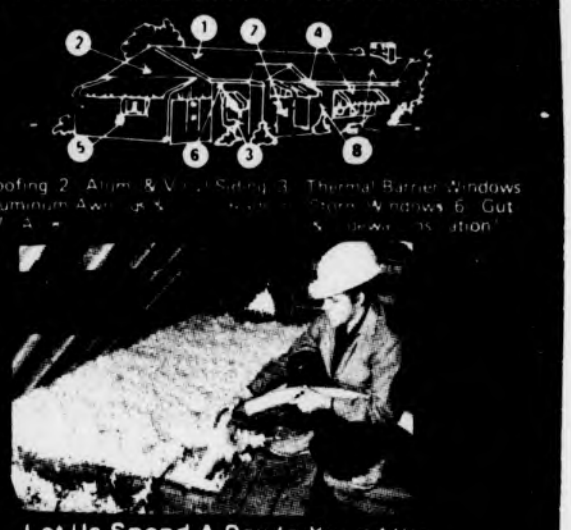
"I've worked with a lot of nice people," said Sullivan. If I had to do it all again I would. I've enjoyed myself but I don't miss the night schedule."

Sullivan is married to Jeanne (McGowan) and they have two children, Michael and Maureen. Michael is a firefighter for the town. Sullivan served in the Navy during World War II.

Perroncello is a 1942 graduate of Cohasset High School. He is a World War II veteran and fought in the Battle of the Bulge.

He married Marie (Fornia) of Chelsea in 1951. They have three children, Peter, Elena and Dona.

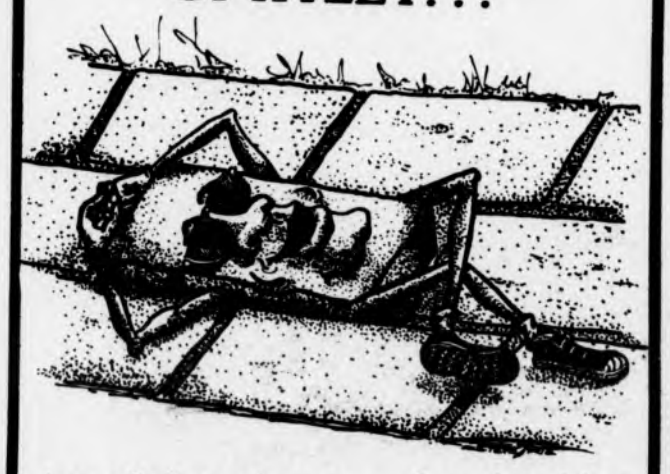
Along with the drug store, Cox Estate fires and Worcester tornadoes, Perroncello best remembers the Paragon Park fire in 1955. Perroncello left the Paragon Park fire early to take his wife to the hospital. That was the night his daughter Elena was born.



Though retired, Perroncello stays tuned to the scanner. "Every time I hear the apparatus go out, I anticipate what they are going to do," he said.

Perroncello speaks of firefighting as a young man's game. "And once you get over 45 years old it's time to get out."

In June 1953, Perroncello was sent to the Worcester area for a week to set up flood lights following the tornadoes. It is a subject he rarely talks about because people don't believe him when he describes the damage.



After two months of retirement, Perroncello hasn't adjusted to his peaceful evenings. Headquarters won't be dialing Perroncello's home phone number anymore when someone calls in sick or they are short-handed. Yet, Perroncello said he still finds himself reaching for the phone in the middle of the night but it's not ringing. It's habit.

Good start

Must reading in this week's Mariner is Donna Cogliano's moving piece about the SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) meeting last Thursday at Cohasset High School.

SADD is a one-year-old organization founded by students at Wayland High School in the hope of keeping young lives from ending in tragedy. It has become a movement that is spreading like Solidarity in Poland in 1980.

Highest among the Pantheon of heroes and heroines of this movement must be the parents who have lost children in highway accidents and who go around from school to school describing their loss and trying to prevent others from knowing a similar one.

SADD's primary objective is to keep kids alive. It assumes without condonation that the prom and graduation season will produce a certain amount of adolescent drunkenness. It's objective, quite simply, is to keep drunken adolescents from driving and endangering their lives, the lives of their friends, and the lives of innocent strangers.

A highly innovative part of SADD's program is the "driving and drinking contract." According to the contract, students who have been drinking or who find themselves about to be driven by someone who has been drinking, may call home...no matter the hour. Parents agree to come and get them...and not to ask wrathful questions.

In many towns the "contract" has been generalized to include all manner of drunken drivers: Good buddies, boyfriends, a neighbor for whom one has been babysitting...anyone. We think such a contract should be standard operating procedure in every home in the land.

As we said, SADD's efforts do not try to deal with adolescent drinking itself or with the incipient alcoholism that it frequently signifies. But what SADD is doing will save some lives, and wonderful is the only word for that.

As to the underlying problem of alcohol abuse, Alcoholics Anonymous has shown for many years that the successful treatment of alcoholism begins with awareness. For some SADD's crusade may be the beginning of awareness.

Thank you, SADD.

A successful school year

Letters

To the Editor:

In his recent editorial to the editor, Frank England posed the question, "Are teachers retained for their professional teaching ability or for their union seniority? The question is reasonable and probably needs to be addressed. But a few paragraphs later he makes an effort to answer his own question with, "It appears the school administration is giving into union seniority by recommending to the School Committee to drop two of the newest tenured teachers."

When I begin a sentence with "It appears...," I am saying that I don't have sufficient facts to reach the conclusion that I would like to reach. It would be like my saying, after having read Frank's letter, "It appears Frank England is starting another run for School Committee," or "It appears Frank doesn't care who teaches as long as it costs less," or maybe even "It appears that Frank is out to bust the union." Now, none of these statements have any basis in fact and all are, most probably, completely erroneous. It is dirty pool!

The point is that so much can be implied by innuendo and its use is not proper.

When one looks at a rose, it is possible to see only thorns but most people, aware of their slight menace, are more intent on the beauty that the petals put forth.

The Cohasset Schools will shortly close out one of their most successful years ever. This year, the schools and the students have received more recogniation, awards, prizes, honors and the like than any group in the last 20 years. Something is being done right by an awful lot of people! Morale is extremely high for such difficult times. The last thing that our school system needs is the creation of a schism.

That is what would cause the demise of our system! If you don't believe me, think back 10 years. It is o.k. to be aware of thorns, so to speak, but more important, be aware of that which is good! It is the latter that motivates one to attempt that little extra.

Child abuse happens here too

(Editor's note: This was prepared with information from the Coastline Council for Children.)

Child abuse happens here in Cohasset just as it happens in the slums in Boston and New York.

Child abuse is not a disease limited to those of lower incomes.

Too often the abusing adult is depicted in articles and TV shows as an unfeeling monster intent upon hurting or destroying.

In real life, a child abuser is more often a hurt, confused and angry person who loves his or her children but has problems coping.

The abuser might be horrified by the violent behavior — just as anyone else would be. Guilt and shame compound the problem.

Child abuse and neglect are problems in parenting. Parents who see the problems and confront them can do something to change the pattern of violence.

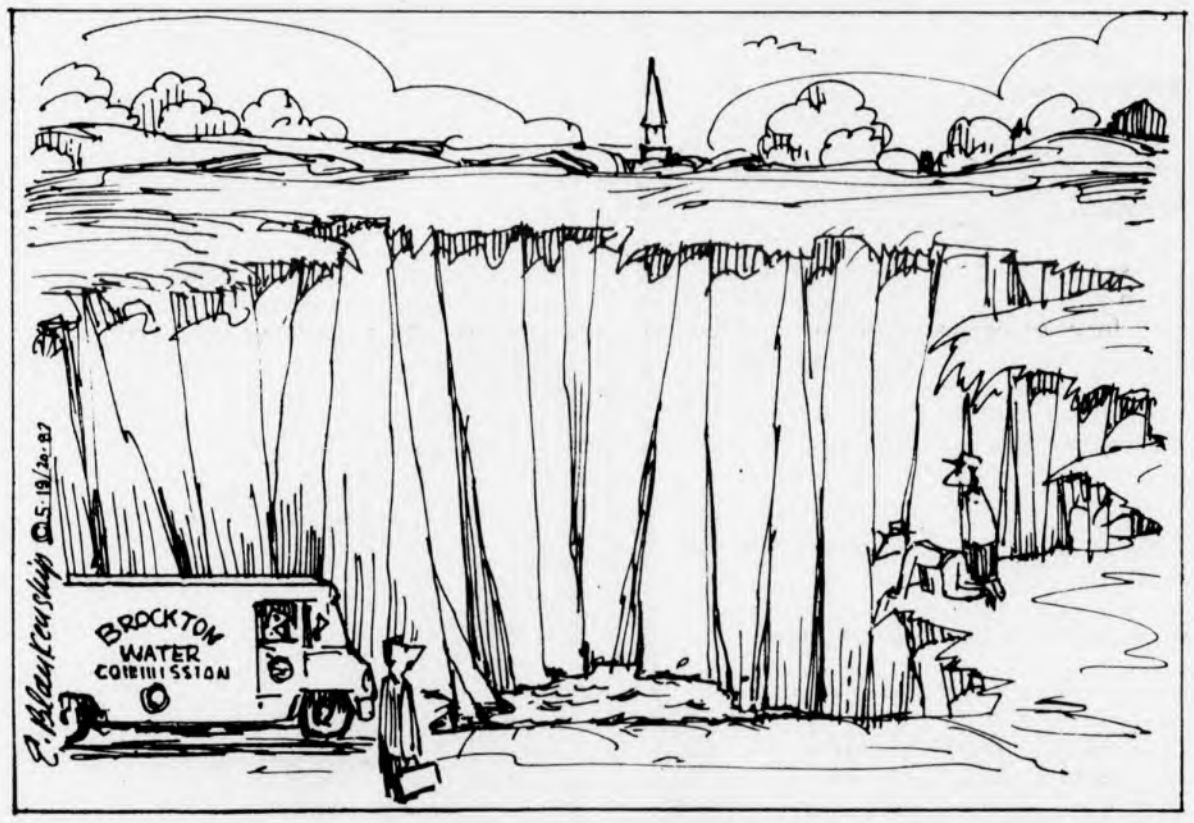
Rarely has any human problem moved so rapidly from invisibility to headlines, editorials and talk show conversation as had child abuse and neglect.

What can we do?

What can parents, grandparents, neighbors or professionals do about the incidents of family violence? What can prevent the cycle of abuse from continuing?

If we, as parents, feel unable to cope with our children — if we frequently feel angry or hurtful toward them — what can we do to control our own potential for child abuse?

Mary Thomas, community representative for the Coastline Council, said the problem of child abuse does increase for people with diminished resources. Unemployment and other stress can create the environment that makes child abuse more likely.



"It's hard to acknowledge the problem," she said. "It takes a great deal of courage to make that step." She said her agency decided to form a Parents Anonymous Chapter after being told by the state group that there was a definite need in the council's region. The nearest chapter is now located in Quincy.

Parents Anonymous, a voluntary self-help group modeled in part upon Alcoholics Anonymous, can provide a part of the answer to the problems of child abuse and neglect. It is not based upon public outrage or upon legislative action; it does not depend upon professional services or law enforcement personnel for its effectiveness. It depends instead upon the earnest desire of parents to improve their own parenting skills and change their own behavior.

A Parents Anonymous group is being formed by the Coastline Council for Children to serve parents

Editorial/News Story: The Water War — State Environmental Secretary Bewick peddles proposed 34 town Southeastern Massachusetts Water Supply District. 'MBTA style' plan would sock area towns that carefully planned for ample water supply. They could be raided by cities like Brockton who perennially didn't. Brockton ordered to stop pumping Silver Lake.

"...So much for Silver Lake. One little hitch...Scituate, Cohasset, Marshfield and Hanover won't talk Water District unless we agree to take a big hunk of their MBTA assessment off their back as a swap, up front..."

A conversation with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray...

he could come home and get dinner and take care of the kids.

"We've always shared. He's always been a great help. I refused. The children were too young."

The children were grown by the time Mary Jeanette did run for representative. Lillian, the youngest, was 18. She said her father found out later she had turned down the chance to go for the seat at the State House.

"He said, 'Good. The kids are too small.' "

Those were the years when Mary Jeanette was active just the same. She was a Girl Scout leader and secretary of the Girl Scout Association for 18 years, as well as being secretary of a cub scout pack. For 10 years she was a den mother, for 11 years she was a cub scout fund-raiser. She was a chief den mother.

Once she went to Boy Scout camp "when one of the fathers was late getting back from Boston.

"I was disappointed when the father showed up," she said with a characteristic wink.

She handled the canteen for the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association for 10 years and still throws out the first ball.

"I love it," she smiled.

"Every year I say I'll have to practice to throw it out. Some year I will."

Her father founded the Cohasset Little League.

"My father was the first president of Cohasset Youth Athletic Association and Phil was the third president."

She has quite a bit to say about her husband's help and his own accomplishments — like putting together a six hour long parade for the town's Bicentennial back six years ago.

Phil started the parade and carnival for the athletic association. And the Bat and Ball dance.

"This is the first year we've missed the Bat and Ball dance. The House was in late session and we didn't get back to Cohasset until 1:30."

When Mary Jeanette says we, she's not using the term in the editorial sense. She's talking about herself and her husband. Three years ago Phil retired. Ever since then he's been working — unpaid — at her side.

"He jokes about going from eight hours a day to 16," she said.

"Nanny, can I keep this," young Chris was back with a 20-year-old Army tank.

"Well, you can play with it for now," she said.

"But can I take it home?" he tried again.

"Why don't you leave it here when your through with it. Your dad is coming over tomorrow."

Chris left, heading for Papa and the backyard.

And Mary Jeanette went back to talking about politics. She is facing Democratic opposition this fall from Hingham's Caroline Stouffer. The pair have faced off before.

"We were both incumbents," Mary Jeanette said.

"I'm going for my fourth term. I had Scituate and Cohasset before."

So far she feels the campaign is going well.

"The reaction of people has been good," she said. "One man told me he thought I was right 99 percent of the time. I think that's incredible," she went on.

"I think people respect the fact I take a stand."

And she does do that. She's been working hard against casino gambling whether it be in Hull or anywhere in the state.

Some say that will cost her votes in Hull, one of the three communities in her district.

"You know, I'm a strong believer in home rule," she said. "But I have to look at the whole district. At first I feltHull voted for it two to one, but I decided to do some investigating."

Actually it was her husband who did the research. The findings were enough to make a casino opponent out of Mary Jeanette.

"I asked him to find me something good about casinos and he said, "I can't find anything good. If you're a casino owner, then it's good.' "

Mary Jeanette pointed out that in New Jersey where the toughest laws in the nation were adopted, casinos are having trouble and the casino proponents are trying to get the laws weakened.

She predicts that if the Hull voters were to have another referendum on casinos, the results wouldn't be the same as 1977.

"All this information has come out since then," she explained.

Would the referendum be defeated in Hull?

"I'm not saying that," she said. "But it wouldn't be two to one."

She paints her politics as middle of the road. She works for funding for displaced homemakers, for strong legislation on drunk driving, for strict policies geared to prevent recurring child abuse, for subsidy for the local commuter boat, for the Bottle Bill. She's against abortion and the Tregor Bill.

On the issue of capital punishment, she hesitates.

"If they put someone in jail for life and they meant life — no parole — that would be enough. But they won't do that. Murderers can get back on the streets," she said.

She's in favor of county government. Not what exists now but with expanded functions.

"I'm all in favor of anything that will cut down the bureaucracy. I know something's wrong when I call an office (in state government) and I have to talk to five people before I get an answer."

She's also in favor of electing judges. And prohibiting judges from contributing or accepting contributions from any other politician.

"I think electing them would make them more responsive," she said.

One of her strongest backers is her husband, Phil.

How does he like her total involvement in the world of politics?

"I think it's fantastic," he commented while helping Chris look for something or other in the living room.

Does he mind the hours?

"Not with all the good she does. You know yesterday was a good example. It was enough to make you feel good for a month."

Yesterday Mary Jeanette had been able to get someone in a hospital. The someone had been told there were no beds.

"I must admit, it bothers me that a state representative can do things other people can't, she said.

But people call her to help them with all sorts of problems. From getting a tree cut down to filing legislation.

She always gets back to them.

"I always telephone if I can. To me a letter is very impersonal. I only write a letter if I can't find a phone number."

My stars! What a future

By Claire McDonough

Many of you have contacted me lately asking why life is so rotten. Well, of course it is. I mean, Jupiter and Saturn are conjunct, and they're both retrograde in the sign of Libra, aren't they? And that isn't exactly the same as having the moon in the seventh house and Jupiter alligned with Mars, now is it? Not to worry, though.

I trotted over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff and she gave me all the advice we need to get through this unfortunate cycle.

Aries (March 21 - April 19): You will fare best of all the signs. When other people are confused and troubled, they are most susceptible to your bullying and exploitation. Pisces natives should be duck-soup for you this month. Yelling, shoving and threatening will be particularly effective.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20): Co-workers and employers will have high praise for your innovative methods of handling business problems. Their support will be withdrawn when they learn that one method involves embezzlement of company funds.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Your adaptability and dramatic nature will be of great help professionally. Seek a career that involves fraud and/or a shell game.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Malific Saturn transit afflicts your chart, making communication difficult. This is truly unfortunate if you edit a newspaper.

Leo (July 23 - August 22): Leos and Leonesses are in deep trouble. Your attempt to build a financial empire will be thwarted when no one patronizes your Kool Aid stand.

Virgo (August 23 - September 22): You will be quick to observe mistakes made by your friends and acquaintances and will generously point out ways in which they can improve their performance. This nit-picking will drive them crazy, and they will tell you to bug off.

Libra (September 23 - October 23): Your charm and beauty will attract the attention of a fascinating stranger as the moon enters its first quarter. When it enters its third quarter, he will show you his badge and credentials.

Scorpio (October 24 - November 22): Venus is transiting your second house. This is great, unless your spouse learns of the transit.

Sagitarrius (November 23 - December 21): Your usual outgoing nature will desert you, and you will experience a strong desire for privacy. You will want to hide your affairs from a prying world. The IRS people will not be sympathetic.

Capircorn (December 22 - January 19): A charming and beautiful woman will find you fascinating as the moon enters its first quarter. As it enters its third quarter you will show her your badge and credentials.

Aquarius (January 20 - February 19): Once again, your zany, fun-loving nature will attract the attention of all. Deny everything and call a lawyer.

Pisces (February 20 - March 20): Lucky you! People — particularly Aries natives — will be absolutely rotten to you during the next month. You will have reason to cry, whine, and complain to your heart's content.

Note to all Signs: An unscrupulous newspaper astrologer will attempt to deceive you. Ignore her. She is following her zany, fun-loving Aquarian nature.

MARC salutes teachers for Ride-A-Bike event

(Mary Lou Maloney, executive director for the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens wrote the following letter of thanks to the Cohasset Teachers Association, Ed.)

Dear Cohasset Teachers Association:

The Association for Retarded Citizens/MA (MARC) wants to take this opportunity to thank you for your overwhelming support of our Ride-a-Bike campaign. Your sharing of your time and energy will allow us to continue our efforts on behalf of the Commonwealth's 160,000 mentally retarded children and adults.

We realize teachers are facing daily challenges during these stressful times. It is heartwarming that they can go on giving of themselves. You should be applauded for your dedication to the children that you teach and your years of community service.

MARC is a volunteer organization of parents and advocates striving to make a better life for people who are mentally retarded. The MARC salutes your outstanding contribution.

Mary Lou Maloney
Executive Director, MARC

Child abuse happens...

Ellen Feingold, M.S.W. will serve as sponsor. For information telephone 1-800-882-1250.

You, or someone whom you know, may find it the right way to begin to do something about child abuse in the most important place of all: your own family.

"Boca" snoozes at the high school.

Meet Jon Durant... he was born to music

By Laura Doherty

Ask Cohasset High School senior Jon Durant how long he's been interested in music and he'll laugh, "Ever since I was two inches tall."

Watching him perform in concert last week at the high school, there can be no doubt about his interest or his ability, both are equally impressive.

It's not surprising that Jon comes from a family with a long history of involvement in music. When he recently came across a program for a concert given at Cohasset High School in 1912, he discovered that "except for four people I was related to everyone in the band." His great uncle, Don Gammons, was conductor of the Hingham Civic Orchestra. Edward Gammons, his grandfather, designed the organ for St. Stephen's Church and taught music at Groton Academy.

Jon's mother continued this musical tradition with the piano and at the New England Conservatory of Music where she studied voice. Three of Jon's four brothers also play instruments.

Before moving to Cohasset, the Durants lived in Hingham where Jon's Uncle Peter Gammons, a big fan of the Rolling Stones, introduced him to rock and roll.

"There's always been music in my life as long as I've been around, he explains.

"When I was younger, my brother, Kingsley, and I wanted to be disc jockeys. Then, around the fourth grade, I started writing music and listening to progressive rock groups like Yes and Genesis that are now becoming the "big thing."

Jon's interests are not limited to modern music; he also has an "incredible love" for classical composers such as Brahms, Stravinsky and Bach. A special favorite are classical pieces originally written for the lute which have now been transcribed for the guitar and performed by such musicians as Andre Segovia. "Factory produced groups who go in with the intention of writing hit music as a business" are not high on Jon's list of favorites. He notes that music can either be written as a business or as an art form and that some groups, such as The Police, are able to combine the best of both.

Jon is now working hard to mold his own style which, he says, "will encompass many different things." He especially is interested in enhancing the sound of his guitar and spends a good deal of time trying to achieve different effects. When not in school, he concentrates on either listening to, practicing, playing or teaching music.

Jon's formal music training began in the 9th grade with John Catler. He has also studied with Randy Roos from whom he says he has acquired a vast knowledge of musical theory and harmony. The music department at the high school has also been a positive force for Jon.

"Without it," he says, "I probably would have been a closet guitar player." He underlines the importance of the training he has received from his music teachers at school and the chance to play with other people.

This year, Jon, his brother, Kingsley, along with Peter Caruso, Jim Benbow and Jim Vivian formed their own rock band, The Identity Crisis.

Jon is enthusiastic about the group which he says has a good clean sound and can play a variety of music from simple pop rock to New Wave. Because of his training, Jon likes doing jazz type solos. He feels the band comprises the best of jazz and rock. Jon's brother Bob is the group's manager and sound man and is helped out by Steve Bowen.

Jon has also expanded his interest in electronic music to include ambiant music which he sees as an alternative to Musak for creating a relaxing atmosphere. With his strong appreciation of improvisation, he underlines the need for music not just to be technical. For him, music is the best form of communication. "I think of something that makes me feel good and try to express it musically," he explains.

Given his interest and ability, it is surprising that Jon actually had a difficult time deciding on music as a career.

"I stayed awake four nights trying to decide. After all, it's dangerous out there. But then I thought about sitting at a 9-5 job wondering why I wasn't playing the guitar." He applied to the Berklee School of Music in Boston and was accepted last December.

Jon Durant

For those interested in music as a career, Jon advises that "you have to really love it and accept the fact that there won't be much money in the beginning. You also have to be willing to give up a lot socially."

If forced to make a choice between a party and practice, Jon chooses practice.

"If I intend to make it in music, I have to like my guitar better than anyone," says this mature young man.

School Supt. Crowell projects savings of $74,000

School Supt. Eugene Crowell projects a $74,000 surplus in this year's school budget. But it's not leftover money since the school committee has plans to spend $62,000 on various repairs and renovations, he said on Monday.

After the $62,000 is spent there would be $12,000 extra in this year's budget. However, Crowell has some $39,000 of expenditures for the school board's consideration.

"Everyone in education is suspect when there is a (budget) surplus. But with a $3 million budget and no contingency fund...it is quite difficult to handle all of the unknowns," said Crowell.

Most of this year's savings was realized from heating and electricity costs. Crowell said the "big money" was saved in heating, $60,000 and electricity, $17,000. Acquisition and replacement of equipment were cited as reasons for the decreased heating and electricity expenditures.

Crowell said he is confident that he can save the same amount of money from next year's budget. The heating and electricity savings alone, totalled $87,000. Town meeting recently approved next year's school budget at $80,000 less than the Administration's request. Crowell plans to make up the difference through fuel savings.

One reason for the fuel savings was School Business Manager John Raftery's five-year plan for purchase of refined oil, said Crowell. Four years ago Raftery obtained the oil bid.

The school is paying 89 cents a gallon for heating fuel while the homeowner is paying $1.25 a gallon, said Crowell. He said other recent projects which have helped in reducing fuel and electricity consumption were: a new hot water backup system in the High School, relamping of all of the Deer Hill and Junior High Schools, closing the breezeway at the High School (the corridor between the library and cafeteria), unit controls put on ventilators, closing large windows on the Junior High wing, insulating panels in the Sullivan gymnasium, installation of an overhead steam trap and cooperation from the staff on thermostat settings and shutting off unused lights.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said that this year's savings was not a result of "sloppy budgeting." She said, "We won't have this kind of leftover next year...we have to assign a value to each line item...it's the soundest decision that could be made. It's very hard to tell what will happen."

School changes on days of gypsy moth spray

(The School Department has issued the following school starting times for this weeks aerial gypsy moth spraying. Ed.)

We have been notified by the Town that the Gypsy Moth Spraying Program will take place on Thursday and Friday, May 20 and 21. These are target dates which will depend upon weather conditions which are conducive to the spraying.

The law requires that a seven-day period be posted and the dates would be May 20 through 27. Therefore, it is necessary for the schools to make use of its "Delayed Opening Schedule" procedure when the decision is made to proceed with the spraying. The following schedule and precautions will be taken to facilitate this operation:

1. On the morning of the actual spraying, the Superintendent will be notified and he will call the Radio Stations and Fire Department of a 1-hour and 30-minute delay in the opening of all schools. We will know if the spraying is "on" by 5:00 a.m. at the latest. The regular fire siren will blow at 7:00 a.m. and Radio Stations will carry the delayed opening information. Students who ride the buses will go to their regular bus stops 1 hour and 30 minutes later than a normal school day. Schools will begin on those two mornings at: Cohasset Junior/Senior High School at 9:24; Deer Hill at 10:00; Osgood at 10:10. Morning Kindergarten classes will be cancelled on both days at the Osgood School.

2. School fields will not be sprayed; however, the schools will hold indoor recess, lunch periods and physical education classes similar to a rainy day schedule.

3. All field and playground equipment will be washed down and playground equipment at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools will be wiped.

4. There will be no afternoon activities at the elementary schools. Scheduled varsity competition will take place but will be changed to away games.

5. Parents are urged to keep children indoors until time to go to the bus.

Murray amendment

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, made an amendment to the State budget during the long day and night budget sessions.

"I am very pleased that the House of Representatives voted favorably for $150,000 Commuter Boat subsidy. I do not ordinarily support a subsidy, but until we have more boats for commuter competition, we must provide this type of service for our commuters," she said.

I am glad to see the Commuter Van operation being instated. Many more people are using this type of travel into Boston than ever before," Rep. Murray continued.

Merle Brown and Arthur Lehr Jr. honored by scouts

The Old Mills District Cub Scout held its annual dinner May 14 at the Sons of Italy Hall in Rockland. This was a sociable and enjoyable evening. The adults came together to recognize all the individuals who have done an outstanding job serving youth.

The district represents ten towns.

From Cohasset, Merle Brown was the only person chosen by both the Cub Pack #38 and the troop #28 for his dedicated work with scouting and youth. He was presented a plaque by the District Executive, William Roberts. (Troop 28 Post 28 is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club.)

Arthur Lehr Jr. was also honored for his services to scouting.

All the registered cub scouts from Pack #38 and their families are invited for a swim at the Connelley Recreation Center, Broad St., Weymouth Tuesday, May 25, from 7-8 p.m. There is no fee.

All the cub scouts will march in the Memorial Day parade. They will be notified on the time and location for meeting.

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT INTERNATIONAL FESTIVAL

On Friday, May 14, the Cohasset High School Foreign Language Department sponsored an International Festival. This event took place in the New Study Hall of the High School during the entire day.

Students shared their discoveries of foreign languages, countries and cultures through displays, skits, food and music.

They also celebrated the first exciting year of the A.F.S. International Exchange Program's return to Cohasset.

Alcohol warning

High School graduation and related activities such as unsanctioned (SKIP DAYS) have become a matter of great concern, not only to the School Administration, but to the Cohasset Police Department.

The concern relates to the fact that these activities are almost always associated with drinking by members of the Senior Class, none of whom has reached the legal age of 20 as required by Massachusetts Law. The fact that alcohol is frequently furnished by unknowing parents/adults who are either misinformed or indifferent to the law, requires that they be advised of the factual realities and consequences of such behavior.

Adults/parents conducting or permitting their homes or property to be used for parties of any kind, are not permitted to serve or furnish alcoholic beverages to minors. Similarly, minors who bring their own alcoholic beverages for consumption at such parties, are not permitted to drink such beverages, since to do so would be in violation of law and imply tacit approval and participation by the host of conduct which is clearly illegal.

Minors are not permitted to purchase, possess, transport or consume alcoholic beverages and may not drink such beverages unless with the permission and in the company of their individual parent or guardian.

For a party host to indiscriminately furnish or serve such beverages to a minor is a clear violation of law for which they are subject, and will be prosecuted, in the Town of Cohasset.

In addition to criminal prosecution, party hosts may be subject to civil liability in cases where minors are served alcoholic beverages and then leave the premises and become involved in motor vehicle accidents causing damage, injury or death.

There is also a question of civil liability where an aggrieved parent may sue a party host for civil damages for having served alcoholic beverages to a particular minor child in violation of law.

The decision to sponsor or host this type of activity or function, therefore, carries with it a number of legal ramifications which must be considered by all potential party sponsors.

I am also duty bound to notify parents/adults that the Cohasset Police Department will pursue and prosecute such violations. To do otherwise would serve only to encourage alcohol abuse, raise serious questions relative to the integrity of the Police Department and create a potential safety hazard which would threaten the safety and well being of all community residents.

My Morning Out

At the Wednesday, May 26 meeting of My Morning Out, Peggy Blackwell of the Boston Association of Childbirth Education (BACE) will be the guest speaker.

She will discuss childbirth from the consumer point of view, the rights of the patient, and the options open to you having a child.

All women from Duxbury, Pembroke, Marshfield, and surrounding communities are invited to attend for this interesting topic at the First Parish Church, Route 3A, in Duxbury from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Babysitting is provided in the church nursery. A few tips for the woman on the way up

By Lois Martin

I probably might not have noticed it had I not been looking down from a mezzanine-type place in a big office.

But from my post I saw clearly why women aren't viewed seriously as business threats by men. We haven't learned to do it right yet.

And I think I've got a handle on some of the differences. Minor things, some are, but major nuances in the business world. It isn't a matter of limiting the slit in one's skirt or the cleavage on her new spring blouse.

Ah, that would be too obvious, too superficial, too easy.

Let me tell you first what I saw...

To the right below me was a young (an assumption since she wasn't sitting face up) woman with longish hair, unobtrusive outfit (because I can't remember what it was) seated at a desk, talking on the telephone.

Meanwhile, on the other side, to my left, were three men scrunched together over a desk, talking rapidly. Two had suit jackets, one had stripped to his shirt sleeves.

You have the picture already, don't you, such a keen-minded lot here on the South Shore.

Notice I said nothing about skipping a few ruffles on a hem line. Those are kind of nice, unobjectionable. I might say, though that if women were to cease putting one arm across the front of a midriff and resting the other with the coffee cup on it, she might look a bit more of a tycoon.

But go back to the picture we outlined. The girl on the right was talking on the phone without a pen in her hand. She wasn't taking notes or gesticulating as if to prove her point — why sell or why not sell, for example.

Likely she was taking a personal call. Now men know how to do this with a worried look on the brow (maybe for good reason). But at the very least one ought not look faintly amused or titilated or coy on the phone. Those aren't business-like expressions. They bespeak a little raise-the-devil-conversation right in the midst of a workday.

Men don't do that. They gaze off into space, eyes focusing narrowly on the light fixture, nodding to themselves as if in agreement that they share the consultant's or attorney's view on the matter under discussion...And it's probably the same kind of call that young woman was fielding.

Most of all you never see a man sit waving one of his legs crossed over the other with one of his shoes dangling from the foot in a business office. Women have got to cut that out.

Another thing, men always wear a lot so they can take some of it off in critical times. Remember that man in the shirt sleeves? His posture implied he was ready for the roughest times his firm might encounter that morning. His briefcase (not his purse) was opened and agape with a pile of purused papers.

Men in a crisis get down to it. Jackets off, ties loosened, sleeves rolled up. Someone sees 'em and knows this company's in good hands. They'll take care of everything.

Women, unfortunately, have appeared to go directly to the bathroom in a crisis. They put on fresh lipstick, brush up the hair a bit.

Stop that. Looks like you've got time for an ice cream. You don't. You've got yourself an emergency there. Take off something (careful here). Roll something up (don't do that to slacks for peddle-pusher effect). Strew your papers around on your desk and don't sit in the chair anymore. Those men were all standing. On your feet, a tried but true and thoroughly able person. You're not going back to that bathroom for three hours. Men never go, did you notice?

If you have to have coffee, drink it from a styrofoam cup that looks like it was yesterday's. Get rid of that cute little mug with the frog handle and your nickname, "Bubbles."

Now for the most important thing. This'll take a bit of practice, but we're more than equal to it.

Women are never truly going to be business equals in this country until they learn how to huddle. Men huddle everywhere. I've seen them in the State House, little knots of males, heads close together. I've seen them at Town Hall, small clusters seldom so large they can't get all their heads together in one whispery circle.

I've seen them at cocktail parties, the women apart like at eighth grade socials standing in lines or chuckling while waving one sling-backed heel off the right foot.

Start huddling. Practice. Get two others to meet at your desk. When they are about a foot away, stand up, lean over, talk in hushed tones. No more of this clearly audible communication from three rooms away. The person who can barely be heard is saying something you'd benefit from knowing. Or at least it looks that way. Obviously no one says anything important loud enough to be understood without that huddle. And don't stand up with one heel pivoting on the floor, making an unwarranted marble hole with a heel while discussing business.

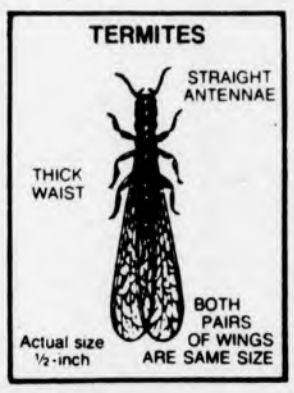
No one ever said it would be easy. Nor is it too late.

There are other little things of less dynamic impact. Start going out for business suppers (jacket back on) instead of going home to cook them all the time. No matter what anyone hands you, ask for two more copies. Take people aside before speaking with them, beckoning them with your lower chin rather than the eye, which can be readily misinterpreted by fellow workers. Speak more deeply, not more often. High voiced people don't run America. They run kitchens. Few men have whined themselves to the top. Corporate pinnacles are presided upon by the persuasive pin-stripers. We can get the hang of these matters.

But I hope before long I get better at leaning back in my swivel chair with my hands clasped behind my head. I've gone over backward a few times. But you wouldn't believe how fast I pick myself up for a quick huddle.

Breast cancer detection clinic

The Social Service League of Cohasset will offer a Breast Cancer Detection Clinic Wednesday, May 26 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St.



The program will consist of a private examination by a nurse practitioner. There will also be a film on self breast exams, literature and "Betsy," the anatomical model.

Women may participate in part or all of the program. The Clinic is free, but donations will be accepted.

If you have any questions, call the Social Service League office at 383-0771.

Here comes the Sevin...selectmen issue a list of precautions

Selectmen have listed several precautions for residents to take as the gypsy moth aerial spraying begins this week.

The board recommended that all children's toys, pet feed and water dishes be removed from outdoors. Automobiles or equipment that cannot be removed should be covered.

Animals should be kept in a shelter and owners of bees should keep them confined in the hives until 8 a.m. on the morning the spraying is done.

Notice will be given prior to the spraying by radio and newspapers. Signs publicizing the aerial spray dates and times will be placed at the incoming roads to Cohasset.

Further information is available at the office of Executive Secretary Arthur Clark in town hall. Call 383-0228.

Maps may be viewed of the outlined areas to be sprayed at the selectmen's office.

Helium balloons will not be an acceptable marking for exclusion from the gypsy moth spray this week. Last Wednesday, selectmen pushed the spraying company, C&W Ag-Air Inc., to allow helium balloons in place of the flags.

The answer was a firm "no." Balloons are unacceptable because they deflate overnight, said a C&W Ag-Air representative.

An unofficial source said that Ag-Air had experienced conflicts in the past with people shooting the balloons.

According to Building Inspector Jim Litchfield, selectman Mary Jane McArthur said last week that building permits are not required for flag structures on trees. However any structure above 35 feet, stemming from the ground level, would require a variance.

The gypsy moth aerial spray with the product Sevin is scheduled to begin Thursday, May 20. One helicopter is expected to cover the town on two mornings between 5:30 and 8. School openings will be delayed one hour and a half.

All Hunter horse show

The Cohasset 4-H Riding Club will hold its annual All Hunter Horse Show Sunday, May 23 at Bare Cove Stable, 329 East St., Hingham.

Lori Marshall, president, and Tammy Abromowich, vice president, of 4-H have put together 23 classes and 7 divisions. Riders will be beginners through adults competing for the annual challenge cup divisions.

The competition will include pony division as well as hunter, adult, and maiden divisions. Jumping and trail classes will be featured.

Many of the participants compete throughout the year throughout Massachusetts in three phase eventing which includes stadium jumping, dressage and cross country.

They also participate in many other 4-H Horse Shows and clinics and are members of Ponkapoag Pony Club and Heritage Dressage Club. The adult riders are members of the Cohasset Riding Club.

Special thanks go to Bob Sturdy and Sue Wright for the use of their stable for the show and to the following merchants and residents of Cohasset and Hingham who sponsored the many classes and divisions.

The public is invited to attend. Refreshments will be available.

Coast Guard report for the week...

THURSDAY, MAY 6

7:16 p.m., A "CB" operator relayed a call for assistance from the 20 foot inboard/outboard Nancy Bell. The Nancy Bell, owned by Joseph Townsend, Pembroke, with 5 people on board, was disabled with engine failure 1 mile off Green Harbor. The C.G. utility boat 41455 towed the Nancy Bell into Green Harbor. The vessel was inspected to make sure they complied with all applicable federal law and was issued a citation for failure to have visual distress signals.

SATURDAY, MAY 8

9:05 a.m., The outboard Sager relayed a call via "CB" from a 19 foot outboard. The outboard, owned by Mr. Wacamaux, Woonsocket, RI, with 5 people on board, was disabled with engine failure 3 miles off Scituate Harbor. The CG utility boat 41455 was diverted from another mission to the outboard and towed it into Scituate.

2:03 p.m., Received call from vessel Stephie via CB reporting that they were disabled off Salem by Halfway Rock. Relayed call to Gloucester CG Station.

2:37 p.m., Received call from residents of Sand Hills beach area reporting an outboard disabled by the rocks. The outboard, owned by Mr. Broderick, Dedham, with 2 people on board was disabled with engine failure. The CG utility boat 41455 took the vessel in tow to Scituate. The vessel was inspected to insure compliance with all applicable federal law and was issued a citation for failure to have visual distress signals.

3:26 p.m., Gloucester CG station requests that Scituate CG reestablish communications with the vessel "Stephie" via CB channel 9 to better determine its position. Vessel Stephie determined to be midway between Devereaux beach and tip of Nahant. Relayed position to Pt. Allerton CG station.

SUNDAY, MAY 9

1:43 p.m., Received call from vessel "Wings of the Morning" via VHF-FM radio reporting that they have experienced engine failure off High Pines Ledge. C.G. utility boat 41455 aborted mission when notified by the "Wings of the Morning" that they no longer were in need of assistance.

2:11 p.m., Received call from inboard/outboard "Dynamite." The vessel Dynamite, owned by Mr. Gardina, of Brockton, with 2 people on board, was disabled with engine failure ½ mile off the 4th cliff. The 41455 took the vessel in tow to Scituate.

MONDAY, MAY 10

2:30 p.m., Received call from resident of 4th cliff reporting a 16 ft. outboard disabled off the beach. The outboard, "Beaver Trap" owned by Mr. Shultz, Avon, with 2 people on board, was disabled with engine failure. The C.G. utility boat 41455 took the vessel under town to Humarock. The vessel was inspected to ensure compliance with all applicable federal law and was issued a citation for failure to have the certificate of numbers, registration, aboard.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 12

2:05 p.m., Received a report from CG Group Boston that a capsized 12 foot skiff was sighted by the vessel Symphony approximately 11 miles off New Inlet. The vessel Symphony believed that the skiff had been in the water some time and that there was no flotsam in the area. The CG Motor Lifeboat 44318 was dispatched to investigate. Upon arrival at the skiff's given position a search was conducted. The search for people in the water, the boat, and flotsam was negative. A radio broadcast was made warning mariners of the possible hazard to navigation — the skiff.

8:52 p.m., Received a report from 4th cliff resident reporting a boat on fire just off shore. The CG utility boat 41455 was dispatched to investigate. The 41 arrived in the area and found that the fire was a party on the beach.

Murphy leads tennis girls over Duxbury, 3-2

Senior Karen Murphy was the heroine for the girls' tennis team last week when she clinched her third singles match versus Duxbury for the Skipper 3-2 victory.

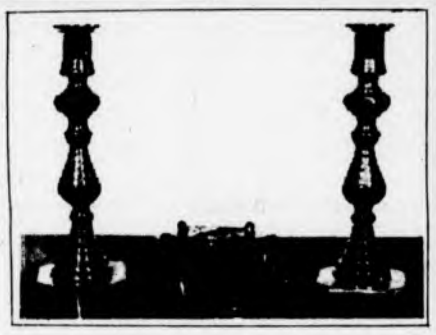
Murphy was congratulated by an enthusiastic mob of her teammates immediately following the win. Cohasset players ran onto Murphy's court with cheers of joy because they knew this win boosted Cohasset into a first place tie with previously undefeated Duxbury.

After winning the first set, 6-1, Murphy lost the second one, 2-6, to her opponent, Kelly Meyers. Murphy was behind 3-1 in the third set and rallied for the 6-4 set and match victory. Murphy usually plays with Joy Pratt in first doubles. The pair has been undefeated in doubles action this season.

First singles player Mia Graham won her second singles match, 6-3, 6-4. Sue Dalrymple left her first singles game during the second set because of a back injury. Duxbury won that match by default. Dalrymple had won the first set 6-2 and was behind 2-1 in the second set when she withdrew.

The first doubles team of Pratt and Krissie Ralff beat their Duxbury opposition, 6-2, 6-1. In second doubles, Cohasset's Diane Mullen and Jenny Mitman were defeated by Duxbury, 6-2, 6-2.

The Cohasset squad has an 11-1 record and is tied with Duxbury for first place in the South Shore League. Duxbury has a 9-1 league record. Duxbury is considered a tennis powerhouse in the South Shore League since they have won the past nine league titles.



BO MALNATI and his shadow, Al Rose, run toward a ground ball in softball action last week for the Strawberry Parfait team.

Athlete of the week, senior Karen Froio

Meet Karen Froio a dedicated and enthusiastic three-sport athlete at Cohasset High School. Froio, a senior, is a captain of the softball team which is in first place in the South Shore League with an 11-1 record.

Last week versus Duxbury, Froio smacked two homeruns over the right field fence in Cohasset. She is the team's shortstop and bats righty. Her batting amounts to a .372 average.

During her High School play, Froio has collected more than 100 career hits. Last year she batted .447 with 34 hits for the season. Froio has been on the varsity squad since her freshman year.

Cohasset Softball Coach Bill Fallon said, "Karen always plays hard...game in and game out...she completely sacrifices herself. She has winning qualities."

Fallon described Froio as a player with tremendous desire. "She plays as hard as anyone I've ever seen. She's an excellent defensive player and she knows the game. She always comes up with the big plays, defensively, for us," he said.

Fallon spoke of Froio as a top shortstop candidate to be named an all-star in the SSL.

Froio is an honor roll student and has good leadership qualities, said Fallon. She was a point guard on the basketball team and also played field hockey.

Froio will attend Central Connecticut College next year where she plans to play on the field hockey and softball squads.

Tis wins three to stay undefeated, 8-0

Senior co-captain Rob Tis remained undefeated in singles tennis action last week. He registered two-set victories versus Duxbury, Hull and Middleboro opponents.

Tis, a third singles player, won his match against first place Duxbury, with a 6-4, 6-3 victory. He was the only Cohasset player to win a match that day. He is undefeated in eight games. In the Middleboro contest, Tis posted a 6-1, 6-0 win. He defeated his Hull opponent, 6-3, 7-5.

Teamwise the boys' tennis squad had a successful week, defeating Hull, 3-2, Middleboro, 5-0, and losing to Duxbury, 4-1. The loss to Duxbury represented the end of an eight-game winning streak for Cohasset.

In the Middleboro game, the doubles pair of Brian Ramsay and Paul Riley shut out their opposition, 6-0, 6-0.

Mike Brady won his singles match against Middleboro, 6-2. In the Eastern Massachusetts Boys' Invitational Tournament this past weekend, Tis advanced to the third round before losing to a Dennis-Yarmouth player. He lost that match in three sets, 5-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Secondsingles player Shannon Collins won both his Middleboro and Hull matches, 6-1, 6-2, and 6-1, 6-0, respectively. Collins lost in the second round of tennis action at the Eastern Mass. Tourney.

The second doubles team of Bill Davenport and John Colocousis have accumulated a winning record of 5-2. Last week, Davenport and Colocousis bowed for the second time to Duxbury with a 6-2, 6-3 loss.

The tennis team has a record of 8-2 and is in second place in the South Shore League. If the Skipper squad wins their final four games they will qualify for the tourney. "We're not taking it easy yet. It's important to win our upcoming matches," said Cohasset Coach Toni Jillson.

Because of the gypsy moth aerial spray project, the boys are scheduled to lose their home advantage against Rockland on Thursday. Earlier this season Cohasset defeated Rockland, 4-1, but it was a close call. Jillson said, "'psychologically, Rockland will have the edge if we have to play them away."

Three softball homers finish off Duxbury

The girls' softball team contracted a case of fence fever last week. The Skippers smashed three homeruns over the right field fence enroute to an 11-3 victory over Duxbury at Cohasset High School.

Senior co-captain Karen Froio directed two softballs over the fence and senior Laurie Sandblom homered once over the fence.

Surely Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon hopes that the fence fever will develop into an epidemic throughout his team.

The softball squad is 12-1 overall and 11-1 in the league. With three wins last week the Cohasset girls remained atop the South Shore League standings in first place. In addition to Duxbury, the Skippers also beat Middleboro, 4-1, and Hull, 8-6.

In the sixth inning of the Hull game Karen Froio hit the eventual game winning single which scored her cousin Sarah Froio, who was on base with a double. Gia Barresi smacked a double which brought Karen Froio home for the eighth run.

The outcome of the Hull game was 8-6. "We didn't play particularly well but we did make some big plays defensively," said Fallon. "It was not a textbook performance."

Against Middleboro, Liz Russell was the winning pitcher and gave up only four hits. Middleboro allowed six Cohasset hits and Laurie Sandblom had three of those while scoring twice.

Fallon spoke of the 4-1 Middleboro victory. "They have some outstanding pitching and they are always involved in low scoring games."

Defense played a big part in the win, said Fallon. Carla Lucas had great plays at third base and Madeline Roy was invaluable at first.

Unless a disaster hits, the girls will most likely qualify for the tournament, said Fallon.

McMann's finish sinks Abington golfers, 5-4

Steve McMann withstood the pressure and sunk an eight-foot putt in the final hole of golf last week to snatch the 5-4 victory over Abington.

The Cohasset golfers lost to Duxbury, 5-4, and Rockland, 5½-3½ last week. The golf team has a 4-3 record with three matches remaining. The Skippers must sweep three victories to qualify for the tournament.

Against Duxbury, the first place team in the South Shore League, Captain Jack McNeill notched a 42. Troy Chatterton, Chris Powers and Charles Brady were point-getters for Cohasset.

In the Abington win, Chatterton posted a low score of 41. Powers, McMann, Jim Rooney and John Drago scored for the Skippers. Coach Jim Franey said Mike Cunning played a strong nine holes of golf.

Chatterton, Drago and Rooney were the sole scorers for Cohasset in the Rockland loss.

Historical flea market fundraiser

The Cohasset Historical Society will present its annual giant Flea Market from 9 to 2 on the grounds of the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Saturday, May 22.

This gala event serves as a fund-raiser for the repair and improvement of the Society's museum buildings at Cohasset Center and for the continued restoration of its headquarters at the Lothrop House.

Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, president, has assembled a small army of volunteers to help make this year's version of the Flea Market as successful as those of several previous years.

Among those who will be participating in this annual event are: Mrs. James N. Skehan, in charge of the large selection of clothing. Everything from dresses, suits, and coats to ski-boots and overshoes will be available at never-before-heard-of prices.

Mrs. John Eaton will head up "Attic Collectables," an unusually fine accumulation of jewelry, antiques and other better-than-ordinary items. Mrs. Wilfred Cooney will preside over the book section of the market. Those who enjoy reading will be sure to find something of value among the selection of fiction and non-fiction books in hard bound and paper backs.

Home baked foods will be a highlight of the Society's Flea Market and Mrs. Ellery Hyland has assembled a team of volunteers to prepare a mouth-watering selection which will be available at the bakery table for as long as the supply lasts.

Donald W. Pratt will be the chef extraordinaire for the hot dog and soft drink stand. He will be assisted by Hamilton Tewksbury. Expertly cooked on-the-spot refreshments will be the order of the day.

Many other tables full of choice Flea Market merchandise are to be found, encompassing multitudes of fabulous bargains ranging from sporting goods to kitchenware, furniture and picture frames to electrical equipment, radios, jigsaw puzzles, bric-a-brac and curios, as well as a spectrum of fascinating items too numerous to mention.

During the Flea Market, Conrad Ericcson and his crew of volunteer carpenters will be hard at work installing new shelving in the Society's garage behind the Lothrop House, to be used for the storage of books and other articles for the next giant sale.

Additional volunteers include John Mullett who will serve in the indispensable role as treasurer. Mrs. Warren Pratt, Mrs. Dorothea Bjorkgren, Mrs. Frank England, Mrs. Edith Cavanagh, Linda Halloran, and Mrs. Charles W. Moebius also will assist.

Be sure to visit the Cohasset Historical Society's once-a-year gigantic Flea Market this Saturday on the grounds of the Lothrop House.

Arrive early to find the best selection of the things you always wanted but never could find anywhere else!

Curtain rises Thursday on 'Strange Bedfellows'

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's Spring Show, the comedy "Strange Bedfellows," will be presented at the Town Hall May 20 to 22. The curtain rises at 8 p.m. and tickets will be available at the door.

Cast members of the show have spent many hours developing their roles under the tutelage of director Denise Ripley. This show's cast is a talented group of performers from the Cohasset Club, and having unique and varied backgrounds.

For instance, Barbara Elliot, appearing as Julia, has played in, among other plays, the Club's "Where's Charlie?" "Mary, Queen of Scots," "The Matchmaker," "Desk Set," "Picnic" and "Seven Year Itch." She is a director at the Talking Information Center (a radio reading service for the blind), has appeared on television and radio.

A recent necessary change in the cast of "Strange Bedfellows" sees Club veteran Wayne Barcomb taking over the role of Matthew. Wayne has been a professional actor, having played in "Plaza Suite" at Christo's Dinner Theatre in Brockton, and in "Guys and Dolls" at Plymouth's Old Colony Theatre. He also has appeared in the T.V. documentary called "Nobody Says Hello Anymore." For the Cohasset Club, his acting credits include "The Mousetrap," "The Night of the Iguana," "Send Me No Flowers," "The Pleasure of His Company," "Toys In the Attic," and about half a dozen other plays.

For the Scituate Theatre Guild he acted in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Carter Hill, playing the houseboy Ling, is a 21 year veteran of the Cohasset Club, and once played summer stock at Nantucket. His Cohasset apprearances include roles in "Send Me No Flowers," "The Night of the Iguana," "The Little Foxes," "All My Sons," and "Joan of Lorraine."

A member of the Hingham Civic Musical Theater, he has played in "Brigadoon," "Show Boat," and "Finian's Rainbow."

Florence Kelley, this season's club president, appears as Mrs. Gimble. She has produced several shows for the club, as well as musicals for other Cohasset organizations. Florence has acted in "Where's Charlie?" "Chamber Music," "I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running."

Joan Appel, a newcomer to Cohasset, plays Addie in this spring's production. She holds a master's degree in voice from the New England Conservatory of Music, and is a singer of classical music. Joan has appeared as soloist with choruses in this country and in Europe, as well as having had roles in numerous musical comedy and opera productions, including "The Music Man" and "Anything Goes." At Yale University she appeared in the drama "The Sandbox."

Delynn Gilboe plays Mrs. Sparker in "Strange Bedfellows." A new club member, her stage experience on the South Shore includes appearances in a Cabaret show titled "Laugh In" at Massasoit Community College where she has taken courses in acting. Delynn also has appeared in "Look Homeward Angel."

Gerald McNabb is this show's Vincent. He played in the Junior Dramatic Club's production of "Games People Play." For the Young at Heart Theater in Hingham and at Notre Dame school plays Gerald has acted in "Cinderella" and "Scrooge."

Acting is his favorite hobby, and he has been on stage for eight of his 16 years. Gerald is a student at Xaverian Brothers High school.

Jacquelyn Fahey, "Strange Bedfellows' " Lillian, has studied drama at the South Shore Conservatory. She has appeared in the school play "The Birds' Christmas Carol," and has taken courses in jazz, ballet and tap dancing. Jacqueline is an eighth grade student at Cohasset High School.

Matthew Kuhn plays Nickey, and is reputed to have said, "It has always been my wish to be an actor when I grow up." Matthew has begun his career by acting in a recent club play-reading. "Strange Bedfellows" marks his first appearance on stage for the Cohasset Club.

Betty Miessner will play the role of Mrs. Worley. She is a veteran of numerous Dramatic Club shows, having appeared in "Lovers and Other Strange Lovers," "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "Best of Friends," "Ladies In Retirement" and "Night Must Fall." Previously, as a Baltimore resident, she appeared with the Mid-Town Players in "Night Must Fall." When not on stage, Betty often can be found back-stage, working on productions.

Julia Wood Jordan plays Clarissa in "Strange Bedfellows." After studying theatre at Stephens College and doing summer stock in New Hampshire and Iowa, she began stage roles for the Dramatic Club and appeared in "The Great Sebastians," "Joan of Lorraine," and "Send Me No Flowers," then in "Stud" and "The Mousetrap." Last winter Julia portrayed Lady Margaret in "A Man For All Seasons." In California, she worked as an actress, costume designer, director and producer for several organizations. Julia has written an original play titled "Lemuria."

David Wadsworth, who plays Mayor Tibbett, was in several Dramatic Club shows during the 1950's, including "The Seven Year Itch" and "The Man Who Came To Dinner." At UMass Amherst he appeared in "South Pacific," and as an apprentice at the South Shore Music Circus was in "Paint Your Wagon" and "Anything Goes." He appeared in last winter's club show, "A Man For All Sasons."

Ellen Kelly, who will appear as the maid Nellie, as well as being the Stage Manager for "Strange Bedfellows," is a former professional actress in New York and Boston. Ellen is a teacher of theater at the South Shore Conservatory. She also was seen in the club's winter production of "A Man For All Seasons."

Wayne Miessner, the voice of the offstage cab driver, has appeared in or worked on most of the production staged by the club in recent years. Last year he directed "Night Must Fall" and also acted in the show, and this season he was the set designer for the fall production "Table Manners" and appeared in "A Man For All Seasons."

Bob Parsons portrays Gifford in "Strange Bedfellows." His experience in the Cohasset Club includes appearances in "Ladies In Retirement," "Don't Drink the Water," "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "The Pleasure Of His Company."

Joe Coyle is a newcomer to the club, appearing for the first time in a major role as Senator Cromwell.

These are the people behind the makeup, the actors and actresses who will bring to life the cast of characters who populate the stage in the Dramatic Club's Spring Show "Strange Bedfellows."

Directing is Denise Ripley, the stage manager is Ellen Kelly, and lighting effects will be produced by Arthur Paquette.

The antics of the "Strange Bedfellows" company will be seen on the Cohasset Town Hall stage this week, Thursday through Saturday.

You are hereby warned to appear at these proceedings; fail not to attend, at your own peril.

We all dream of having an English butler around the house, but most of us would gladly settle for Carole McManus who, together with Kris Johnston, now goes under the alias of "Borrowed Buter." Carole has an M.A. in English, but since graduating from Syracuse 25 years ago, has directed her creativity towards cooking. Kris has been a professional in that field for eight years, cooking for such familiar South Shore restaurants as Sadies of Marshfield and Strawberry Fair of Hingham. Now they have teamed up to offer a catering service tailored to the occasion, the setting and the choice of cuisine, even going to the extent of making rolls in the shape of alligators for a 14-year-old's confirmation party. Then there was the dinner party where Kris designed a watermelon basket filled with fresh fruits adorned with handcarved fruit flowers. They'll even set out to sea with you, bringing aboard cocktails and serving meals. From a choice collection of recipes that include ethnic, classic and novelle cuisine, Carole has sent along one of her husband's favorites, a northern Italian recipe, easily adaptable to our area, where mussels are ours for the taking in our waters. This serves six, has 540 calories per serving and is called

FETTUCINI WITH ZUCCHINI & MUSSEL SAUCE

2 lb. mussels
1 stick butter
1 c. heavy cream
2 lbs. zucchini
1/3 c. minced shallots
1/4 c. minced parsley
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
2 c. dry white wine
2 tsp. salt, pepper to taste
1 lb. fettucini

Scrub and clean mussels. In kettle cook 2 T shallots and 2 T butter over moderate heat for 2 min. Add wine, 2 T parsley and pepper. Bring liquid to a boil. Add mussels and cook 5 to 6 min. Remove mussels with slotted spoon, discarding unopened shells and strain liquid. Remove mussels from shell. Return liquid to pan and reduce over high heat to 1 cup. Add cream and again reduce to 1½ cups. Julienne the zucchini. Spread in colander, sprinkle with salt, drain 30 min. and pat dry with paper towels. In large skillet over moderate heat cook remaining shallots and garlic in ½ stick butter until soft. Add zucchini and cook 3 to 5 min. Add tomatoes and cook 2 min. Add mussels, cream mixture and parsley to skillet. Bring to boil and simmer 3 min. Cook pasta approximately 7 min. until al dente. Drain and toss with remaining butter. Transfer to platter and pour sauce over.

A good clue to a restaurant's quality is the discovery that the owner is also the manager, spending long hours on the premises, aware of what goes into the dishes listed on his menu and what is coming out of his kitchen. Betty and Vinny Turner live in Green Harbor, but seven days a week, 14 hours a day, finds them at Sandy Lane overlooking the ocean at Rexhame Beach. They've transformed what was once a rather dingy lounge into a restaurant that seats 162 and is charmingly decorated with stained glass from an old Chicago mansion, plants and tables set with blue linen and fresh flowers. Their chefs, Dave Ritcey and Jimmy Harmon, came to them highly recommended and their new menu specializes in Italian dishes and seafoods. Each dish is individually prepared, according to Jim and here is how you will be served your

SHRIMP SCAMPI

1 lb. U15 fresh shrimp (jumbo)
1/2 stick butter
1 T fresh garlic, crushed
Parsley, finely chopped, to taste
3 T white wine — chablis

Saute shrimp in ¼ c. vegetable oil until cooked, approximately 5 to 10 min. over medium heat. Add to other ingredients. Cook until sauce is creamy. Serve with rice pilaf. Serves two.

24 HOUR BANKING

At Hingham Institution for Savings

It's fast. It's convenient. It's easy. It's safe. It's anytime.

GENIE is our 24 hour teller machine. With it on the job, you can make deposits or withdrawals anytime; 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

It's fast.

It only takes a minute to make a deposit or withdrawal with GENIE. And since it's so quick there's never a waiting time.

It's convenient.

You can sign up for our GENIE 24 hour teller machine at any of our 4 offices.

It's easy.

GENIE is located in a safe and secure foyer. When the bank is closed, simply insert your GENIE card in the electronic door opener. A buzzer will sound, indicating the door is open for you.

Insert your GENIE card into the slot indicated in the right-hand corner. A door will open, revealing a screen and a keyboard.

Enter your personal identification number, and follow the instructions on the screen.

A supply of envelopes is provided, below the face of the machine for deposits and payments. Fill out the envelope, enclose your transaction and place the envelope in the deposit slot.

It's safe.

The enclosed foyers where GENIE 24 hour teller machines are located are locked, and only those who have a card can get in.

It's anytime.

Anytime banking means the bank is at your disposal when it's convenient for you, not the bank. Even if it's two o'clock on Sunday morning you can make a deposit or withdrawal.

Gypsy moth spraying coming this week...no Sevin

Cohasset will attack the gypsy moth with an aerial spraying of the chemical dipel this week. The spraying was scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday morning between 5:30 and 8, weather conditions permitting.

In a dramatic turn-around last week, Selectmen agreed to substitute dipel (Bacillus thuringiensis) for the controversial Sevin chemical. Plans for an aerial spray of Sevin had prompted complaints in several quarters and could have resulted in court action against the town.

Dipel, being more expensive, will mean that about half of the town will be sprayed this week, with the most heavily infested areas to receive the most attention.

The original contract of $50,000 was signed with C&W Ag-Air Service of Hanson in March, and called for spraying about 5,000 acres. With the more expensive B.t., Tree and Park Department Supt. Peter Laugelle said that about 2,200 acres would be sprayed under the new plan.

Laugelle's department began a ground spraying of Sevin on town property last week. The perimeters of school yards were sprayed and the playground equipment was washed down.

B.t. is reportedly safer than Sevin and is recommended by the state.

It will be school as usual on the day of the gypsy moth spray, said School Supt. Eugene Crowell. With the switch to B.t., "The safety hazard has now been removed," he said. School openings will not be delayed as was planned if Sevin was used.

Selectmen voted 2-1 last Tuesday in favor of substituting B.t. for Sevin, with Selectman Rocco Laugelle against the switch.

"I voted for Sevin because I felt that people at town meeting (in December) knew what they were voting for," said Laugelle. "The town voted for Sevin and I felt as though my job, as selectman, is to do as the town votes. We should fulfill whatever they decide."

Board Chairman Henry Ainslie Jr. said he initiated the vote to switch because, "There were so many complications...that I thought it would be in the best interest of the town to revert to B.t. I thought it was the best way out for the town."

Spraying with B.t. would be better than not spraying at all, said Ainslie. His vote for B.t. was based on the difficult marking requirements for exclusion from Sevin and the fact that the town had a contract.

Ainslie said his decision to spray with B.t. was actually made before the Tuesday night meeting last week and before he received a letter from Carl Hurtig's attorney, warning of court action to stop the Sevin spray. Although Ainslie said the letter did affect the situation, he didn't feel the restraining order would prevail.

"I still believe the most effective way of handling the situation is to spray the entire town with Sevin," said Ainslie. "The whole thing got so involved... threats of a restraining order, and with the very tight time frame that we had to work within...it just didn't seem in the best interest of the town to take a hard stand."

Only time will tell how effective B.t. will be in kill-

Pesky seagulls foul Lily Pond water

Cohasset seagulls have taken a liking to Lily Pond which supplies most of the town's drinking water and the water commissioners aren't happy about it.

The commissioners recently brought the problem to the attention of the board of health and Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos.

Seagull droppings at the pond have been on the rise during the past few months and the water commissioner said in a letter to Eliopoulos that the increase in seagulls is directly related to the recent acceptance of garbage by Barry Brothers at Cohasset Heights.

The commission strongly recommended that permission for dumping garbage at the landfill be rescinded immediately.

The water department has monitored the seagull situation since April 1, and Eliopoulos is awaiting an official bacterial count from the department. Meanwhile she has contacted several state officials and engineers for guidance.

The seagull count is largest between 2 and 3 p.m., said Water Supt. Ben Curley. Seagulls usually leave the pond area during noontime, he said. Curley said the seagulls hang out on a regular basis, six days a week, but not on Sundays.

Curley would not pin-point the dump as the direct cause of the influx of seagulls during the past three months. "We're not sure where they are coming from," he said. "We have some ideas and thoughts on the matter...we want to investigate."

In years past, Curley said, there had been seagulls milling over the pond but not to this recent great extent. Seagulls would congregate chiefly in the winter during a northeast storm, he said.

Curley reports that the water's chloroform count has risen in the past few months. Seagull droppings could account for chloroform increase, "but you don't want to say it now, until we completely investigate." The droppings "would definitely raise the count," he said.

An inspection of the dump was made May 3 by the board of health, the health agent and an official from the state's Division of Water Supply. Eliopoulos said one area of the landfill was extended over the proper

Playhouse awards $107,000; $50,000 to Art Center

South Shore Art Center will leave the squat building on Ripley Road for better quarters.

The move is still somewhat of a secret.

Margaret Dillon, director of the center, is planning a press conference next week to announce a fundraising effort.

The effort is already off to a substantial start. A still unnamed organization challenged the art center to match a $50,000 grant, setting a time limit on the offer.

Dillon said that organization would be named at next week's press conference.

This week South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc., the parent organization of the South Shore Music Circus, announced the award of $50,000 to match the challenge "for the purpose of acquiring new facilities."

The South Shore Playhouse Associates release from John J. Hayes Jr., president of the non-profit organization, included awards to 14 other organizations.

A total of $107,000 was given away.

Amounts of the other gifts are not going to be specified.

The Cohasset Community Center, Cohasset Historical Society Lothrop Fund, Sandy Beach Association, South Shore Conservatory of Music, Cohasset Rotary Club Scholarship Fund and the Cohasset Dramatic Club are among the recipients.

Bertram Pratt, who handles publicity for the organization, said the practice has been to keep the amounts secret.

"Some organizations are considered more as favorites," he added, pointing out that Cohasset Art Center is the child of the organization.

"And we used to use Cohasset Community Center as a rehearsal hall back when we were doing more programming."

The Hingham-based Conservatory was also on the list of favorites, Pratt explained. The Historical Society and Cohasset Dramatic Club were too.

Among the others on the large list are: the Cohasset Sailing Club, Cohasset Swim Center, Cohasset Youth Athletic Association, the Fine Arts Chorale, Hingham Civic Orchestra, Old Colony Council, Boy Scouts, Social Service League of Cohasset and the Cohasset Boosters Club.

Pratt said the grants this year are the largest in the history of the organization.

"With today's interest rates so high, we've had a build-up of earned income," he explained. As a non-profit corporation the organization makes a practice of giving away earnings.

"There's no guarantee there will be this much money to give next year," he added.

The Music Circus hasn't always been a winning proposition, however.

It's only been recent years when the operation has turned a large profit.

"The Playhouse Associates was founded in 1948 and the following year took over the franchise to operate a summer theater in the Town Hall which had existed since 1932," Pratt said.

"The new group operated the theater for one year under the direction of New York producer George Somnes, and the following year sub-leased to the

Sewer study underway

The Cohasset Board of Sewer Commissioners is conducting a study to select an effluent discharge site, evaluate the environmental impacts and establish the preliminary engineering design parameters.

This study is being conducted as part of the Phase I Sewerage Improvements Programs.

The area of concern includes Pleasant Beach (at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue) and areas within one mile offshore.

Everyone is invited to attend a public meeting on this study at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 1, in the Town Hall Auditorium. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss preliminary results and to solicit input from concerned individuals and groups.

Representatives from the consulting engineering firm of Metcalf & Eddy will present the status of their investigations and answer questions.

Red Cross bloodmobile

The Cohasset Chapter of the American Red Cross will hold a Bloodmobile Monday, June 14 at the Unitarian Parish House.

The hours will be from 1:30 to 7:15 p.m. and all donors between the ages of 17 and 66 are most welcome.

Towers resigns as registrar

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee was informed of the resignation of Ed Towers as Town Registrar effective July 1.

The Committee is now seeking applicants for this salaried three-year position. Any interested registered town Republican should notify Town Committee Chairman, Julie Guild at 365 Jerusalem Road, by June 14.

AFS students visit in July

Cohasset will be a "bus stop" for 33 AFS students for four days in early July.

The bus stops here for foreign students heading home after a year abroad in the U.S. The short layover is meant to ease the psychological problems of going home after being immersed in U.S. culture for the school year.

The Cohasset Chapter of AFS is looking for homes for the students, who are Spanish speaking, South African, Belgian and Japanese and who have been in upper New York State and western Connecticut for four days, from July 5 to July 9.

There will be some planned activities for students and host families — a Boston Harbor tour and pool party — and time for host families to become acquainted with a foreign student.

If you would like to host a student, call Barbara Spooner, 383-0347, or Christine Gilmore, 383-6596.

Health reminders for Sevin

The Board of Health reminds residents planning to spray their yards with Sevin to follow instructions carefully.

When purchasing the product, be sure to inquire as to the best formulation for your individual needs. Using more than the required amount does not necessarily mean a greater kill. If special instructions are noted on the particular formulation that you purchase, follow them exactly.

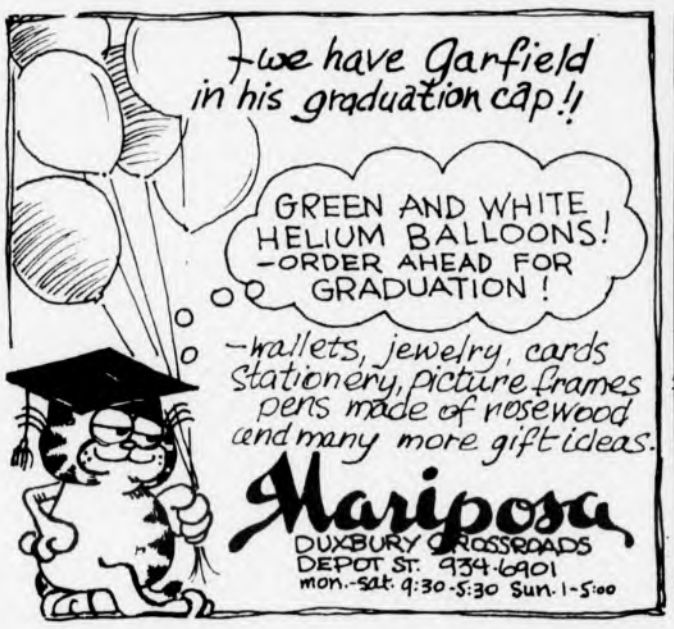
Remember, all pesticides are considered toxic to varying degrees, and should be used with extreme caution.

Call the Board of Health Office at 383-1664 if you have any questions.

Roadway work shifting

Work on the southbound roadway of Route 3 in Weymouth shifted from the left travel lanes to the extreme right travel and breakdown lanes as of this week.

All traffic from the Summer Street Bridge to Middle Street Bridge on Route 3 southbound is being directed to the two extreme left travel lanes.



The extreme right travel lane and breakdown lane are closed for an indefinite period. Access to all on and off ramps is available during the construction period.

The one-half mile closing is necessary to allow for the reconstruction and widening of Route 3 southbound from two to three lanes.

Bet a lot of people didn't know Gov. Edward King was in Cohasset Sunday. Well, he was and after attending church services at St. Anthony's, he appeared at Hugo's for a fundraiser. Here he suits up after arriving at Milliken Field behind the high school. (Photo by Greg Derr)

Their bills are most delinquent, Water Dept. says

Fifty households face water shutoffs

An estimated 50 residents who haven't paid their water bills in more than 90 days are scheduled to have their water disconnected this week.

The Water Department, which is trying to collect $100,000 in overdue water bills, said those facing shut-offs are the biggest offenders. One resident owes the department $1,700.

Water Supt. Ben Curley reported that workers have already marked homes (with blue circles) that are scheduled for disconnection. The hardest part, he said, is locating the shut-off because many are under driveways, sidewalks and grass.

It takes about five minutes to disconnect or connect the water, said Curley. The plan is to shut off water between 3 p.m. and 9 a.m., when "people feel it the most," said Curley.

Residents scheduled for water disconnection were mailed three notices and most have also received a courtesy phone call, said Curley. Most of this week's shut-offs are geared toward those owing for six months or longer.

Since Curley announced the department's water service disconnection program earlier this month, many people paid up. "We've had an excellent response," he said, noting that some bills were paid in full while other homeowners sent in partial payments with promises to pay weekly.

The water department has until June 30 to collect the $100,000 that is owed, Curley said.

Shut-offs will only be for a 24-hour period since state law empowers the board of health to insist that water be available to a household.

If the board of health rules that an unsanitary or health hazardous situation has been created, then the water must be turned on.

Curley described the one-day water shut-off as a "warning type situation."

Last year the department ended the fiscal year with a $60,000 deficit. The deficits are created by slow and non-payment of water bills.

"We have to have the money to operate the department," said Curley. "We don't use town tax money. The water revenue is our only means of operation."

The water commissioners placed an interest charge on late-paid bills last year and began the system of shutting off water to places with large bills.

ing the gypsy moths, said Ainslie. One thing is certain, he added, "There will be a lot more people resting easier." He said people will be better informed for a vote on this issue next year.

Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said the one week postponement of the spraying is to the town's advantage since the oak tree leaves hadn't fully developed.

Clark said B.t. is a water-based product which is heavier than Sevin and will not drift as much. Ainslie said the Hanson company won't spray if the winds are stronger than six miles per hour.

The main sections of town which will be sprayed are: Beechwood area, the center, West Corner, Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue, Atlantic Avenue, Cedar Street, Sohier Street, Pond Street, and the Veteran's Hill area.

Billie Berents, a member of the citizens' group opposed to Sevin, said she was very surprised at the outcome of last Tuesday's meeting.

"We were delighted and surprised. It was a very difficult decision for the selectmen and I'm sure there will be some repercussions," she said.

Priscilla Tebbets, another strong opponent of spraying with Sevin, was also pleased with the Selectmen's vote.

"I feel grateful to the selectmen. It was just a great surprise when they decided to use dipel instead of Sevin," she said.

Historical Society opens three museums in the Village

The Cohasset Historical Society announces the opening of its three museum buildings at Cohasset Center for the summer season.

Opening date will be Tuesday, June 15, and the Center Museums will remain open on a regular schedule through September.

The Society's Maritime Museum, the Capt. John Wilson (Historical) House and the Independence Gown Museum are to be open six days a week; Tuesdays through Sundays, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. During these hours the Curator and Volunteer guides will be in attendance to assist visitors and to give information talks relating to the fascinating displays of historical materials contained in the Museum's collections.

The cost will be 75 cents per person for each building, or $1.50 for all three museums. Children under 12 admitted for 25 cents per building or $1 for all three museums. A special rate for pre-scheduled group tours is $1 per person.

To arrange a group tour, call Mrs. Parker at 383-0773 or the Society's headquarters house at 383-6930.

Each of the three Center Museums of the Society contains exhibits and collections uniquely portraying different aspects of early Cohasset and New England History. For much of its history, the town of Cohasset was a fishing village.

The Maritime Museum, located on Elm St. at Cohasset Center, contains artifacts, paintings and photographs, models of sailing vessels, and other memorabilia of the town's "Age of Sail" (1750 to 1895). Also housed within the building is a fascinating collection of materials of general historical interest collected from old Cohasset homes and businesses.

Housewright's tools, cordwainer's equipment, memorabilia from the town's early schools, documents, prints and pictures of an early New England village are featured.

The Captain Wilson (Historical) House is furnished with a collection of antique furniture, cookware and household equipment to recreate an early 19 century family dwelling. Most of the items found in the Wilson House were donated by local residents, and many come from the oldest houses in the town.

Situated adjacent to the Maritime Museum on Elm St., The Wilson House offers a unique look into the early years of New England living. Nearby on South Main St. at Cohasset Center is the "Independence" Gown Museum. Here one may see on display a fascinating collection of gowns and costumes dating from the early 19th to the early 20the centuries. A Bridal Room and Children's Room are featured in this old building which originally was the town's first Fire Station.

Be sure to visit the Cohasset Historical Society's museums at Cohasset Center this summer. These historic old buildings annually attract visitors from many parts of the country and from other parts of the world who wish to see the Historical Society's collections of early Americana. A visit will be an experience not easily forgotten.

Library to close Sundays for summer

New summer hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library will take effect Sunday, May 30, and continue through Labor Day.

Under the new schedule, the library will be closed all day Sunday and Wednesday and remain open Monday and Tuesday from 9 to 9, Thursday and Friday from 9 to 6 and Saturday from 9 to 5.

The library is presently open Sunday from 2 to 5, but Director Richard hayes said Sunday use drops off considerably after school closes for the summer.

The new hours were approved at a recent meeting of the library trustees.

RETURN BOX

In other business, trustees authorized Director Hayes to get a price on an outdoor book-return box — something that is deemed more necessary with the reduction of library hours. The return box, said Hayes, is a customed designed specialty item and could cost about $900.

LIBRARY FINES

Hayes reported that library fine money has increased substantially since fines were raised from two to five cents a day in January. The two-cents-a-day fine had been in effect since 1894.

The new five-cents-a-day fine carries a maximum cap of $5 for adults and $3 for children and has generally been accepted with good grace, said Hayes.

With the new fines in place, library patrons are paying more attention to due dates which is okay with Hayes, "We would much rather have the books than the money," he said.

"Plans were drawn for the erection of a permanent theater building on Sohier Street but the idea of a tent theater, which was enjoying popularity in other sections of the country, seemed attractive and the Circus opened its first season in 1951."

Today it is one of a very few summer theaters still operating under canvas. Under the direction of Producer Ronald Rawson it is considered the most successful in the country."

around town

Cohasset participants at Law Day Ceremonies at the Norfolk Superior Court last month were Michael Nedrow, a student at CHS, and Atty. Deidre Kulevich of Thaxter, Beckwith and Henderson.

Standing in for Laura Doherty, Around Town Columnist and poetess, are News Anchor Co-hostesses Karin Bartow and Tanna Kasperowicz with "The Nice News."

☐Here now, the news! Blip. Blip. Blip. Blip. Blip. Blip.

☐Laura Doherty fled town the middle of last week to escape the threatened Sevin chemical spraying. She left her family behind. Selectmen's last minute meeting on the same and reversal of that action made Laura's quick exit unnecessary. How many families were warned in time — we will probably never know.

☐And you were worried about the salt content in your drinking water! (See News Story, Page 1.) A quick survey this week of residents showed that more and more of them are buying canned juices and not mixing very much of anything other than cement with Cohasset water. Beer is selling well everywhere.

☐Mark June 10th and 11th on your calendar. On those dates, 6 year-old Karla Kennedy makes her debut as the "Mother Hen" in the Hingham Children's Ballet Workshop — Crimson Colt Ballet. She shares the stage with several other children/animals and we are told she is superb in her yellow chicken costume. In the meantime, third grader Chip Kennedy has been taking private swimming lessons all winter long and can now swim up to 23 laps at a time...looks like he'll be assured a berth on the Cohasset Swim Team this year. Both Kennedy children have very active parents. John is chief coach of the Farm Team League this year, while Mary Kennedy and her Scituate partner, (Joan Mohorvic) placed second in the Swittle II Tennis Division of the South Shore Indoor Tennis League. Sandra Harbley, also of Cohasset, helped that Swittle II second place to happen.

☐Just a quickie news note here... your 1981 beach and dump stickers are good thru June 31st. If yours fell off since last year's pasting (and the glue is certainly not No. 1 glue), you can get a replacement free of charge from the police department.

☐Ran into Jane and Andrew Hamilton, age 2, at the Log and Line last week. Andrew was breakfasting on a blueberry muffin...his mouth was too full to tell about his January trip to Bush Gardens, Fla., with his mother, grandparents and sister. But Jane said they all had a wonderful time.

☐Over school vacation Richard and Marsha Silvia and family took on Disneyworld and loved every minute of it. Richie said he's sincerely considering going back for a second honeymoon. "We enjoyed it — but we would have been much happier if we had left a snowstorm behind," Rich said. He has also resolved to refrain from ever again referring to something of inferior or not up to snuff as being "Mickey Mouse." "After seeing Disneyworld, I can't imagine how the two could be equated," Rich said.

☐In Joseph Osgood School news, Tony Morgan, following in the footsteps of his theatrical father, Bill Morgan, will or already has placed the part of "Pinky Red" in third grade. The play regards the "Trials and Tribulations of Tilly Tooth." Tony said, "She gets all cleaned up nice."

☐Tony's father, William (Bill) Morgan, announced the horse show for the Cohasset 4-H show this past weekend. On Memorial Day weekend he will announce the Marshfield Horse Show at the Marshfield Fair Grounds.

☐Kathy Morgan announced this week she is the proud owner of a new horse called Patrick, who replaces Captain, who joined the State Police Force rather quickly after he threw Kathy in Whitney Woods a couple of years ago. If you remember, that story ended not happily with two stretcher carriers (out of towners) dropping Kathy on her crushed stone driveway. Captain now patrols Walden Pond.

☐Bet you were just saying last week..."What ever happened to Jenny Grisdale?" Since March of this year Jenny has been working for General Telenet (G.T.E.) in Burlington. She loves her job as a technical writer and is moving to Winchester to be closer to her job this week. Her address: 180 Dotham Street, Winchester, MA — 01890. The horse stays. Jenny's mother said Jenny recently honored her with a badge — cross shovels, for her abilities in shoveling...something which she expects to be doing more and more of now that Jenny is moving to Winchester. "I will be childless for the first time in 30 years," Mrs. Grisdale said. But she will not be horseless.

☐Robert Tis (soon to be matriculated) is undefeated on the tennis team and is presently fishing for pollack down at the harbor. Does the Tis family eat pollock? "Are you kidding?" Mrs. Tis said. What does he do with his catch? "He certainly doesn't bring it home."

☐Rumor is Stop & Shop is having one heck of a time keeping Stouffer Le Cuisine foods in stock (the dinners comprised of under 300 calories). Apparently some of the Log & Line crowd is attempting to make up for all those home-made Log muffins they consumed all winter long. "It's working," one of the regulars said.

☐Frank and Kay England recently helped Frank's mother celebrate her 100th birthday in St. Petersberg, Fla. After which Kay, who is becoming quite a traveler, visited her daughter and son-in-law, Debbie and Glen Zeipnick and Andrea, her one-year-old grandchild. At six months Andrea only had eyes for Debbie and Glen, but at one year she now trusts people and is a real delight. Kay hated to leave.

☐Marley Rabstejnek, a junior at Cohasset High School, recently won the Jr. Training Level Division of the University of New Hampshire Spring Horse Trials. She will compete this Memorial Day in the All New England Training Level Championship.

Marley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rabstejnek, has been competing in horse shows for the past four years and has a roomful of ribbons to show for her efforts. Her horse is Artic Fox — and Marley gives him shared credit for their achievements together. Good show, Marley!

☐And more news from other parts of town...blip.

☐The skippers, crew, Bassing Beach burn-outs and other moral supporters of the Flying Scott Fleet launched their '82 racing season last weekend with a pot-luck supper at the Horn's domicile. Exercises in appropriate tack party libation were practiced while participants dined on an exquisite array of foods — from "cute" egg rolls to "hearty" casseroles, and those never tasted (the hors d'oeuvres were great, Regina!)

Favorite sailing stories were resurrected; Chet Ellis unveiled a new, anti-preppie look; Peter Conway unveiled his new svelte self; and Mrs. Horn (that's Dickie's Mom) was the life of the party.

☐They say virtue is its own reward, but that's an elusive prize for an eight year old who finds and then forfeits six dollars in cold cash. Topher Henderson found Heather Ludlow's hard-earned babysitting money (just cashed at the News Company) in the parking lot and made her day by turning it in just as Heather came looking for it. She did give Topher a 25 cent reward and, of course, he's got all that virtue.

Our cakes graduate with honors.

Make your graduation gift the frosting on the cake. With a special ice cream and layer cake from Baskin-Robbins.

You can choose your favorite message, frostings and 31 flavors, too. But call early. We get a real procession of orders this time of year.

Pesky seagulls foul Lily Pond...

boundary by five feet. The correction was made by Barry Brothers on the spot, she said.

An environmental engineer reported that the dump was operating in compliance with state law. Eliopoulos reinspected the dump following the intial investigation May 3. "We're certainly aware of the problem," said Eliopoulos. "We're not tucking it under the rug. We don't want to wait until it's a serious problem."

If residents have noticed the increase in seagulls they should contact the health agent. "The more information we get, the more we are in a position to do something about it. We want people to tell us if there are problems in their neighborhoods," said Eliopoulos.

"It's not an easy problem to deal with. I know that our drinking water seems to be contaminated," she said.

THAXTER OPINION

In a letter dated May 21, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter reported that the board of health has the authority to revoke or suspend any garbage permit after public hearing is held.

Curley submitted a report to the board of health this week which shows a substantial increase in waste bacteria (chloroform) at Lily Pond, during the past four months.

On January 10 a sampling of pond water had a chloroform count of six. A sampling on Friday was TNC (too numerous to count.)

Bliss said extra chlorine is needed to combat the increased chloroform count. Curley said, chlorine is used to kill the bacteria and it's possible that the increase in bacteria might exhaust the chemical budget sometime in the future. "We're just concerned at this time, because eventually, this situation could ruin the entire water supply," Curley said.

On Monday the board of health prepared a letter for delivery to Barry Brothers of the Cohasset Heights Landfill. The board wants to meet with Barry Brothers to discuss the following: installation of a scale, seagulls, logging procedure, and calculation formulas for intake of trash.

Health Board member Dr. Michael Bliss said it would be difficult to prove if the dump directly caused an increase in seagulls droppings at Lily Pond.

Health Board Chairman Barbara Kern said that seagull action is much worse at the Barry Brothers landfill than at the town dump. Eliopoulos said, "As soon as the packer arives, the gulls start to swarm."

Eliopoulos has not received any official advice on the matter from the state. She has repeatedly sought information from the DEQE during the past two weeks. The state says the seagulls are not an unusual problem and that there isn't an easy solution.

"I honestly think we can't hope for much information from them (DEQE). They don't have it," said Eliopoulos.

Health Board tables action on Thayer request

The Board of Health this week tabled action on a variance sought by Frank Frederick Thayer for his cluster development at 100 Pond Street.

A decision on the request is expected to be announced at the board's next meeting June 13.

Thayer is asking that the only two percolation tests be required for the reserve area of the development's sewage treatment facility, instead of three that have been required in this case.

A third percolation test was attempted at the reserve area on May 3 and was halted in the presence of Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos, a health board member and a DEQE official. In order to complete testing, the area would have to be "de-watered."

A de-watering attempt would include considerable digging of that reserve area where two tests were already completed. "I'm afraid it would harm the area," said Thayer.

To date, test results show that sand and gravel on the site is highly permeable. In addition to the two percolation tests, some 10 observation holes were dug.

Eliopoulos told the board and abutters that testing for the reserve area was done "above and beyond what the state requires."

At the board's meeting Monday night, abutters voted 4-3 in favor of granting the variance. One abutter abstained from the vote.

The health board plans to discuss the matter with Water Commissioner William Montuori before a vote is taken.

When it came night, the white waves paced to and fro in the moonlight, and the wind brought the sound of the great sea's voice to the men on shore, and they felt that they could then be interpreters.

Good switch

The most important public office in the land is that of citizen, and we are grateful to these many citizens of Cohasset who made themselves quite unpleasant until a majority of Selectmen reversed themselves and voted to treat this year's infestation of gypsy moths with Dipel instead of Sevin.

As we argued two weeks ago, the pesticide Sevin is an environmental pig in a poke. Our grandchildren may decide that the stuff is harmless, but had it been used and were it to cause birth defects as some experts fear, some of our grandchildren might be rendered incapable of deciding anything.

As it is the town has decided to err on the side of caution. For that we are most thankful, and thankful to Selectmen McArthur and Ainslie as well as to our "unpleasant" citizenry.

The Selectmen had long since identified themselves with the sprying Sevin, and reversing themselves at the last minute cannot have been easy. Some segments of the community surely aren't pleased.

So let it be known — and remembered the next time Mrs. McArthur and Mr. Ainslie offend our sensibilities — that the Mariner is very pleased. The above named have handled an important, contentious issue in a manner that deserves the name public service.

What purpose gypsy moths

If I had created the Earth I would have fashioned gypsy moth caterpillars whose favorite leaf for dining was poison ivy and who in their turn were a most delicious treat for robins, bluebirds and chickadees.

To what purpose has God made these miserable little creatures who devour our trees, drop unceremoniously onto our picnic tables and panic our citizens into squandering $50,000 to spray with chemicals of doubtful long range effectiveness and some potential risk?

Perhaps the moths are here to remind us to read our Warrant for Town Meeting more carefully and to be there when the votes are counted.

If locusts and frogs served to warn the ancient Pharaoh to free the Hebrew people, then why not gypsy moth caterpillars to summon us to pay more attention to town affairs if we would remain free.

Musings...

☐Beware of young doctors and old barbers.

☐One man sees a light in a window and thinks, "A mother is praying for the safe return of her son." Another man sees a light and thinks, "There must be some hanky panky going on up there." The latter is a censor.

☐1816 was the year in which there was no summer. On June 6, ten inches of snow fell on parts of New England.

☐Charts answer the question "how much?" maps answer the question "where," and diagrams answer the question "how."

And just who are you?

By Claire McDonough

For more years (wild horses couldn't drag it out) than I will admit I've been suffering an identity crisis.

Oh, I don't mean me. Most of the time I'm fairly certain who I am. It's your name that's giving me trouble.

It isn't too bad at home. By now my kids are accustomed to being called by a sibling's name, and they stand there patiently shifting from one foot to the other while I sort things out. Sometimes I don't even have to do that. No one is surprised if I yell, "Jay...Kevin...whoever you are, STOP THAT!"

And I don't really want to know whether it's Jay, Kevin, or someone else who is (a) taking off with the last can of water-packed tuna; (b) bouncing a ball against the house; (c) making the garage door go up and down or (d) washing the dog with my $5.98 shampoo. I just want it to stop.

My love life doesn't get fouled up, either. I call all my men "Dragon." (Are you paying attention, honey?)

When it comes to friends and acquaintances, though, I'm in deep trouble. Just take my dear friend and neighbor, Pat Goss, with whom I have shared secrets and recipes and whom I know like the sister I never had and let me meet her somewhere out of context and I'm sunk. I will be certain that I know her, I will wave enthusiastically and smile brightly, and then I won't have the foggiest idea what to say next.

Or take the woman who told everyone I have so many wrinkles I have to screw on my hat. I ran into her at Angelo's last week. I not only did the enthusiastic wave and bright smile routine, I invited her over for coffee and offered to mind her kids while she and her husband went to Europe before I remembered she was the one I wasn't speaking to.

Sometimes I can fake it. If I engage a person in dialogue long enough, the chances are pretty good that he or she will drop a clue, a conversational Rosetta stone, if you will, that I can pounce on and come up with a name. Unfortunately, it only works if the other party knows my name and isn't also faking.

I tried it in the State House last week. I knew the man's face as well as the one I see in the mirror daily.

"Hi!" I carolled (enthusiastic wave, bright smile.) "Haven't seen you in ages."

"It's been a while," he agreed. (The voice was familiar. I even recognized his word pattern. Why couldn't I think of his name?) "Are you still at the same job?"

"Uh, huh. You?"

"Oh yes. Still in the salt mines. How's everyone?"

"Fine." My bright smile was becoming strained.

"Remember me to the gang."

"I will," he assured me. "Gotta run."

"Quick,Libby,"I grabbed a passing co-worker. "That man in the gray suit and blue shirt. With the red tie. What is his name?"

Libby peered over my shoulder. "You don't mean Tom Ellis, do you?"

I should have just called him Dragon.

Rich dog, poor dog

Some dogs have that pampered look, some dogs don't. Witness these two. The toy poodle sits comfortably in his master's car, while the lab hunts for snacks in a Sandy Beach trash can. Neither cared to be identified.

Murray elected v.p. of legislators association

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has become the first woman to be elected first vice president of the Massachusetts Legislators Association.

Her election came at the association's 40th annual meeting on May 18.

Rep. Murray has been active in the association since her first legislative year on the Hill in 1976. Her participation in attaining legislative action plus her interaction with all of her colleagues has been recognized by these legislators. Installation of the association officers took place in the House Chamber where the new officers were sworn in by the Governor.

The association was formed in 1946. The purpose as part of its preamble states: Be it known to all that we who have been fortunate enough to have the distinctive privilege of being members of the greatest deliberative body in this nation, the Mass. Legislature cherish dearly the friendships we have made while in that service, and for the purpose of perpetuating these friendships and the spirit of fraternalism with which all of us hve been endowed, we hereby associate ourselves into a group the aims of which shall be social, fraternal, and benevolent.

Past or present members of the Massachusetts Senate or House of Representatives are eligible to be members of the Massachusetts Legislators Association.

I remember one Saturday morning . . .

(The world through the eyes of a three year old girl)

By Paul Steven Stone

Our house was on a street that dead-ended up against the marsh. The street was a single block long with ranch houses and capes spaced evenly on both sides. Ours was a two-story gray cape with white shutters that sorely needed a fresh coat of paint.

I remember one Saturday morning when my father took my sister and I on a cruise down to the turn-around circle at the end of the road; with me pedaling my tricycle up front and Kristin in the rear, more walking than riding a cracked and misshappen plastic tricycle a neighbor's boy had abandoned when his legs reached two-wheeler length.

I'd always enjoyed throwing stones at the tidal estuary that snaked through the tall marsh grass. I still threw my rocks, of course, and still failed to reach the water, but I was now at an age where the power of speech seemed like a muscle that needed constant exercise, so the focus of the activity had changed.

"See, my shadow's bigger than yours," I delightedly boasted to my father, making sure to maintain the distance that maintained my superiority. When my father moved his shadow to overtake mine, I squealed in a moment's panic, then ran off to reassert my bigness.

At three and a half, bigness loomed serious and important in my life. There is a gear in the mentalworks of a child at that age that keeps the whole machine on alert for proof of impending adulthood. Usually the proof appears in the form of contrasts. My younger sister Kristin was for me a convenient storehouse of such evidence.

"Kristin can't ride my bike because her feet aren't big enough," I had minutes before explained as I pedaled down the road. "She's too little."

In my eyes, Kristin had been stricken with terminal littleness. She was too little to play with scissors, too little to stay up late, too little to wear underpants... simply, too little.

This littleness was having its effect on Kristin who had lately come to recognize and rail against the limits which, like the bars on her crib, kept her separate and distinct from a world she wanted to reach.

Little operations that had once seemed simple became solid production numbers in the life of our family. In changing Kristin's diapers, her feet would start flailing about angrily as she cried, in obvious torment, "Beebee, beebee!" What she wanted, of course, was to sit diaperless on the toilet like me, her older sister, and do peepee. Not that she often had a deposit to make as she sat balanced over the void with only my mother or father's two hands between her and the ignomy of a sudden descent. But occasionally some sucess would trickle out and, like a gambler who feeds on the one hand out of ten that he wins, she would toddle away from the game more committed to it than ever.

Just as Kristin had become the yardstick by which I measured my escape from childhood, I had become for Kristin the standard by which she measured her entrapment. If I climbed onto the couch with my bear, she would start crying "Bear, bear," beseechingly until someone went upstairs and retrieved her bear from the crib. If I attempted one of my feeble cartwheels, she would unblinkingly throw her body onto the floor in a movement that aped mine like a reflection distorted in a funhouse mirror.

Even now, as I tossed stones towards the still unreachable creek, she was off gathering stones to join me.

For the moment, my father gave each of us our rein. He was standing on the apron of grass that bordered the slope of the wide marsh. I noticed him, and looked to see what was holding his attention so restfully.

There were two boys playing on the marsh; distant tiny figures seen in motion against the green and gold of the muted landscape. Occasionally, they stopped and conferred; to initiate new plans, I guess, to agree on new games. Their black dog who was traveling the marsh in circles of his own design returned to them for these conferences like a wagon train scout eager for campfire gossip.

"Put that back," I heard my father sternly order. He was peering down darkly at Kristin who was walking away from a nearby driveway with two tiny handfuls of gravel. My father's hand was extended, his finger pointing at the offending stones in my little sister's grasp.

Kristin returned my father's dark look with a scowl he could never hope to match. Dropping onto her backside as if she'd been yanked off her feet, she flung the gravel aside with contempt and started to cry. Then she threw herself onto her back, kicking in despair and anger at the driveway which provided the nearest substitute for my father.

"She's being bad," I ventured, comfortably superior in my moment of big girl objectivity.

"Not bad," my father said. "She's just got to learn, that's all. She's still a baby."

"Yeah, well I wouldn't do that," I said hurriedly, searching for words that would allow me to cling to my point of view. "Maybe when I was little, but not now."

My father walked over to Kristin, who was now banging her head against the rough stones of the driveway, and he smiled down, clearly amused by the passion such a small drama could inspire. He hadn't made the connection between my stone throwing and Kristin's need for the gravel, so he couldn't know that he had just reinforced for Kristin her frustration at being so little.

"What's the problem?" he asked, looking down at my sister. "Life proving too cruel for you?"

He probed her stomach lightly with the toe of his sneaker, and watched as Kristin's anger turned from a diffuse explosion into a studied exercise in revenge.

"Ow, ow, ow!" he cried for effect as Kristin reached under his pants leg and pinched the bare skin. My sister laughed once in triumph, then struggled to increase her hold; a look of fierce determination now replacing her anguish.

"Ow, ow, ow," he continued to cry in mock pain, now exerting a tickling pressure with his toe that dissolved the grimace on Kristin's dark face into a spray of explosive laughter. Now the hunter became the hunted, and my sister struggled to break free of the toe, curling up and turning over, shouting, "no," whenever the word could wrestle free from the grip of her laughter.

My father played this game long enough to insure that the darkness had truly passed, then stepped aside and let Kristin reassemble herself in that awkward way infants have of picking themselves up off the ground.

He walked back to me just quickly enough to keep out of Kristin's reach, and once beside me turned and picked up his pursuer in his arms.

"Birds," he told her, pointing to the gulls that were flying in from one ofthe two cliffs that flanked the beach on the other side of the marsh.

"Booda," Kristin responded, pointing with a smile.

"More booda," he pointed.

A white egret, startled from his perch by the inquisitive black dog, rose up from the tall grass in a moment of panic, then settled into a sleek portrait of flight heading towards the harbor that lay not half a mile distant beyond the flat expanse of widening marsh.

I held up a small stone for my father's inspection.

"Is God in this rock?" I asked.

"Sure is," my father answered. "God's in everything."

"God's everywhere?"

"Uh-huh!"

"In my shoe?"

"Yes, as long as He doesn't mind the smell."

"In Kristin?"

My father smiled.

"Even in Kristin, God help Him."

"But we can't see him?" I asked, turning a fact I'd often been given into a question.

This concern about God had only recently bobbed to the surface of my consciousness. Up until a few weeks ago, I had no trouble accepting the confusing, often paradoxical, information about God that I'd been given. My mind ordinarily had no difficulty stuffing conflicting facts about a single subject into separate sections of the brain. But now my mind must have moved into a new phase of operation, for the segregated compartments no longer seemed leakproof, and I found myself often sorting through a tangle of facts that painted a picture of a God who hid behind trees and who was the trees; who felt sorry for me when I hurt myself, but caused me to hurt myself so I'd know the meaning of pain. He was a God who looked like my father, but couldn't be seen; a God who stayed in my room at night, but never answered any of my questions; a God who made sure we had plenty to eat, but who let children in other places go hungry. If God was everywhere, as my parents kept telling me, then why, I kept wondering, couldn't I see him?

One night last week, I had carried my bear down to our family room and broke in upon my parents, crying, "God isn't in my room. I can't see him." For weeks, maybe months, they had been soothing my fears of being alone with the gentle assurance, "You're never alone. God is always with you." On that night, I had somehow broken the connection with whatever organ of a child's mind can accept a parent's word as truth, and it had cast me adrift in a new and frightening world.

On that night, my parents explained God to me the way my father would again on that morning by the marsh.

"You can't see God in things because God is everything. The whole world is God; you, me, the ground, the birds. It's like one of your puzzles; each piece looks difference, but they're all part of the same thing."

"But I can see the pieces."

"And you can see me, can't you?"

"But you're my Daddy."

"That's true; but I'm also God. You just can't see that so easily. It's hard to find God when you look on the outside of things. He's like the jelly filling in a doughnut. You can only find him when you look inside. In a way, He hides. He's hiding in me, He's hiding in you."

"But not in Kristin. She's too little."

"In everything."

"Is He hiding in the water?"

"Sure," my father said without doubt.

Kristin pointed to the half-filled estuary and cried proudly, "Wadee."

"I can see Him in the water," I said, first looking down then turning my head up in a sly manner. "Can you?"

I think he wanted to answer yes, but that wasn't my father's way.

"Not really," he said instead. "I just know He's there."

His eyes fell again on the two boys who were now running towards the houses on the beach across the way. He stood there a while watching them, at times breaking his trend of thought to point things out to Kristin who for once seemed content to just sit in his arms. I stepped down the embankment and searched for stones to throw, examining whatever curiosities I came across, the residue left like a bathtub ring on the rim of the marsh by flood tides.

Minutes later, my father called to me.

"Come on, Katie. Let's go back and see what Mom's up to."

"No!" Kristin protested, the devil shining in her eyes as she tried to pinch my father's face.

I said, "Okay," and looked around for a place to leave the stone I'd been holding in my hand. There was a small evergreen that had been planted on the rise as a windbreaker, but which appeared to be dying. Its thin foliage was golden brown and dry; perhaps it was dead already, I didn't know. I scrambled up the bank, carefully placed the stone on the ground next to its trunk, then ran back to my waiting tricycle.

I suppose even then I knew that it wasn't necessary to hold on tightly to God. Even if I couldn't see Him in things, or anywhere else, I knew I'd always have my father to explain his presence. And besides, I'd certainly know where to find the stone again if I needed it.

Spring concert was impressive

The Deer Hill School's spring concert was impressive on several counts. Not only were the vocal and instumental performances of the students sophisticated and well executed, but the number of participants involved in the music made up over half the student body.

There were 78 members of the advanced band (5th and 6th graders); 43 members of the junior band (4th and 5th grade students, and first year band members) and approximately 35 to 40 advanced band members who also play in the jazz band.

There were also 60 members in the chorus.

The chorale director was John MacInnis, and Kathryn Fox directed the bands. Jean Birmann was the accompanist for the chorus. Barbara Conte made attractive paper corsages for all participants.

The Two Collection will be presented for final bid during the Auction Sunday, June 6. Shown with her donation is photographer Gail Bryan of Cohasset.

The Martin's call her "Mitsy," but her real name is "Tiger." And, setting a new precedent, this custody battle was decided without lawyers and a court scene. "She" is a Tabby that began hanging around the Martin's house on N. Main Street last March. A knowledgeable babysitter informed them that the visitor was in a motherly way and as her time drew near, "Mitsy" moved into their barn (Jack's allergic to felines) where she soon delivered four healthy babies — one tabby, the rest bi-colored, grays and blacks with white.

After a little recuperation and between nursings, "Mitsy" strolled over to North Main and Green Streets a few weeks ago where she was promptly treed by a dog in the Shelton's yard. Mrs. Shelton helped the cat down and was relieved to identify their missing "Tiger," although she noted the cat was no longer pregnant and wore a new identification collar.

The Shelton's phoned the Martin's who were tempted to say "Call our lawyer," but reasonable minds prevailed and the Shelton's will get their cat back after the kittens are weaned, and the Martin's will get to dispose of the offspring (they're keeping one.)

It seems that "Tiger" (who actually belongs to young Brad Shelton) wasn't getting along with her son from a previous litter, and felt unsafe because of the dog who, we mentioned earlier, liked to tree the cat. Hence, her wanderings for a safer port in which to deliver the kittens. We should also mention that the Martin's made numerous attempts to locate "Mitsy's" rightful home, including inquiries at the Cox's, from whose cat she originally came! There may be one kitten available for a new home. Call the Martin's.

☐Christine Riley received her bachelor's degree Saturday from Lesley College. Christine, a graduate of Notre Dame Academy, has worked for the Cohasset Recreation Dept. for the past four years and will head the 3-5 year old program again this summer. Her parents are Ginnie and John.

☐Ginnie Riley reminds everyone that the Village Fair "Spring Day" (yes, that's the December Village Fair) will hold a giant yard sale in the parking lot of St. Anthony's Church on June 5. The purpose of the sale will be to help Fair workers 'spring' into events and workshops over the summer that will provide so many interesting and clever items for your Christmas shopping come December.

Donations from your spring cleaning (What spring cleaning?) of household goods, toys, books, linens, etc., anything reuseable and interesting, would be appreciated and may be dropped off at St. Anthony's Rectory any day. Or you may deliver them to the Common any Sunday before the sale to the "Lil Red Truck" that will be parked thereabouts from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. "Spring Day" will take place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and if it rains, everything will be held in Trueblood Hall of the First Parish Church.

☐Navy Airman Recruit Kirk Piepenbrink, son of Frederick and Shirley Piepenbrink of 150 N. Main St., has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Orlanda, Fla.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, naval history and first aid.

He joined the Navy in March 1982.

Winning Arrangement — Frederick L. Good III of Cohasset took the Air France award for first place in the gentlemen's challenge class at the New England Spring Garden and Flower Show. Presenting the award is Nancy Herbert of Air France.

'The Sorcerer' at Congregational Church

The Second Congregational Church choir will present the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Sorcerer" on June 9 and 10.

The production will take place at town hall at 7:30.

The show is packed with typical Gilbert and Sullivan humor, the setting being an English village where a magic spell goes wrong. "The Sorcerer" is particularly suited for family enjoyment and tickets will be sold at the door each evening.

Admission is $3 including refreshments which will be served in the Church next to town hall.

Members of the cast include students, plumbers, nurses, teachers, a bank president, retirees, housewives, receptionists, a fashion designer, a hematologist, a nuclear scientist and a minister.

The performance will be directed and produced by Ellen Fryling.

Local actors and actresses will star in the following roles: Sir Marmaduke Pint Pointdexter, Robert MacNeil; Alexis, Philip Von Iderstein; Doctor Daly; Bennett Driscoll; Notary, Norman Megathlin; John Wellington Wells, John Rice; Lady Sangazure, Louise Smullen; Mrs. Partlett, Louise Flint and Constance, Barbara Richardson.

Obituary

Patrick Maher

Thomas Patrick Maher, 31, of Cohasset, an assistant manger of a Quincy sound production company, died May 18 in a one-car accident in Braintree.

Police said the car skidded 200 feet before hitting a tree on Washington Street.

Born in Boston, Maher moved to Cohasset in 1959 and was a 1968 graduate of Cohasset High School.

That same year his father, Boston firefighter John T. Maher, was killed fighting a blaze.

For the last two years, he was an assistant production manager at ASA Productions of Quincy, where he worked with a number of stars and rock groups.

He was the assistant to production for the group Sha Na Na and most recently was road manager for saxophonist Clarence Clemons and the newly formed Red Bank Rockers band.

Al Dotoli, his employer and long-time friend, said that Maher worked with a number of famous entertainers including Frank Sinatra, Liza Minelli, Rod Stewart, Diana Ross, Tom Jones and the Rolling Stones.

Maher served in the Air Force during the Vietnam war, and was a member of St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

He leaves his wife, Linda (Costello) Maher; a son, Shawn Thomas Maher; his mother, Pearl (Morey) Maher of Cohasset; two brothers, Michael J. Maher of Lake Charles, La., and Air Force Sgt. John F. Maher of South Korea; two sisters, Maureen Lincoln of Houston, Texas, and Kathleen Scobie of Norfo'k, Va.; and his maternal grandmother, Mary Morey of South Boston.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Friday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Annual Kids Festival coming to Science Center

Come to the Annual Kids Festival at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell on Saturday, June 19, and meet Ruth the Elephant who will be giving rides from 12 noon to 3 p.m.

This year's Kids Festival will be another outstanding day, with such features as: Susan Tobin, the "Song Lady," who will be leading group singing accompanied by her guitar, banjo or folk toys; The Young Actors of Weston Children's Theater and their two performances of "Honor Bright"; Judy, the Clown, with her hand puppets. She will perform kids' magic, make balloon animals and lead a band the kids can participate in; and the Live Animals from Trailside.

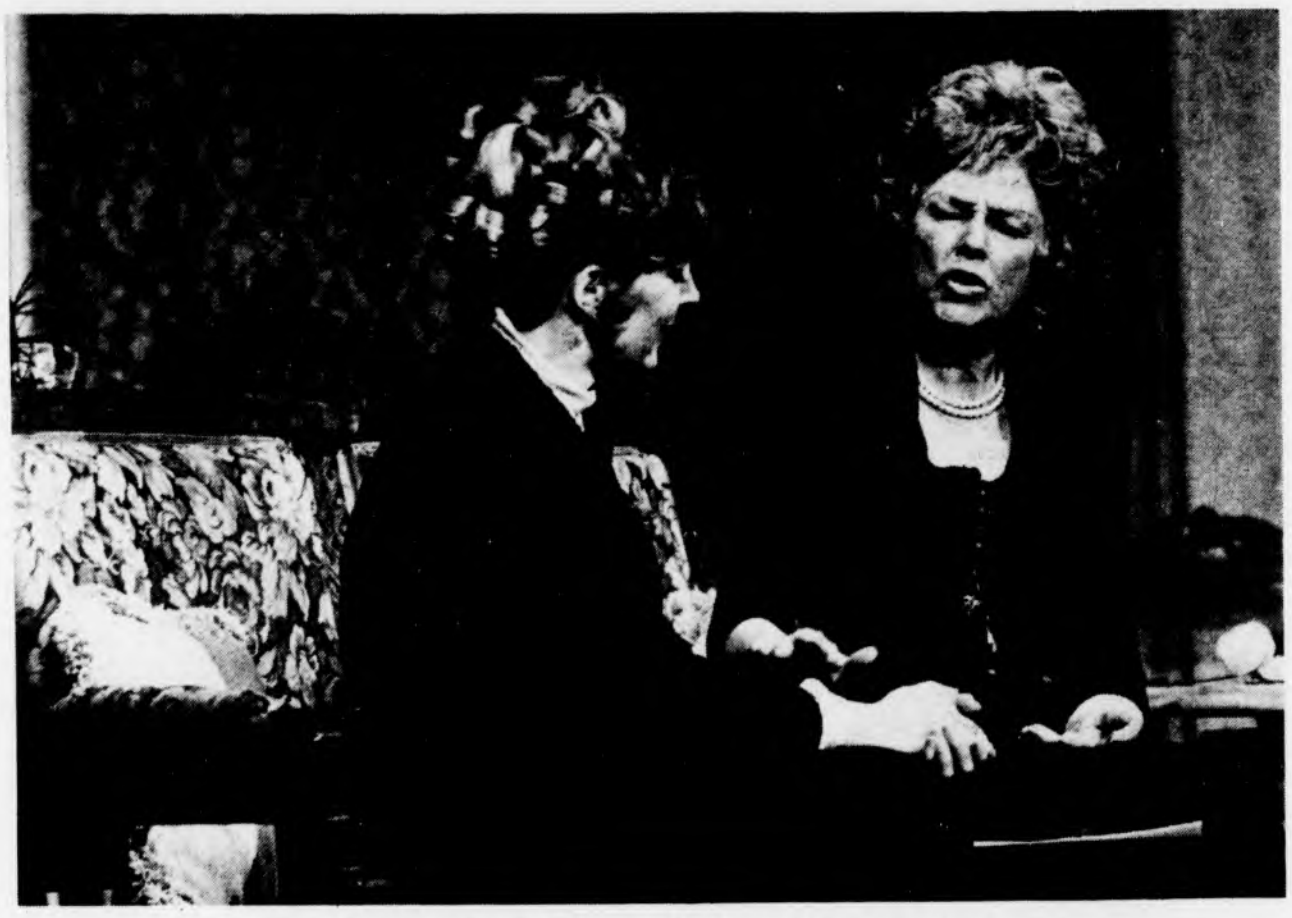
Dramatic Club's 'Strange Bedfellows' succeeds thrice

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Playwrights, actresses, actors and good directors make possible the mingling of minds beyond time and circumstance.



And with the production of "Strange Bedfellows," Director Denise Ripley gladdened our hearts, raised our spirits and, as usual, stunned us with her casting genius. In turn, the cast's credits (other performances) are always startling.

The time: Fall of 1896. The place: The home of a senator's mansion on Nob Hill, San Francisco. The movement and conflict: suffragettes...women's right to vote. Before divorce. Before women had property rights. I am not sure of the exact date negro males obtained the right to vote, but it happened a time before black and white women achieved the same. Women, black, white, red and yellow, were the last slaves on the American horizon.

Much of the script is generously laced with dollops of pseudo-sociology and soft-core sex. But these moments are fleeting...and what evolves to tie the audience to this particular play is the anatomy of a marriage(s). It is sensitive and rings true, in 1896 or 1982.

Credits here to a superlative cast: Joseph Coyle, in his first ever (and we hope not his last) dramatic role, as Senator William Cromwell. He had put his wife in a pumpkin shell and there he intended to keep her very well...until the protagonist (Julia Wood Jordan), in all her finery, arrived as the suffragette leader and his son's new bride and camped out in his very own home.

Barbara Elliott as Julia Cromwell, was a delight to watch.

Julia Wood Jordan and Barbara Elliot were two show stoppers.

From the beginning, the woman of whim and temperament and appetite is there. As the scenes progress, we watch her round out with the convictions of a woman liberated a little after her time, given the quicksilver beauty that is so much Barbara's own, and so becoming to Sarah.

Both she and Coyle get good support from an outstanding cast that includes a gaggle of youngsters — Gerald McNabb, Matthew Kuhn, Jacquelyn Fahey, all outrageous flirts, in the nicest sense of that word.

The stars — Wayne Barcomb — a favorite CDC actor; and Julia Wood Jordan, who triumphs both on stage, as an actress and in the script — when she outwits the entire male cast into supporting her suffragette movement. Her voice can boom, or be soft. I enjoyed her strengths and her tendernesses. Both she and Barcomb were July 4th sparklers!

In particular, Barcomb was able to pass onto us the knowledge he won by losing. Did he do this with so many words, expression? It happened. And it was delicious; and apparently on short notice. Barcomb stood in last minute for another performer who took ill.

Please, please, CDC, give us more of Joan Appel, soon — a distinguished performer who was simple (oftentimes simple-minded) in her humor, but always agreeable and never stgretching it or straying too far from what had to be a difficult role. She was a special divident in a bonus-packed cast. Complimenting her — Robert Parsons as Gifford Hampton.

Special praise for Delynn Gilbee, who as Mrs. Tillie Sparker of the Red Rooster, accomplishes her character with the elegance and classiness of the Mid-East's legendary Badia, "Queen of the Music Halls." She won our hearts.

David Wadsworth is always darling, on or off stage. And he performed with aplomb his role as an overly-ruled mayor...probably accomplishing the same from his very real-life associations with Cohasset Town Hall types. Nice doings, David.

Wayne Barcomb, a dramatic club favorite, was a star in "Strange Bedfellows."

Computer club does well at competition

Cohasset High School's computer science club recently placed 18th in a nationwide all-star contest.

The club was one of 25 teams that competed in the American Computer Science League All-Star Contest at Coventry High School in Rhode Island.

During five regular contests this year, the Cohasset club earned a total of 205 points out of a possible 300. Cohasset competed with some 300 other schools in the United States and Canada. Two teams from Montreal qualified. Chelmsford and Cambridge Ringe and Latin High Schools were local teams that also qualified.

The club's advisor, Dennis Walsh, said that his team was fortunate to finish 18th since they competed minus a student. Each team is allowed to have five students work collectively on eight "difficult" programs, he said. Cohasset brought only four students to compete because two students had other committments.

The team automatically lost 12 points on the section which requires students to work alone in answering four short problems.

Cohasset scored 36 points while the winning team from New Jersey finished with about 86.

Seniors Steve Bowen, Jim Sturdy, Mike Birmann and Liz Atkinson represented Cohasset at the all-star meet. Club members Mike Brady and Paul Dormitzer were regular participants for Cohasset during the year but did not attend the Rhode Island meet.

Sturdy, who plans to attend M.I.T. next fall, was one of the top 25 scorers during competition throughout the year. He recently designed a computer program for his teacher, Dennis Walsh. The program is a composite grade package which lists individual test grades, quizes, and attendance for each student.

The student grade average and class average is also provided. Walsh is currently using the program for his classes. "It's beautiful." said Walsh, who plans to use the program next year for himself and possibly other teachers.

Skipper trackmen defeat Hull

The boys' track team triumphed over Hull, 122-33 last week and lost to Middleboro, 91-31. The Skippers have a 3-6 record in the South Shore League.

MIDDLEBORO

Joel Linsley captured two events for Cohasset with first place finishes in the high and low hurdles. His times were 16.2 and 17.8, respectively, in the 120 low and high hurdles.

Mike Ellis won the mile in 4:54 and placed second in the high jump. J.T. Price sprinted to first place in the 440 with a 55.8 time. He was third in the javelin throw.

Chris Winn won the javelin event with a toss of 146-11½.

Gordon Ricketts edged past teammate Pat Leonard for second place in the 220. A Middleboro opponent won that race and Leoanrd was third. Leonard was second in the 100 sprint.

Freshman Mike DeSantis captured second place in the half-mile. Dan Bowen placed third in the low hurdles.

The Sachems toppled the Skippers by a thirty-point margin. Middleboro swept all three places in the pole vault and shot put events.

HULL

David Rice won the 100 and 200 with times of 10.7 and 24.3. He was chased by teammate Leonard, who wound up second in both races. Rice was third in the high jump.

DeSantis won the half-mile race in a time of 2:14. Ellis clinched the mile in 5:06. Chris McNabb won the two-mile in 11:21.

Linsley won the low hurdles and placed second in the high hurdles. Price was second in the 440 and placed third in the discus.

Steve Bowen dominated the field events for Cohasset with wins in the shot put and discus. He threw the discus 122-2 and the shot put, 38-3. Dan Bowen was second in the shot put and third in the javelin.

Winn thrusted the javelin 138-4 feet for first place. Mike Birmann placed for Cohasset in the hurdles and was a member of the mile relay team which defeated Hull with a 4:43.6 finish.

It was a narrow victory over Norwell in boys' tennis

The boys' tennis team beat Norwell, 3-2, last week and remained second in the South Shore League tennis standings.

Three wins in the single matches lifted the Skipper squad to victory over Norwell. Senior Mike Brady won his match in three sets, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

Shannon Collins crept past his second singles Norwell opponent with a tiebreaking win in the second set. Collins won the first set 6-1.

The first doubles team of Paul Riley and John Colocousis lost the first set, 6-4 and rebounded with a second set win, 6-2. Norwell clinched that match with a 6-4 third set triumph.

In second doubles, Cohasset's Jim Sturdy and Skip Urmson lost to Norwell, 6-2, 6-2.

Ekberg leads track squad to victory

Karen Ekberg led the way for the Skippers enroute to a 70-48 victory over Middleboro last week. She won three events for Cohasset and placed third in the discus.

Her winning time in the 100 was 11.8. She completed the 220 in 28.1. Ekberg's high jump of four feet, five inches, was also a first place finish.

Sophomore Sarah Trask won the half-mile in 2:42 and Mary Jo Mahoney followed in second place for the Skippers.

Cohasset's Amy Duncombe won the 440 with teammates Staci Stobart and Amy Donovan in second and third place.

The Skippers swept the mile event with Bridget Farren as the winner in 6:22. Sarah Seavey and Cathy Buckley placed second and third in the mile.

Peggy Maynard ran to a second place finish in the two-mile race. Lisa Gallagher was third.

Cohasset won both relay events versus the Sachems. The team of Trina Moore, Ann Marie Lagrotteria, Jennifer Douglas and Mary Ellen Maurer were victorious in the 440 relay. Their time was 57.3.

Mahoney, Trask, Vicki Spooner and Donovan raced past Middleboro in the mile relay with a 4:43 finish.

Softball team qualifies for tournament

The girls' varsity softball team climbed to 16-1 in the South Shore League with four impressive wins last week.

The Skippers beat East Bridgewater, 10-3. This was a big win for Cohasset since Easties represents the lone loss for the Skippers this season.

In other softball action, Cohasset recorded victories over Rockland, 4-1, Norwell, 32-11 and Holbrook, 28-0.

In the Norwell game, Cohasset exploded for 20 runs in four innings of play. The Norwell win was special because Cohasset qualified for the Eastern Mass. Tourney.

Cousins Sarah Froio and Karen Froio knocked in 15 runs for Cohasset. Sarah smashed a two-run homer and three other hits which added up to eight RBI's. Karen drove in seven runs with three hits including a three-run homer.

Against Rockland, pitcher Liz Russell fanned six batters and gave up six hits. Gia Barresi, Sarah Froio, Carla Lucas, Laura Hines and Stacy Thompson were standouts in Cohasset's 4-1 victory over second place Rockland.

Ready for action . . .

They're Ready — Cohasset's Karen Froio is ready for anything in the infield. So is the umpire.

Seahawks Squirts celebrate their season

Members of the Seahawks "Squirt C" Hockey team and their families had a banquet at the George Mealy American Leagion Post #118 in Cohasset last week to honor coach Frank McGovern of Scituate and his team.

The Seahawks are comprised of boys and girls from Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset and Hull. The team has had an outstanding season record of 35-1-4. The Squirt C's have won the Cohasset Invitational, the Hobomock League, AHA District 4 and the Hobomock Playoff 1st Division.

Ann and David Cuddahy and Linda Farrag organized the function. The Master of Ceremonies was Jack Shea of Scituate. (His son, Terry, is the Assisting Captain and Sean Noonan is the team Captain.)

Members of the Squirt C team are: Sean Noonan (Captian), Terry Shea (Assisting Captain), Steve Boardman, Brian Burke, Danny Cuddahy, David Farrag, Eric Fitzpatrick, Joel Hindley, Colby Mahoney, Tony Muzzi, David Orpen, Damon Parsons, David Smith and Damon Sparrow.

Shea presented Coach McGovern with our own "Stanley Cub" — an ingraved silver Revere bowl, and a Norman Rockwell plaque. Also presented was a Seahawk illustration of a "Hawk on Ice" drawn by James Fitzpatrick of Hull. All the parents donated a delightful and delicious array of hors d'oeuvres and desserts.

The banquet had highlights of films of Bobby Orr's "First Goal" and the "1972 Boston Bruins Stanley Cup Playoffs," which was obtained from the Boston Bruin Gret '8 John Bucyk.

Sixty-five attended the banquet, which was a wonderful grand finale for an outstanding year of hard work and achievements.

Men's softball league to open June 1

The Scituate Men's Softball League will begin its 1982 season Tuesday, June 1 at 6:30 p.m.

This year there will be 14 teams in two divisions. Games will be played at the following locations: Central 1, junior high school, and behind the high school in Scituate; and at Beechwood field in Cohasset. The Central 2 field will be added by June 13.

The new bond rule will be in effect this year and each team is bonded for $50. On the first forfeit $25 goes to the other team. Should a team forfeit again, they lose the other $25 and are thrown out of the league.

The three means of forfeits are wearing metal spikes once the game has started, less than eight players 15 minutes after game time, or players not on the official roster.

Everyone is welcome to come to any game. All playoff games are to be held in Scituate as arranged by league officials.

Here are the names of the teams participating this season:

DIVISION ONE

Colonial Drug, Tom Stone, 545-3008; Merrimen, Brian Mahoney, 545-1322; South Shore Engineering, Tom Dooley, 383-0958; Jamies Pub, Dan Sides, 545-4950; Knights of Columbus, John Brady, 545-0935; Alligators, Bill Marsden, 383-1811; Independents, Danny O'Connell, 545-3527.

DIVISION TWO

Red Lion Inn, Scott Dickson, 383-6926; Bread Board, Brian Bates, 545-1044; Lobster Trap, Geno Fassnacht, 545-3194; Kellerher's, Kerry Cole, 837-6747; Carchia's, Mike Carchia, 545-6838; C & C Pest Control, Jerry Curtis, 545-4734; South Shore Printers, Bucky Lynch, 545-5400.

Fire Facts

If we, as a society, are to significantly improve our fire loss record, we must elevate fire prevention and fire protection to a higher level on our list or priorities.

Here, in Massachusetts, so-called space heaters were outlawed in 1962 because of the number of deaths and losses to property.

Prior to that time, there were over 150 deaths and immeasurable dollar loss attributed to kerosene space heaters.

Since the time these heaters were banned until most recently, no loss of life has been recorded as the result of space heater use.

But, lately, these heating units have reappeared on the market and a corresponding increase in the number of deaths, injuries and property damage is being recorded.

In New Cumberland, New York, two children died in a fire when the kerosene unit they were filling burst into flame in their bedroom. In Wellesley, Mass., a portable space heater melted two five gallon plastic containers of fuel oil, releasing the contents onto the floor. The fire department arrived just in time to avert a disaster.

Chapter 148, Section 5A, Massachusetts General Laws, prohibits the use of kerosene space heaters in any building used in whole or in part for human habitation.

The fire service concurs with the intent of this law and wholeheartedly embrace it.

With the people of Massachusetts firmly behind their fire service, this law will remain intact.

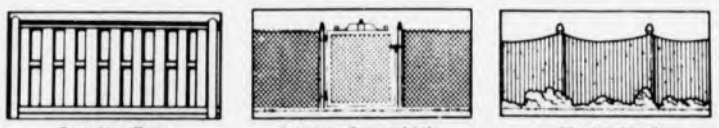
Around Town



☐Fran and Gary Drinkwater were treated to a surprise "graduation" party Saturday night, hosted by the Curran's and attended by their friends and neighbors. They certainly deserved the celebration for their hard-earned degrees. Fran received her RN from Massasoit College where she studied part-time for three years while working the 11-7 shift in the Crisis Prevention Center at South Shore Hospital. She will now be promoted to the Emergency Room. Gary has been working toward his degree, also from Massasoit, in computer sciences. A toast to the Drinkwaters!

Coast Guard report for the week

SATURDAY, MAY 15

10 a.m., Conducted open house at the station on First Cliff until 3 p.m. 14, 21 and 41 foot C.G. boats were on display and open for inspection by the public. The 44 foot motor lifeboat was docked in Plymouth harbor astern of the Mayflower II and also open for inspection to the public.

7:10 p.m., Received report from an anonymous person reporting that his vessel was sinking at the pier by the Lobster Hut. The C.G. 41 foot utility boat was in position within 9 minutes and found only the bow of a 17 footer showing. Recommended commercial salvage.

8:15 p.m., Received report from the Plymouth Harbormaster that an 18 foot inboard/outboard had engine failure off Plymouth beach. The vessel, owned by Mr. Crocker of Plymouth, with 4 people onboard, was towed by the C.G. 41455 into Plymouth Harbor.

10:03 p.m., Overheard a radio transmission on "CB" channel 9 about an outboard disabled near the mouth of the North River. Established comm. with Holy Lyn, owned by Mr. Coulstring of Abington and directed him to keep his spotlight lit, pointed straight up. The vessel, with 5 persons onboard, was towed by the C.G. 41 foot utility boat to the vicinity of Mary's Landing.

The All Hunter Horse Show

No Go — Mistala didn't care to make this jump at Sunday's 4-H horse show and for Kerry McGovern that meant an unceremonious dismount.

Six year-old Nicole Haefner plays with a horse of a different color and shape at the horse show.

Contestants await their turn at the Bare Cove Stables.

Jennifer Powers applies the brush to "Amigo" before the show began.

Six CHS students share $9,000 in Rotary scholarships

The Rotary Club of Cohasset awarded scholarships to six high school seniors on Monday. Among 30 applicants, the six seniors were selected on the basis of class rank and financial need.

This year the Rotarians donated a total of $9,000 in scholarships. Last year the Club gave out four scholarships totaling $7,000.

Recipients of this year's scholarships are: Christine Birmann, who plans to attend Tufts University; Tom Ryan, bound for the University of Massachusetts; David Sargent, Mass. Maritime Academy; Mary Jo Mahoney, University of Maine at Orono; Bridget Farren, Stonehill College; and Angela O'Brien who is going to Boston College.

O'Brien was awarded the Rotary Club's first annual South Shore Playhouse Association Inc. (Music Circus) scholarship.

Students and their families attended a dinner sponsored by the Rotary Club at their Elm St. hall, Monday night. Rotarian officers updated the 60 dinner guests on the various community projects which are undertaken annually by the club.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the club was a small group(34), yet an "energetic" one. Crowell said the club's contributions service the entire community and not just the schools.

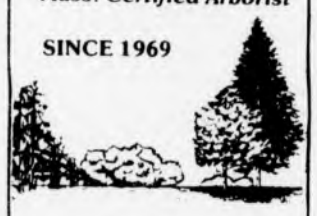
During the past year the Rotary Club has helped to finance for the following projects: crime prevention, victim advocate, special olympics, supplying white barrels for the beach, senior shuttle bus, boy scouts, dinner for elderly housing residents, school sports banquets and trophies.

The two chief fundraising events for the club are the road race and the telephone directory. The 1982 edition of the directory is expected to be mailed to every resident and business in the town on Friday.

The Rotary club has awarded more than $100,000 in scholarships since 1947. Rotary Club president Fred Johansen said, "Our club's feeling then, and still is now, that no one should be denied an education because of financial need."

Among the 34 club members, ages range from 22 to 79. The club meets weekly on Monday nights.

"Our ears are open for any just cause," said Johansen, "But our pocketbooks might not always be full...We are consistently asked and we are constantly giving and searching for more ways to raise money."



An envelope, for donations, will be supplied with the telephone directories which will soon be mailed. Those $3 and $4 donations are for a worthwhile cause said Johansen, "We think that we spend it wisely and in the right direction."

One of the most useful functions performed by an interior designer is to edit your possessions without prejudice. In most cases, furnishings have been selected because you "love" them. However, this emotional attachment may have been made without much thought as to whether or not they compliment each other. An interior designer applies an eye to your furnishings in an effort to achieve unity. Each piece of furniture should have some appropriate relationship to one another and everything else within the space. The space, in turn, should join others in a smooth transition. Finally, an element of surprise may be introduced without looking amateurishly incongruous.

The total look of a room, to a great extent results from some of the "tricks" interior designers know. Whether you want window treatments, hardware, glass and screen repairs, paints, wallpaper, stains, tools, garden supplies, etc., BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE is here at 763 Country Way in N. Scituate for you. We also offer you expert advice, know-how and assistance. Call 545-3624 or visit Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5. We look forward to seeing you and sharing our knowledge and experience with you. We also wish you all a safe and happy Memorial Day weekend and ask you drive carefully.

Insurance panel considers health plans

The town's insurance advisory committee is considering several health maintenance organizations for town employees health coverage because of a 50 percent rate hike by Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

The town has contracted with Blue Cross-Blue Shield for the past 22 years. But health rates for an employee under Blue Cross-Blue Shield are scheduled to increase from $52.70 per month to $85.66 in July. Family coverage costs will rise from $151.20 to $231 per month.

George McCullough of the insurance advisory committee attributed the increase to the town's high claim experience. According to a district representative from Blue Cross-Blue Shield, Cohasset will have the highest rate charge in the area with Hull's rates almost as high. Most cities and towns range between $160 to $190 per month for the family coverage.

The health maintenance organization's (HMO) basically eliminate the deductable and two or three dollars would be charged for each office visit, said McCullough. The biggest attraction to the HMO's, said McCullough is that town employees could save about $500 a year for health coverage.

The disadvantages are that you can't go to your doctor and that you must go to certain clinics and hospitals unless it's an emergency situation, he said.

Selectmen recently received bid proposals from four HMO's with family rates averaging $146 per month as opposed to the traditional coverage from Blue Cross-Blue Shield at $231 per month. Individual rates for the HMO's are about $55 while Blue Cross-Blue Shield charges $85 per month.

McCullough told selectmen that he would prepare a questionnaire for the HMO bidders. "We should really look into the financial strength, (of the HMO's) and zero in on the benefits," he said.

The Healthway Medical Plan was the low HMO bidder but is located in Brockton and Canton. It is a federally qualified HMO which is co-sponsored by Blue Cross-Blue Shield at rates of $53.92 (individual) and $145 per month for a family McCullough ruled out this plan because of the distant location.

The other HMO bidders are Medical Community South (an affiliate of Blue Cross-Blue Shield) in Braintree, the Multi-Group Health Plan at the South Shore Medical Center in Norwell, and Bay State Health Care (local clinics not acknowledged in bed proposal.)

The employees insurance committee and the insurance advisory committee will meet Thursday, May 27 at 7:30 p.m. in town hall to discuss various HMO bids and the traditional Blue Cross-Blue Shield coverage for the town.

The town's contract with Blue Cross-Blue Shield expires June 30. Including the school, there are 267 town employees currently who enrolled with Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Volunteers needed

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will accept the names of registered Democrats who are interested in being election workers.

The list will be submitted to the Town Clerk by May 27. Anyone interested should call either Karen Corcoran at 383-6767 or Margy Charles at 848-9306.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

When the last notes played by the high school band fade away, weary scouts doff their uniforms and each veteran's grave is decorated, another Memorial Day parade has ended. It's time for Dad to take his usual stance behind the outdoor grill. It used to be that this holiday weekend launched the season of outdoor cooking, but now that gas grills are so popular, they're used year-round. While the kitchen stove stands idle, the gas grill not only barbecues, but with the cover on it can roast, smoke, steam or bake. For those who claim meats just don't taste as good without the smell and flavor of charcoal, briquets should be started at least 30 to 45 minutes ahead of cooking time, with the coals burning until completely covered with grey-white ash before starting to cook. As it would never do for Mom to be left with nothing to do, we're printing Millie Carr's recipe for a delectable dessert called

CREME DE MENTHE CAKE

1 pkg. chocolate cake mix
1 pkg. chocolate instant pudding
1/2 c. cooking oil
1/4 c. vodka
1/4 c. creme de menthe
3/4 c. milk
4 eggs

Mix all ingredients and beat in mixer for 4 min. Pour into floured and greased tube or bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 60 min. When cool drizzle with glaze:

1½ T vodka
1½ T creme de menthe
1½ T milk
1 c. confectioners sugar

Memorial Day weekend on our South Shore finds only the landlubber in his own back yard, for the boat owner is off and away on the bounding main, while the fisherman is realizing his long winter's dream. Forget the grass that seems to sprout back up overnight after yesterday's mowing and the garden that needs planting, the salt breezes that work up wondrous appetites are beckoning. So the galley cook unearths the picnic hamper, whips up the season's first batch of many potato salads to come and perhaps Janet Wood's

GREEN BEAN PICNIC SALAD

lb. fresh green beans
tsp. salt
1/3 c. olive or salad oil
T lemon juice
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/4 c. chopped onion

Wash beans, cutting into 1½" pieces and bring to boil and simmer 5 min. uncovered. Cover and cook 10 min. more. Combine oil, lemon juice and pepper. Mix well. Drain cooked beans. While hot, add oil, juice and onion mixture. Mix lightly. Refrigerate until chilled. Serve as a side dish or on lettuce, garnished with tomato wedges. Serves 4.

* * *

Those of us who have lived here for more than a season know that our weekend program is subject to the whims of our weather. Plans for springtime fun can vanish with the sun. Hiking, a day on the river paddling our canoe, or oiling up the bike for a tour of the open road, are wonderful ways to leave winter's cabin fever behind, but if it's rainy, perhaps we can console ourselves with a slice of springtime's

FRESH RHUBARB PIE

9" pie shell with top crust
1⅓ to 2 c. sugar
1/3 c. flour
4 c. cut-up rhubarb
1½ T butter

Mix flour with sugar, amount depending on rhubarb's tartness and your taste. Mix lightly with rhubarb, place in pie shell and dot with butter. Cover with top crust with slits cut in it, or make lattice work top. Bake in 425 degree oven 40 to 50 min. until juice begins to bubble through slits. Serve warm. For another heavenly pie, substitute fresh strawberries for half the rhubarb. Use 1⅓ c. sugar. While on the subject of rhubarb, here's a receipt for

RHUBARB SOUFFLE

2 T plain gelatin
1/2 c. cold water
2½ c. stewed rhubarb
1 c. sugar
1 c. heavy cream, whipped

Soften gelatin in water. Heat rhubarb and sugar to boiling, add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool and when mixture begins to thicken, fold in whipped cream. Chill in bowl or individual dessert dishes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

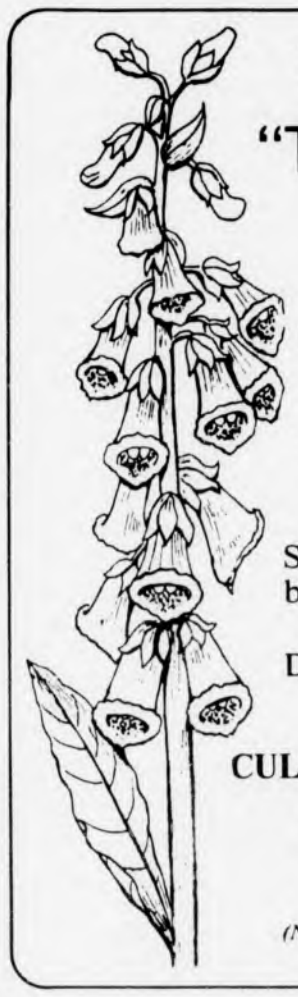
Third So. Shore Dressage Show at Marshfield Fairgrounds

Marshfield Fairgrounds is the site of the Third Annual South Shore Dressage Show Sunday, May 30.

The show this year will benefit the Windrush Farm and Handi-Kids, two therapeutic riding programs for handicapped children in Massachusetts.

This will be the second year the Heritage Dressage Association, a South Shore based organization, will sponsor the show. Under the watchful eyes and expertise of two local dressage show veterans, Judy Noone of Abington and Vivian Bobo of Cohasset, the show not only contributes to the worthwhile programs of therapeutic riding for the handicapped children, but also helps to promote dressage in this area.

The South Shore Show is the only dressage show in this area to bring in riders of all levels and from all over New England. The levels of riders range from training level for the less experienced horses to Grand Prix, where the riders compete for a score of 55 percent or better to accumulate in four or more shows, and be chosen to ride in the World Championships for the United States.



This year the show has drawn in many Grand Prix riders who are competing to be chosen this summer. Some of these riders are Dotty Morkis of Raynham. Dotty is a veteran Dressage rider, in world champion competition as well as on the US Olympic Team. Dotty is best remembered for her ride on Monaco in the '76 Olympics where she pulled the US into the Bronze Medal position with her brilliant ride. She holds gold, silver, and bronze medals from the United States Dressage Federation and always brings excitement to competitions. Dotty will be riding three of her horses on Sunday, Fasault, Pandeur and Briensbridge.

Meg Plum of Hamilton Farms, a breeding farm in Hamilton, will be competing on Idle, one of her stallions, at Grand Prix Levels.

The show starts with the first rides scheduled for 7:30 a.m. and the last class at 6 p.m. The higher level rides, Fourth Level, Intermediare and Grand Prix are scheduled between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Admission is $2 and refreshments will be sold on the grounds.

Out of the 95 riders and over 100 horses scheduled to compete Sunday will be Lendon Gray of Dimont, Maine. Lendon is the newest of the US Olympic Team. Lendon will be showing two of her horses, Mariaupl and Seldom Seen. Both horses will be shown at FEI Levels and Grand Prix.

It's happening in Cohasset

High school dance

There'll be a big dance at Cohasset High School Friday, May 28, starting at 7:30 p.m.for Grades 7-9.

Tickets will be $2.50 each or $4 a couple to hear "Jason Sound." He will be the DJ. Four faculty chaperones will be on hand throughout the event: Thomas O'Neil, Mark Carroll, Marie Schleiff and David Magnuson.

Village Spring Day

The Central Committee of the Cohasset Village Fair is planning a Spring Day Saturday, June 5, at St. Anthony's Church parking lot from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The proceeds will be used to reduce expenses of materials used in preparation for their fair in December.

Everything will be on sale, and donations are urgently needed for the following: household goods, linens, clean better clothing, toys and children's items, plants (perennials, annuals, cuttings, ground cover) and baked goods.

Donations may be left at St. Anthony's rectory or look for the "Little Red Truck" to be parked on the Common for the next few Sunday's from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to receive what you have cleaned out.

To have things picked up call one of the church representatives: St. Anthony's, Denise Desmond, Sharon Becker, Jean Manganaro, Diana Perreirs or Ginny Riley. From St. Stephen's: Karen Spencer, Ann DeVoisin. Congregational: Carol Sandblom and Marilyn Adams. From Unitarian Church: Betty Van Slyck, Sue Terry, and Donna Montgomery. From Greek Panagia: Jean Syrmopoulis and Eve Sedell.

Watercolor workshop

Enrollments must be made in advance for Virginia Avery's Outdoor Watercolor Workshop to be held June 7 - 11 through the South Shore Art Center. The ocean, rocks, harbor and village landscape of Cohasset will be the subject matter with the class meeting at several visually exciting locations during the week. Class will be held every morning for five successive days from 9:30 to 12:30. Each session will begin with a brief demonstration by the teacher to show a particular technique. Students may be on a beginning, intermediate or advanced level but should have a basic knowledge of drawing. Students bring their own supplies; a supply list is available in the Art Center office. Registration, with fees, may be mailed to the Center at 103 Ripley, Road, Cohasset, or brought in person.

Mrs. Avery is a well-known Marshfield Watercolorist whose work has been exhibited widely in the Boston area and recently at the Salmagundi Club in New York. She received her BS in Art Ed from Boston University.

For further information on this and other Art Center offerings, call 383-9548.

CPR course at Center

A comprehensive eight-hour course on cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) will be offered by the Cohasset Community Center Wednesday and Thursday, June 9 and 10 from 7 to 11 p.m.

The $5 course qualifies an individual as a heart-saver and for full CPR certification. Class size will be limited.

Call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to register.

Center coffee hour

The Program Committee of the Community Center will hold a coffee hour to express its appreciation to the current members for all of their outstanding work and to welcome new members to the committee.

Any Community Center members who are interested in joining the committee are cordially invited to attend the meeting Thursday, June 3 at 9:30 a.m. at the Center.

Center summer programs

Plans are nearing completition to offer a wide variety of summer programs at the Community Center of Cohasset, this summer.

For youth, activities will include soccer for children 4 to 6, jazz, children's crafts, a nature program, Camp Quonhasit and The Village Green Puppet Theatre.

Adult courses to be offered are aerobics, exercise for total fitness, tennis, yoga, basic typing, basketweaving, creative writing, French literature, introduction to forged silver jewelry, introduction to small boatbuilding, Italian pottery, quilting, weaving and whittling.

There will also be a special puppet workshop where participants will learn how to make and perform with their own puppets.

A family whale watch cruise has been scheduled for Sunday, June 13 from 1 to 7 p.m. For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Homebirth classes

A series of eight classes, aimed at preparing parents specifically for alternative birth experiences, will begin on June 9.

The classes are under the direction of Homebirth, Inc., a non-profit organization of parents interested in reclaiming control over the birth of their children at home or in the hospital. The classes are taught by a trained Homebirth leader and supplemented by a lending library, educational reprints, guest speakers, birth films and slides.

Responsible birthing is the main objective of the course.

Interested expectant parents call Kate Caldwell at 383-1498 or Elizabeth Durant at 383-1909.

Yard sale

The South Shore Women's Center, a private, non-profit, agency providing emergency and supportive services to families in need as a result of family violence, will be sponsoring a yard sale.

The center is in need of miscellaneous donated items for the yard sale. items will include household articles, clothing, furniture, bric-a-brac etc. Donations may be dropped off at the 14 Main St., Plymouth office. If larger items need to be picked up, please contact the Women's Center and arrangements can be made for pick-up. Telephone contact 746-2664 for pick-up arrangements.

Historical tour coming June 3

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Historical Society will accept registrations for a guided historical tour, to be held Thursday, June 3, at 1. Participants should meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. Residents and non-residents may register, for $1 to tour the following Historical Society Museums at Cohasset Center:

1. The Maritime Museum, constructed circa 1790, is unique among museums in this area. Formerly a "ships" chandlery or marine supplies building, it originally belonged to fishing vessel owner Samuel Bates whose family maintained a maritime-related business in Cohasset for four generations.

The first floor is devoted to Cohasset's "Age of Sail" (1750-1895). Here can be found relics of the schooner fishing days, materials salvaged from old shipwrecks, unusual items brought back from the Orient by Cohasset's "deep water" sailors, shipwrights and whaler's equipment, as well as paintings, prints and photographs of Cohasset's maritime era.

The story of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse tragedy and the engineering triumph of the second lighthouse are portrayed in artifacts, pictures and models. Beautifully detailed ship models of square rigged vessels are on display, notably models of the ship "Tecumseh" (over 5' long) and the clipper ship "Stag Hound," carved and built by Cohasset seafarers.

The second floor of the Maritime Museum contains collections of a general historical nature; old carpenter's tools, cordwainer's (shoemaker's) equipment, Indian relics, a display of early apothecary's equipment, old Cohasset school desks and books, a part of the town's first Post Office, and military relics from America's several wars.

An old home-made piano is on display, as are a series of dioramas depicting various historical scenes of the town. Photographs and prints of local interest can be seen. These and many other interesting displays of historical nature are on view in the Maritime Museum.

2. The Capt. John Wilson House, dating from 1810, was given to the Society in 1936 and became its first museum. This old dwelling belonged to Captain Wilson, a seafarer, then to his descendants for more than a century.

In it one finds antique furniture and furnishings to recreate an early Cohasset home. Chairs, tables, spinning wheels, old cooking utensils, even a collection of children's toys are featured. Old paintings of Cohasset buildings and scenes can be viewed. The atmosphere is late 18th and early 19th century New England.

3. The "Independence" museum, formerly the town's first Fire Station, now houses the Society's Gown Collection. Here are displayed some of the extensive collection of fine gowns, costumes and accessories given to the Society by townspeople, representing American clothing styles from the early 19th to the early 20th centuries.

Featured at the "Independence" are a Bridal Room and a Children's Room. The actual uniform of an American Ambassador as worn during his presentation to the English Monarch is on display. This collection is viewed annually by designers and students of fine fabrics. Mr. David H. Wadsworth, Curator, and volunteer tour guides will be on hand to lead groups and answer questions.

To register for the tour, call the Recreation Department office, at 383-6791, as soon as possible.

Conway campaign going well

Guest speaker at the May Meeting of the Republican Town Committee meeting in Cohasset was Sarah Young, Coordinator of Volunteers for Jack Conway's Campaign.

Miss Young delivered an informative and enthusiastic update of Conway's Campaign progress. In closing she extended a hearty welcome to any and all volunteers to the Campaign for Conway Headquarters at 92 Front Street, Scituate Harbor — 545-6080.

Volunteers are always needed for various activities from stuffing envelopes to preparing press releases that can be done either at the Headquarters or in your home.

Ed Goff

Goff wins national building award

Edward Goff, of 4 Ledgewood Drive received national recognition recently for his superior remodeling of home exteriors.

Bird and Son, of Walpole selected Goff as one of 12 national award winners for the year. The Walpole company is an international manufacturer for home improvements and has been established since 1795 which is the longest standing business of its kind in the country.

Specifically, Goff was given the award for a project completed in August at the home of Mrs. Janet Figueiredo of 406 North Main St.

Repairs to the North Main St. home included: insulation of the entire house, a new roof with an elaborate ventilation system, aluminum storm doors and storm windows, vinyl siding, trim coverage, aluminum gutters and new shutters.

Edward Goff Co. Inc. is based in Cohasset and does exterior remodeling throughout the South Shore. Goff, 32, has been in business for three and a half years.

Bird and Son names one winner each month. The contest emphasizes preserving the original image of the home. Uniqueness is also an important quality in the work.

TWO BRAND NEW ARRIVALS TO SERVE YOU BETTER
24 HOUR BANKING
At Hingham Institution for Savings
SOUTH HINGHAM • MAIN OFFICE •
GENIE
It's fast. It's convenient. It's easy. It's safe. It's anytime.

GENIE is our 24 hour teller machine. With it on the job, you can make deposits or withdrawals anytime; 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

It's fast.
It only takes a minute to make a deposit or withdrawal with GENIE. And since it's so quick there's never a waiting time.

It's convenient.
You can sign up for our GENIE 24 hour teller machine at any of our 4 offices.

It's easy.
GENIE is located in a safe and secure foyer. When the bank is closed, simply insert your GENIE card in the electronic door opener. A buzzer will sound, indicating the door is open for you.
Insert your GENIE card into the slot indicated in the right-hand corner. A door will open, revealing a screen and a keyboard.
Enter your personal identification number, and follow the instructions on the screen.

A supply of envelopes is provided, below the face of the machine for deposits and payments. Fill out the envelope, enclose your transaction and place the envelope in the deposit slot.

It's safe.
The enclosed foyers where GENIE 24 hour teller machines are located are locked, and only those who have a card can get in.

It's anytime.
Anytime banking means the bank is at your disposal when it's convenient for you, not the bank. Even if it's two o'clock on Sunday morning you can make a deposit or withdrawal.

Inquire at Customer Service or call us at 749-2200 for more information.

CHS to graduate 147 seniors Sunday

One hundred forty-seven CHS seniors are scheduled to receive diplomas at graduation Sunday. The ceremonies begin at 3 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus.

Scholarships and awards will be given out at class night, Thursday. Certificates of National Merit and for National Honor Society members will be awarded at graduation.

Senior class president Steven D'Onofrio will give the valedictorian address at graduation. Senior Thomas Ryan will give the salutatorian address, and junior class president John Maloney will serve as marshall.

Other class officers are Mary Jo Mahoney, vice president, Anna Abbruzzese, secretary and John McNeill, treasurer.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet will award diplomas.

Before exiting the Music Circus tent the graduates must comply with one more school rule — a new restriction. Graduates will not be allowed to toss their caps at the end of the ceremony because of a minor injury that occurred last year.

Though it had not been tradition over the years, a few students did throw their caps last year. The cap only went up about four or five feet, said High School Principal Richard Streeter but when it came down the point landed on a girl's forehead.

It was a small flesh wound, said Streeter, but forehead injuries tend to bleed rapidly. Fortunately the senior girl was able to walk out with her class and with a handkerchief placed on her forehead.

Traditionally Cohasset students had not tossed their caps at the end of graduation. "We've always been concerned about it," said Streeter. "I don't know what was different about Cohasset students but they didn't do it." Perhaps they didn't do it because the ceremony was always held inside, under a tent, suggested Streeter.

At class night, this week, Streeter will warn graduates not to throw their caps. And as a reminder of last year's incident, Streeter will show the seniors the blood splattered white cap and gown which was worn by the girl last year. Streeter said he is saving the gown to show to each future graduating class.

Senior Holly Grant, an active and popular honor student will be absent from graduation but family members will attend to accept her diploma. Grant, an AFS (American Field Service) student is spending a year in Uruguay.

She will be going through a full senior year at High School there, and will complete an extra six months or so of High School. Holly left for Uruguay in February and plans to return in January. Her father, Galt, says she plans to enter college in September 1983.

Holly was a National Honor Society member, a student representative on the school committee and was elected homecoming queen last fall.

Galt Grant said, "She would love to have been home for graduation." He said the family plans to phone and congratulate her on Sunday. "We'll have to wait and celebrate when she gets back," he said.

At the graduation exercises the girls will wear white gowns and the boys blue. National Honor Society graduates will have gold tassels on their caps while the rest of the class will have blue and white tassels.

There were young and not so young observers at Memorial Day ceremonies at the American Legion Monday. Left is Edward Tower who served aboard the USS Missouri in WWII and witnessed the Japanese surrender to General McArthur. Probably less interested in the ceremonies is Jeremy Theberge, 17 months.

That's Donna McGee with a capital D

As a legislative aide she sees herself as a facilitator

By Claire McDonough

She is a woman with liberal views who lives a conservative life. She works for a politician and she is a politician in her own right. She loves activity and she cherishes solitude.

She's a wife and mother, a feminist and a progressive. She's Cohasset's Donna McGee and she's a dependable, exciting, sensitive tough lady.

Donna McGee lives in Cohasset with her husband Jim and their three children: an 11 year old daughter, Leslie; 15 year old Peter; and Philip who is almost 17. Like many people who are politically involved, Donna's interest began with concern for her children.

"I'm not a League of Women Voters type, though I respect them tremendously. I'm more inclined to become involved," she pointed out.

"I was inclined to agitate for smaller classes; things like that. I guess you could say that basically I'm an activist."

Little by little, Donna's involvement grew. "I started working on school committee campaigns, then I was appointed to the Cohasset Bicentennial Committee in 1970. The other members were all Republicans. During night meetings they used to sneak out and put bumper stickers on my car. I met some terrific people then, and we are friends to this day. They needle me, and tell me I have a lot of potential if only I'd drop that D from beside my name."

Donna's Republican friends will have a long wait for that. Her first non-local involvement was with Gerry Studds' second campaign, and her involvement with the Democratic Party has increased yearly.

Donna agreed. "I'm the chairman on the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee and past chairman of Co-op Five. I've been to six conventions in the past seven years — two of them national. I was on the Platform Committee in 1980 and at the Issues Convention last year. I went to the Democratic National Convention as the first female delegate from this congressional district."

She is quick to agree that she has received much encouragement and assistance along the way. "Norma Fenochietti of Marshfield in particular. She has been an inspiration to me. She nurtured my

Vandalism plagues village merchants

By Donna Cogliano

Loitering and petty vandalism are not uncommon in Cohasset Village, and merchants over there predict the problems will increase as the weather warms.

Additional police patrols won't by themselves solve the problem. In fact, merchants are not certain there is an easy solution.

Businessmen agree, however, that kids need some place to go and that the so-called "street kids" account for a small minority of Cohasset young people.

Police Chief John DeBassio said there have been only occasional reports of vandalism to the center, although last month vandalism became so obvious at the bus stop at the common that DeBassio instructed patrolmen not to allow youths to gather there.

Youths had carved their initials in the wooden structure and had torn shingles off from the roof.

"During the warm weather, when we have a full crew we'll try to put a man in the village," said DeBassio. A foot patrolman would be stationed between 4 and 8 p.m. "The visibility of an officer during those hours will help," he said.

DeBassio said that with a couple of officers returning from academy training, the police staffing situation should be better than last year., "but not up to what I consider full strength."

Fred Wood of Petersen Relators has already had problems with people disrupting his window box geraniums. Last Saturday a few plants were pulled from the box and flowers were snapped off.

Wood is not necessarily blaming the incidents on local youths. It could be an older person strolling by who picks free flowers. "If these are pulled out more they won't be replaced," said Wood. "It's a shame. I don't know what can be done."

"We are supportive of the town. We are trying to beautify the area...times are tough for the businessman and we're just tryhing to make the square attractive for the shopper."

Gallagher wins appeals permit

The Board of Appeals has granted a special permit to J. Kenneth Gallagher which allows him to fill a portion of land and build an on-site sewage disposal system at 10 Pleasant St.

Approval of the application was unanimous and in issuing its approval, the appeals board published the following findings:

One, that the area affected by construction of an on-site sewage system will be restored substantially to its original condition.

Two, that the amount of impervious area to be created won't change existing flood conditions in the area.

Three, the applicant has shown that the proposed construction, filling, excavation, etc. complies with the town's zoning by laws.

Four, that the proposed use of the land is not detrimental and is, in fact, an improvement not substantially different in character from other properties in the area.

Gallagher was represented at an April 30th hearing on the aplication by Wayne Sawchuk.

METCO Pot Luck picnic

The METCO and Host families of Cohasset will be hosting a "Pot Luck" picnic on Sunday, June 13 from 2 to 5 p.m.

The picnic, which will be held on the back field of the high school, is open to all residents of Cohasset. Families interested in attending should be prepared to contribute to the menu.

For further information call C. Langmaid at 383-6433, K. Bartow at 383-0572 or J. Ellis at 383-0767 (eves).

Rules for dump

The Cohasset Board of Health advises residents of the rules and regulations for the Cedar Street Landfill which have been in effect since 1972, and will be stringently enforced!

Your cooperation is critical to the most efficient utilization of our limited site.

(1) No demolition wastes from contractors will be accepted.

(2) No tires will be accepted from anyone.

(3) No stumps will be accepted from anyone.

The Board of Health is in the process of updating the rules and regulations, and would appreciate suggestions.

In addition, as of July 1, entry into the landfill will not be permitted without a utilities use sticker placed on the rear window of the vehicle, passenger's side. No exceptions will be made.

The stickers should be available beginning the first week in June. Details of their availability will be forthcoming.

Channel 5 to film

Selectmen last week signed an agreement with September Productions Inc. for Channel 5's filming of a commercial on the common.

Filming of the 10th anniversary celebration on the common is scheduled for Saturday, June 5. Sunday has been reserved in case of inclement weather. The crews will begin setting up on Friday.

In exchange for permission to use the common, the selectmen will accept a new flag for the town flag pole.

September Productions has arranged to shuttle equipment, actors, and actresses from the parking lot of the Music Circus.

Correction

Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos was incorrectly quoted last week in the Mariner due to a typesetting error. Her statement should have read, "I don't know that our drinking water seems to be contaminated."

In last week's story on seagull droppings at Lily Pond her statement inferred that the drinking water was contaminated. The word "don't" had been dropped from the sentence.

Vandalism plagues Village ...

Wood says about $80 worth of materials have been taken already.

Larry Fone of Cookworks, across from Petersen Realtors is planning to fill his window boxes with plants soon, and they will stay put. Someone suggested he plant cactus instead of flowers.

"If only the kids had something good to do," said Fone. "When it comes to vandalism it's impossible for police to control it."

"Kids just aren't busy enough. Parents should do something. It's not up to the taxpayer to provide entertainment."

Dick Straley of Cards and Shards, consistently finds litter outside his store. There are usually beer bottles in the bushes a few feet away from trash barrels.

Straley has also been hit with petty thefts, but he attributes the problem to a minority. "Most of the kids that come in are well-behaved."

Included in renovations being completed at the Curtis Compact Store in the Village, are a security booth, mirrors and movie cameras.

Curtis manager Dan Powers said candy and submarines are the most frequently stolen items. After the remodeling is finished, shoplifting details will be assigned to the store and even the manager won't know when they are around, said Powers.

Open packages are often found on the shelves, he added. "We try to keep an eye on things as much as we can but it's tough when things get busy."

David Wadsworth, curator of the Historical Society Buildings, has installed wire screening on the rear windows of buildings in an attempt to stay one step ahead of vandals.

"If the museums were extensively damaged or wiped out, we'd be insured, but we could never replace what was here," said Wadsworth.

With a few breaks which have occured over the years, security has been improved at the historical museums. Lately youth have taken a liking to the roof of the Captain John Wilson Historical House, causing damage to the shingles and chimney.

One day following a snowstorm this winter, Wadsworth spotted a collection of snowballs stacked on the Capt. Wilson roof. And a few weeks ago, police brought seven youths into the station for trespassing on the roof. They were verbally warned and released.

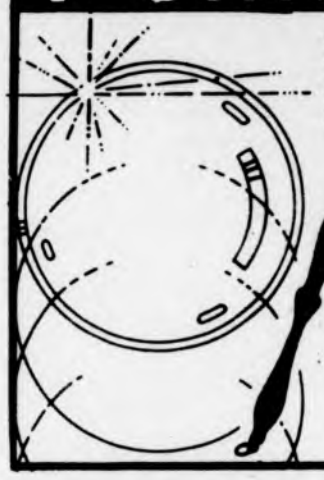
A few years ago, there was a break and entry in which some guns were stolen. Last year, Wadsworth discovered a break while giving a senior citizens tour when he found clothing missing from a dummy.

Because of petty thefts during historical tours items in the museums have been nailed down, said Wadsworth.

Besides Sandy Beach another favorite partying spot seems to be the ledges behind the historical museums. With the rubbish left behind, "you can see that they have parties behind these buildings," said Wadsworth.

When one group outgrows the hangout another group fills in. Generations of kids have hung out in the wooded area behind the buildings.

Wadsworth said he used to hang out in the village back in the 1940's. "I hung out there and at Sandy Beach but the furthest thing from our minds was vandalism. We were afraid of the police.



"We tossed footballs around...there was no drinking or drugs — our parents would not tolerate it."

Dog officer resigns

Joanne Cogill's resignation as dog officer became effective this week and selectmen are hoping to fill the position soon.

Board member Mary Jane McArthur described the position as one of those "thankless jobs."

Summer offerings at the Art Center

Plan to make art part of your summer with that class you've always wanted to take at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

Complete offerings are available for June, July or August and enrollments for all classes must be made in advance.

Children's Art Week for ages 7-11 will be taught by Syma daily June 28 through July 2 from 10:30 to 12:00 on the green across from the Center. Drawing from nature, painting, collage and 3-D will be included.

Outdoor Watercolor Workshop taught by Virginia Avery takes place daily June 7 through 11 for teens and adults from 9:30 to 12:30 at various sites in Cohasset. For beginners, intermediate and advanced.

One Week Intensive Workshops for college credit will take place July 5 through 9. Outdoor Painting with Betty Kohlberg and Photography with Peter Anderson are both offered for three credits. Painting will meet all day, every day, and Photography will be handled on an independent studies basis with time in the darkroom to process work. Drawing Systems with David Tandy wili meet daily in morning sessions for one credit.

Special workshops that will take place in July are Landscape Painting with Margaret Dillon for five consecutive mornings July 5 through 9 and Pastel Portraits with Constance Flavell Pratt for three full days July 20, 21, and 22.

Meeting twice a week in July and again in August are: Basic Drawing (July) Intermediate Drawing (August) with Moore Monday and Wednesday evenings; Beginning Photography with Fortin; Introductory Painting (credit) with Tandy Tuesday and Thursday evenings; Watercolor with Avery Wednesday and Friday mornings; Creative Drawing and Painting with Kalish (Wednesdays and Fridays August only).

Exploring with Paint and Pencil for children age 7 to 11 will be taught by Serna Brundige on Tuesday and Thursday afternoon 2 to 4 in July and August. Teens Painting and Drawing Landscape with David Tandy will take place in July on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4 to 6.

The popular class Portrait Painting with Clement Micarelli for college credit will meet once a week for eight weeks, July and August Tuesday evenings.

Clay classes with Syma will be offered twice a week in July at the Center and twice a week in the artists studio with Rossman in August.

For further information or to receive a detailed schedule, telephone 383-9548.

Williams wins Yale music competition

Christopher Williams, a junior at Yale University and 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School, has been named a winner of the annual William G. Waite Concerto competition, sponsored by the graduate Yale School of Music and the Yale Symphony Orchestra.

In the past, winners of this prestigious competition, restricted to Yale undergraduates, have been traditionally string players and pianists. The past season alone featured three-time Carnegie Hall Youth competition winner Kroko Misawa, a pianist, and Carnegie Hall recitalist Kerry McDermott, whose violin playing was featured prominently in the motion picture "Fame."

Williams, a saxophonist, is the first performer on his instrument ever to have won the competition, and the only wind player in recent years to have done so. He is currently majoring in music and classics, and is studying with Kenneth Radnofsky, saxophone performer with the Boston Symphony and Philadelphia Orchestras.

As a result of winning the competition, Williams will perform the Glazounov "Concerto for Alto Saxophone and String Orchestra" with the Yale Symphony during its 1982-83 season.

The performance will be broadcast over Connecticut Public Radio.

Donna McGee the liberal, is conservative . . .

growth politically and I'll never forget all that she has done. Then there's Jan Colby and Carolyn Stauffer of Hingham. There have been many wonderful women. Perhaps that's why I'm considered a liberal feminist. I have many conservative friends, though. Really, I myself am very conservative. I just feel that other people should be allowed to live their lives as they choose. I don't want to impose my views on others."

In contrast to Donna's conservative lifestyle coupled with liberal views, she points to the late Arthur Tate Mahoney, who was chairman of the Republican Town Committee. "His views were extremely conservative, but the man himself was totally flamboyant. We really respected each other, and he was always trying to convert me."

For years Donna ran a home with one hand while balancing political activity and a full-time job with the Cohasset Music Circus with the other. Then she enrolled at Boston College in a program for "Women in Politics and Government." Part of the program involved an internship in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Donna was assigned to Phil Johnston of Marshfield and Scituate.

"I admired Phil tremendously, and when he offered me a job I took it."

Donna is quick to point out that "it was not a political appointment. I have a political identity of my own, and Phil respects this, but it has nothing to do with my job.

"Not every politician would understand this as well as Phil does. I know a few politicians, and he is one of the best. Without question. I knew him long before I came to work for him, and he has a terrific voting record. He supports women's issues, poor people, abused children. He's very courageous. Look at his record on the Ward Commission."

Asked if she supports the legislative pay raises, Donny grew serious. "Full time legislators should be paid a decent salary or we'll lose the best. Compare what they make with what people earn who sweep out the subway trains. The disparity between the raises proposed for the rank and file and those proposed for leadership are another matter, but we have to make the salary attractive or we're going to lose some fine people."

Donna loves her job, but in many ways it differs from what she expected. "I thought people would have more crisis type problems. There's a certain percentage of that, but a lot more is informational, or getting them through the beaurocracy.

"I see myself as a facilitator who helps people cut through red tape. I didn't realize there would be so much work. You could stay there day and night and the phone would never stop. People who call are usually frustrated. If you can communicate that you care, that you really want to help — sometimes if you just listen it means a great deal. And when you can solve a problem for them, boy, do you feel good!"

Asked about her plans for the future, Donna hesitated. "I don't really have a long-range blueprint. At the present time I can't see myself running for state-wide office — I can see how hard Phil has to work. For the short term I would like to see Evelyn Murphy elected lieutenant governor. I think the time has come for us to have a woman in that office, and I feel as a feminist that we should all get behind her.

"There are many women working well together, and the result could be seen at the recent nominating convention in Springfield. We were unified, and it worked. Some say that another candidate would give a more balanced ticket. This may be true, but it's time to have a woman."

Donna feels that the hardest thing about being a woman is that you can't have everything. "You try for balance but you can't have it all. Still, though, I am basically a problem solver. If I were home all the time I'd be solving all my kids' problems — whether they wanted me to or not — and they might not have the chance to grow. I seek out solitude when I'm on vacation. I like to garden, and I love the South Shore, but I'm not one to stay at home."

Maybe you can't have everything. But if she keeps on doing what she's doing, the chances are that Donna McGee of Cohasset and the State House will come pretty close.

Conservationists weigh marina plan

A Conservation Commission hearing on plans for a marina at Bailey Creek and Parker Avenue has been continued to June 7.

The proposal presented by lobsterman William Figueiredo last Monday includes about 540 feet of additional floats for boats. The existing floats house about 30-40 boats and the marina proposal calls for docking of 90 boats.

Figueiredo believes his marina would service the town well and help to alleviate the large number of people on the waiting list for a town mooring. "Some of those people will die before their name comes up," said Figueiredo.

According to Figueiredo the floats would be held down with bottom moorings. The floats and fingers would be placed inside a dredged area. He will have an oil boom and a wet-dry vacuum for any gasoline oil spillage that might happen.

Conservation Commission members questioned Figueiredo at the hearing last week for an hour. Commission Chariman Robert Maki said members were primarily concerned with prevention of pollution and the wave patterns caused by the marina.

Figueiredo assured the commission that boats would not be dumping sewage. He also told members that he was equipped with the proper vacuums and booms to siphon up an oil spill.

The hearing was continued so that Conservation Commission members could study the materials and details of construction.

"Based on the questioning we've done so far, Mr. Figueiredo has satisfied us with the satisfactory answers," said Maki. The hearing will be continued Monday, June 7, 8 p.m. at town hall.

The commission may decide to accept or reject the marina proposal. Maki said the commission would then have 21 days, from when the vote is taken, to put together a list of conditions. The commission's vote is based on the plan's compliance with the Wetlands Protection Act, said Maki.

Maki said the Conservation Commission looks into the following seven areas of concern: 1. public or private water supply; 2. ground water supply; 3. flood control; 4. storm damage prevention; 5. prevention of pollution; 6. protection of land containing shellfish; and 7. protection of fisheries.

In addition to the Conservation Commission, Figueiredo has submitted plans for approval to the state and to the Army Corps of Engineers.

☐John P. Giuggio of Cohasset was elected director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce at the organization's 73rd Annual Meeting, May 18, at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel.

Giuggio is president of the Boston Globe and Affiliated Publications. He is a Director of Affiliated Broadcasting, Inc. and Suburban Newsdealers, Inc.

He is a graduate of Boston College School of Management.

☐Christine Riley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Riley of 17 Haystack Lane, graduated from Lesley College at Commencement Exercises May 22 in Boston. Ms. Riley a graduate of Notre Dame Academy, received her B.S. in Early Childhood Education/Developmental Psychology. While a Lesley student, she interned at Harvard Law School Day Care Center, Winter Hill School, Joseph Osgood School in Cohasset, and St. Williams School in Bradford, England, while an exchange student at Bradford College, Yorkshire.

☐Regarding the upcoming television spectacular, it seems that others have discovered what residents have always known — we do have an incredibly beautiful town common.

On my recent trip to Williamsburg, I enjoyed the perfect simplicity of one of their town commons which was complete with a bowling green. For anyone with an interest in history, I'd recommend this historic area. It's really something to walk through the same door as George Washington or visit the home where Thomas Jefferson began his studies.

Just the gardens alone, make the trip well worth it, and I'm sure that Virginia Leach whom I happened to bump into on the street of Jamestown must have taken a few notes.

Bob and Carol Ciciotte who recently spent some time there said that it's especially interesting for high school students who are studying that era in history.

☐Not all Cohassetites go South, however, and 8 members of the Sunday afternoon softball team, otherwise known as The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight, headed North to the Upper Penobscott River in Maine.

Team name to the contrary, the men all managed to spend eight action packed hours whitewater rafting. Despite claims by one of the brave crew that he (occasionally) was "scared to death" and that the water was "real rough ," the trip was such a success that they're planning to do the same thing, again next year.

☐Congratulations to Brenda Birmann of Atlantic Avenue who recently set a new school record for Middlebury College in Vermont.

Brenda, a freshman, swam a 28.2 (seconds) in the 50 yard Butterfly Stroke for her college swim team, the Panthers. She is a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School and has been a member and assistant coach of the Cohasset Swim team.

☐I have never liked snakes and am sure that I never will and so when I found one at the end of my driveway, I carefully avoided it and waited for it to go away. But it didn't.

In a town with area names like Rattlesnake Run, one is apt to look a little more closely at your garden variety-just in case. This, though my knowledge of reptiles is admittedly limited, was not a garter snake. For one thing, it was about four feet long and it was spotted rather than striped.

Word spread and in a very short time, a group of interested children had gathered. Not usually one to discourage native curiosity, I was beginning to wonder what to do when John Norris arrived on the scene.

John is not afraid of snakes and everyone was very impressed when he picked it up. There's a certain way of holding behind the neck, he said, and with the snake in one hand and a book on reptiles in the other, he leafed through the pages until he could match a picture with our snake.

I was very much relieved to learn, thanks to John, that although the markings were somewhat similar to a copperhead, my discovery was rather a king snake which actually is an enemy of its poisonous cousins. I have since been told that snakes are good for gardens and I'm sure they are — just so long as I don't have to know they are there.

☐Though the topics were very serious such as drug and alcohol abuse, runaways, and child abuse, the interest of the fifth and sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School in the presentation by a juvenile court officer, recently was obvious.

Equally impressive were the well thought out questions by the students which showed that they were not only aware but concerned about many of the problems facing them in today's very complex society.

☐Roderick MacKinnon of Cohasset was among 151 members of the Tufts University School of Medicine Class of 1982 who received their M.D. degree in commencement ceremonies here May 30.

Dr. MacKinnon, whose home address is 281 North St. will serve a medicine internship at Beth Israel Hospital, Boston.

Dr. MacKinnon was inducted into Alpha Omega Alpha, the national medical honor society.

How was the Deer Hill outdoor school . . . 'Super'

Deer Hill School Principal Kenneth Ekberg used one word to describe last week's outdoor education for Grade 5 — "Super!"

"I think the kids got a lot out of it," he said, Ekberg was pleased to see the comradeship grow amongst the fifth graders throughout the week.

This year's program was considerably less expensive than ones in the past. During the past 10 years, Grade 5 groups paid $60 to $80 for stayover camp weeks on islands or at Camp Wing in Duxbury.

Last week students paid only $2.50 for a harbor boat trip tour and a visit to Georges Island. Bus transportation costs were paid for by the school.

Students were divided into groups of 15 and were assigned to activities on a rotating basis. Activities included: a historical bike tour of the town, orienteering, woodmanship, nature trail, ponding, grave stone rubbing, and terrariums.

The historical bike trip toured the cemetery, common, First Parish Unitarian Church, Government Island, the Celtic monument, Maritime Museum and the Lothrop House.

On Wednesday afternoon television meteorologist Harvey Leonard spoke to an assembly program on coastal storms and hurricanes at the Deer Hill School.

On Tuesday and Thursday afternoons a field day was held which included compeition among the groups. Various activities were softball, volleyball, and tug of war.

Ekberg said the highlight of the week was Friday's program which featured experts from the South Shore Science Center in Norwell. The Science Center speakers explained activity at the various tidal pools and salt marshes in Scituate and Cohasset. Students collected star fish, crabs, lobsters and eels at the sites.

More than 24 adults volunteered to assist teachers during the week.

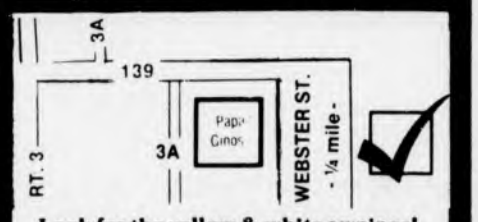
Sign up for aerobic dancing at Rec. Center

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for both morning and evening Aerobic classes which will be taught by Ms. Margaret Watson, a professional dance/exercise instructor.

Morning classes will be held from 9:30 to 10:30, Tuesdays, in the Town Hall auditorium. Evening classes will be held Thursday from 7:30 to 8:30 in Town Hall.

Participants may sign up for either one or both classes. The fee is $10 for one class and $18 for both.

This program will be conducted through the self-supporting, Revolving Account Fund. Programs are scheduled to begin June 15 and 17. Call the Recreation office at 383-6791 between 7 and 4, to register.



The class will consist of a dance warm up, strenuous calisthenic work on the floor, an over-all dance stretch and work on jazz choreography. A dance combination will be taught each week. A great over-all work out for strength and flexibility. Aerobics is designed for both men and women.

Best wishes to the Class of '82

Commencement

Graduation Day, as the Four Lads said in 1956, is "a time for joy, a time for tears, a time we'll treasure through the years." Editorialists and other savant idiots have tried to say more and most often have said less, or nothing.

Nevertheless, as the class of 1982 — of which we have grown rather fond — celebrates its bittersweet passage, we cannot resist offering them our observations. We hope they will indulge our whimsy.

Graduation Day, we would observe, is a flimflam. It is yet one more annoyance brought about by the world view adulthood imposes on childhood beginning before the beginning of kindergarten.

The adultish pitch goes something like this: "Listen, punko, just over that there proverbial horizon is a magic place, a golden gate...and, if you are only industrious enough and virtuous enough to reach that there gate, your problems will be over forever! So just do as you're told!"

The trouble is, once the proverbial gate is opened and the magic place is reached, the adult world concocts another distant horizon. And so, completing each grade in school becomes not a relief, but an introduction to a more weighty burden.

To the teenager thus indoctrinated it must seem that everything about growing up, from getting a driver's license to passing college boards to dating, falls very short of expectations. The same imperfect self is always at center stage, and (as we recall) we never seem to get any closer to happiness.

So it is with Graduation Day. Much is lost and gained on this special day, but we are ourselves always. All our envies and fears lie underneath the cap and gown.

It's a fact that many adults never get over the fundamental misconception that there will be a single moment in life when we become transformed into what we would wish. Th... too often we enter careers and marriages with irrational expectations and suffer inevitable bitter disappointment.

Therefore, as we congratulate the class of 1982 on their stunning achievement, we caution them not to be crushed when in a few days they wake up as themselves — as if it were Dorothy waking up in Kansas in The Wizard of Oz.

For the land of Oz is Kansas, and that, fellow adults is what we've waited till now to tell you. Godspeed.

It's working

These are bad times for curmudgeonly editorialists.

The weather has been fine, with just enough rain to keep the lushness of Spring from yellowing.

The Rotary club of Cohasset recently donated $9,000 in scholarships to six highly deserving high school seniors.

Deer Hill School held its outdoor classroom last week, as it has for the past 10 years. The Mariner reports (see story) that no fewer that 24 adult volunteers worked with the faculty during the week.

Finally, the Cohasset Boosters Club held its Spring Awards Banquet last week. Wouldn't you believe it? The place was loaded to the gunwales.

We feel about like the character in Gilbert & Sullivan who muttered, "Don't the day seem lank and law when all goes right and nothing goes wrong, and isn't the day extremely flat when there's nothing whatever to grrrrrumble at?"

Well, as Eliza Doolittle said to Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady," "Just you wait, Henry Higgins, just you wait!!" Just wait until the fair buds of Spring turn into heating bills again, and glare ice prevents empty oil trucks from negotiating the by-ways of the shivering town...Then we'll have something to editorialize about.

In the meantime we are forced to admit, due to the efforts of some mighty fine people, Cohasset seems to be working.

A Memorial Day message...

[GOP Congressional Candidate, Jack Conway delivered the following address at Cohasset Harbor Memorial Park on Memorial Day. Ed.]

Several weeks ago I was doing a night talk show on WBMS in New Bedford.

The calls were on taxes and on unemployment and on budget deficits and they went on and on.

But then there was a call from a man who asked if I knew anything about Agent Orange.

This caller then told me and the audience that he had been a medic in Vietnam in 1972 and that a low flying U.S. helicopter had by error dusted him and his buddies with the toxic defoliant now called Agent Orange.

He told me about the lack of understanding and lack of treatment and lack of recognition of the Agent Orange problem which he and many thousands of other veterans were suffering.

I was touched by this call from a man who sounded to me like the original forgotten soldier.

The calls ended. The talk show was over. I was about to leave the radio station and walk out to the darkness of Union Street when a car drove up. A man, heavy set, in his high 30's, stepped out and asked, "Are you Jack Conway?"

I said I was and he replied, "I'm the man you just talked to — the one with Agent Orange."

We stepped back into the lobby of the radio station and he rolled up the sleeves and loosened the top buttons of his denim workshirt.

He said, "This is Agent Orange — look at it!"

I felt sick as I looked at the multiplicity of sores and infection. I had never seen anything like it. His skin was infested with something that looked like thousands of beads of poison ivy only greatly enlarged and intensified.

I asked him if he worked and he answered, "Who would hire me?"

I asked him if he were married and he answered, "Who would marry me?"

We talked for an hour and he told me about the "lost colony" of Vietnam veterans, dusted with Agent Orange and now mostly ignored by their government as they seek medical help or disability claims.

Since that evening in New Bedford I have heard Jim Fitzpatrick of Hull who is the President of the Vietnam-era Veterans Association talk about the "smells and sounds of rounds of AK47 fire and exploding blasts of B40 rocketry — and about the wounded and the dead from places like Tay Minh, or the Rockpile, or DMZ, Schau Valley and Pleiku, the 2500 POW's and his reception back to America when he and his United States uniform was spit upon by other Americans, and about the debilitating and unexplained illnesses caused by being sprayed by herbicides, pesticides and other wild-eyed chemicals.

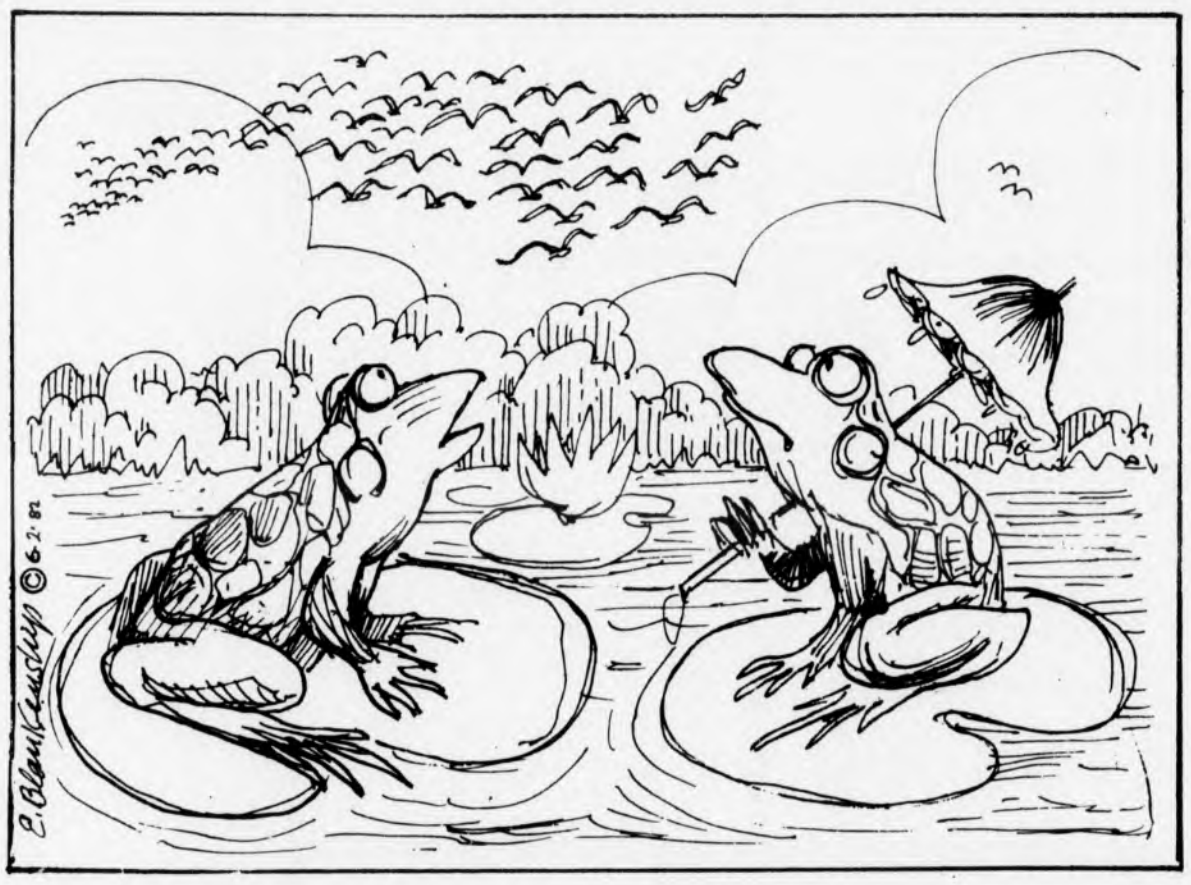
I have talked to 100 percent disabled veteran Bill Tilden of Scituate who has been told that he may be losing his weekly V.A. hospitalization benefits — a necessity that he cannot possibly afford to pay for himself.

And I have heard of many, many other cases of either government neglect or government parsimonious penny pinching when it comes to helping take care of the physical and psychological scars left by wars.

In my father's time it was the mustard gas of World War I. In my time it was the great velocity and rapaciousness of exploding munitions of World War II. Then it was the ice and cold and intensity of Pusan and Korea; then it was the lonely abandoned nationally scorned and Agent Orange years in Vietnam.

Through all of these wars — declared wars and so-called police actions alike, there was a common thread of bravery and nobleness of spirit of the American men and women who fought them.

There will be other conflicts, other declared wars, other police actions, other Agent Oranges, other losses and other heartaches as we defend our right to be free.



But I ask of you here today — as you honor the memories of past wars — to stand together under one flag — the American flag, to respect your country and the principals for which it stands.

I ask you here today to come together in body and spirit and insist, loudly and clearly, that after we fight our wars that we will, justly, take care of our wounded.

I challenge you to again feel greatness of patriotism, love of country and respect for our flag.

And I pray to God that He protect the great resources of this land, and the freedom which has been its heritage. And to grant to all nations His peace, and inspire our President and all the officials of our government to serve us with integrity.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Pesky seagulls foul Lily Pond water which supplies most of town's drinking water. Water Commissioner says gull increase directly related to nearby dump where seagulls hang out regularly six days a week ... but never on Sunday, states report.

"...Oh lordy, here they come...and they promised... never on Sunday over Lily Pond..."

The 'Age of Sail' & Captain James Collier Jr.

By David Wadsworth
Historical Society Curator

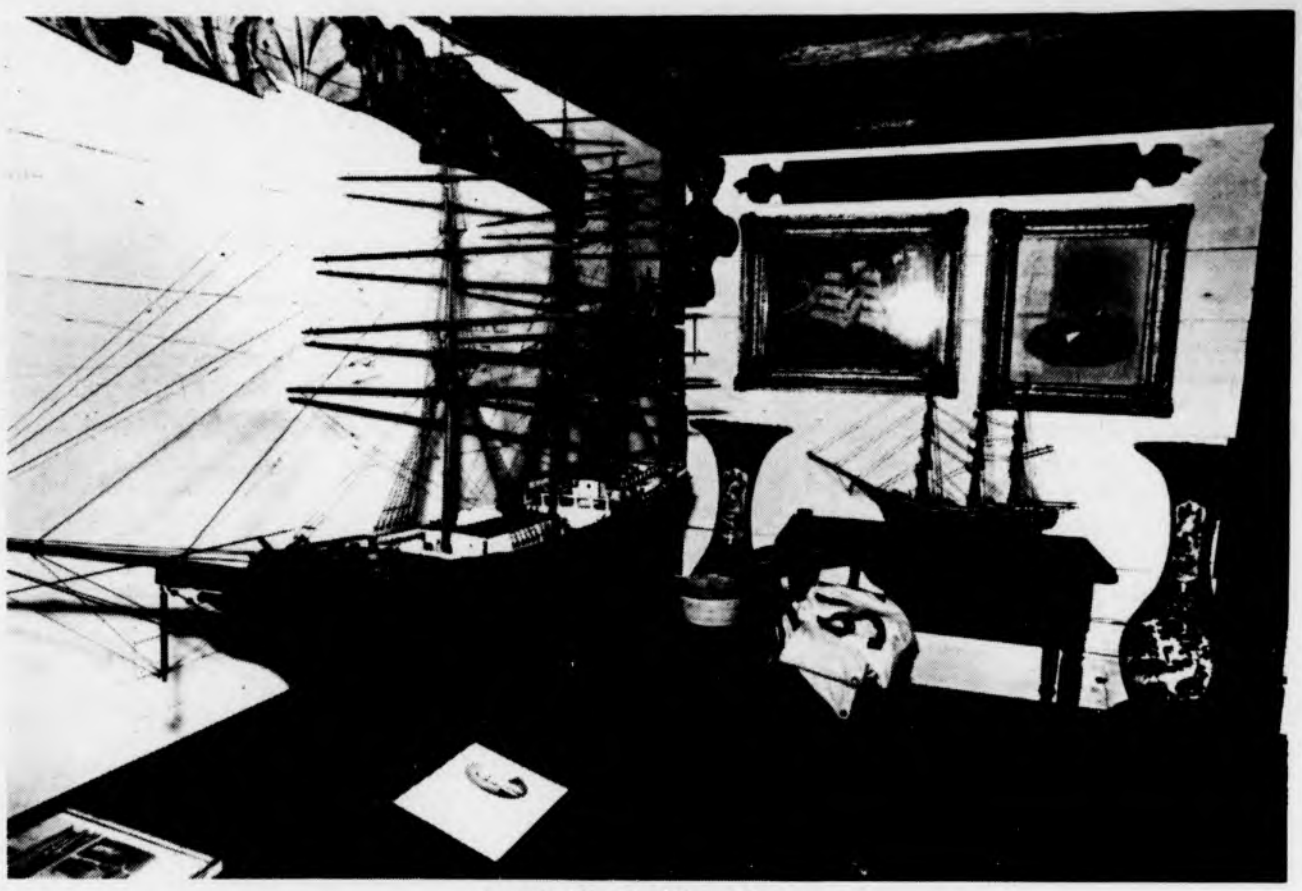
One of the most famous deep-sea sailing captains who was born and raised in Cohasset during the town's 19th Century "Age of Sail" was Captain James Collier Jr.

He was born into a seafaring family on Aug. 6, 1813; his parents were Capt. James Sr. and Sally (Lincoln) Collier. As with many young Cohasset boys of that era, James Jr. went to sea at an early age. His first voyage, at age nine, may well have been as a crew member on one of his father's fleet of fishing schooners.

Boys became men quickly aboard the small sailing vessels owned and operated by Cohasset's seafaring families, and by the time he was 18, James Collier Jr. was ready to take command of a sizeable ship. At the suggestion of the old Cohasset seafarer and shipowner Capt. Abraham Hobart Tower, the young James was made Captain of the mercantile schooner "Profit" for a voyage from Boston to Richmond, Virginia.

"Profit" carried a general cargo on the outward voyage, and on its return trip, a cargo of coal to be unloaded at Weymouth, Mass. Writing in Davenport's "Genealogies of the Families of Cohasset," James' son Edmund Pomeroy Collier noted that in 1834 "Profit" made a voyage to Savannah, and in that year his father also is recorded as having commanded the schooner "Rubicorn" at New Orleans.

"Rubicorn" made voyages to Kingston, Jamaica; Santiago de Cuba, Galveston and Yucatan. In 1838 the now fully experienced Capt. Collier took command of the Cohasset built and Cohasset owned bark "Hobart" and sailed to Mobile, Providence, Tripoli, New York and Leghorn. Later in 1842, "Hobart," James Collier commanding, made a long trip from New York to Charleston, then to Bordeaux, New Orleans, and finally back to New York. In 1834, "Hobart," Capt. Collier still in command, became stranded on a sand bar near Montevideo, Uruguay. Resulting lawsuits detained him there for two years, but in 1845 he returned home to marry Joanna Nichols Bates of Cohasset.



Returning to the sea in 1846, Capt. Collier commanded the bark "Julia" on a trip to Maracaibo,then the brig "Montserrat" on a mercy mission carrying food to Queenstown, Ireland. A succession of commands included the bark "E.H. Chapin," bark "Salem," the clipper ship "Storm King," and the ship "Mattapan." Then, during the Civil War, he went aboard the 1388 ton vessel "North America" as Captain. "North America" served as a troop transport in several Union military operations against the Confederacy. Late, in 1865, "North America" successfully eluded the famous Confederate commerce raider "Shenandoah" which had been hunting her in Australian waters.

One of Capt. Collier's regular crewmen on numerous voyages was his nephew Samuel P. Bates, also of Cohasset.In Sept. of 1866 Capt.Collier took command of the newly constructed three-masted square rigged ship "Tecumseh," a merchant vessel built by James L. Townsend of Boston for the firm of Thomas Nickerson & Co., shipowners, also of Boston. "Tecumseh" was 198 feet long, had a beam of 36 feet, a draft of 23.5 feet, and was rated at 1309.75 tons. Capt. Collier brought with him as his First Mate his nephew Samuel Bates, now himself a qualified captain.

"Tecumseh's" maiden voyage was an extended one covering the last months of 1866 and well into the next year. Leaving Boston on Sept. 7, 1866, the big vessel journeyed to Valparaiso, Chile, carrying a cargo of cannons and cannonballs for the Chilean Army. "Tecumseh" arrived in Chile on Dec. 10, 1866, and left on Feb. 10, 1867, for a long crossing to Liverpool, England. Capt. Collier and "Tecumseh" arrived at Liverpool on May 29 of that year. They returned to Boston in July.

During the long sea voyage, the ship's First Mate Samuel Bates, working with the Ship's Carpenter, fashioned a model of "Tecumseh" which still exists. Purchased some years ago from a private owner, Bates' model is owned by the Cohasset Historical Society and is on view at the Society's Maritime Museum in Cohasset Center.

Unique among sailing ship models made by seafarers while actually at sea, the "Tecumseh" model is more than five feet long from bowsprit to stern transom. The model's hollow hull is planked not unlike the original vessel itself. Inside the hull are frames constructed much as were "Tecumseh's" own. Characteristic of ship models made by sailors is the extreme care and attention to detail visible in the Society's "Tecumseh." Cabin doors slide open and shut as they did on the real ship over a century ago.

Inside the Maritime Museum.

Near the bow,two large metal anchors are secured as they were on the full-sized "Tecumseh," and along the rails, the ship's boats swing from their davits. Captain Collier and First Mate Bates, both Cohasseters, were destined to said aboard "Tecumseh" for only one voyage, for in 1867 the vessel was sold by its owners to German shipping interests.

The spider's web of rigging found on all large sailing vessels was faithfully reproduced, even to the miniature wooden blocks and tiny deadeyes. The ship's wheel located near the stern spins easily; one could almost imagine a 19th Century helmsman standing on a storm-tossed deck guiding the giant ship safely to the haven of its next port-of-call.

With the prosaic name of "Otto," she sailed under foreign flag until the end of her long career in the year 1900.

Capt. Collier commanded several more sailing vessels for Thomas Nickerson & Co., notably the 1314 ton "Highland Light," and the giant 2200 ton ship "Pharos." He retired from the sea at age 73, and spent his remaining years at his Highland Avenue home in Cohasset. On Jan. 14, 1891, Capt. James Collier, age 78, "furled his sails and dropped anchor in that harbor from whence no ship has ever sailed back."

You can see First Mate Samuel Bates' fine model of Capt. James Collier's ship "Tecumseh" in the Historical Society's Maritime Museum at Cohasset Center, starting June 15, on any day Tuesday to Sunday, from 1:30 to 4:30 in the afternoon.

School committee adopts drug & alcohol policy

The school committee adopted its drug and alcohol policy last Monday. The committee's vote of approval was unanimous, 5-0.

Administrative procedures and guidelines for the policy have not been finalized by the committee. Rules and regulations for the policy are in the drafting stage and will be discussed at upcoming meeetings.

The school board's drug and alcohol policy statement is:

"The Cohasset School Committee recognizes its responsibility for ensuring the safety of all members of the student body and for supporting and assisting in enforcement of the current laws. The purpose of this policy is to eliminate the use of alcohol and misuse and abuse of other drugs from our public school system. To this end the committee:

1. recognizes our responsibility to educate all students to the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.
2. encourages the dissemination to the students and community of such rules and regulations established by the administration to support implementation of this policy.
3. encourages rehabilitation of drug and alcohol offenders through referrals to appropriate agencies.
4. to coordinate with law enforcement agencies in fulfilling the legal responsibilities connected with criminal offenses according to Massachusetts statutes.
5. to promote the understanding of current law by all students, school personnel and the community."

Obituaries

Harriet Ladd

Harriet F. (Fowler) Ladd, 66, a retired employee of the Pierce Memorial Library in Scituate and retired bilingual aide at Scituate High School, died Friday at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home following a long illness.

Born in Buffalo, N.Y. she lived in Scituate 29 years before moving to Cohasset one month ago.

She was a member of the Standish Humane Society in Duxbury, the Scituate Environmental Effort Group, and the Scituate Red Cross.

She was a past Girl Scout leader and was a member of the Alliance of the First Parish Church of Norwell. She was an appointed member of the Scituate Town Forest Committee.

She leaves her husband, Robert B. Ladd; two sons, Richard B. Ladd of Fairfax, Va. and Stephen F. Ladd of Livonia, Michigan; a daughter, Catherine M. Bishop of Barrington, Ill.; a brother, William M. Fowler of Carmichael, Calif.; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial funeral service will be held at a later date.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Standish Humane Society, c/o Sue Ellen Conlon, Treasurer, 98 Old Forge Road, Scituate.

Gertrude McArthur

Gertrude I. (Dougan) McArthur, 73, of Cohasset Hardware, died at home May 27.

Born in Boston, she had lived in Cohasset for 25 years. She was a member of Brockton American Legion Auxilary; George H. Mealey Legion Post, and St. Anthony's Church.

Wife of the late James Robert McArthur and the late Adam J. Kohl, she leaves a brother, Warren J. Dougan of Milton, and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 Saturday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

'Spring Day' arrives this Saturday

The five churches co-ordinating the Cohasset Village Fair will hold a "Spring Day" Saturday, June 5, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. All types of items will be for sale in St. Anthony's parking lot on Main St. or in the Unitarian Parish House in case of rain.

Household goods, linens, toys and good clothing to be donated can be left at St. Anthony's rectory, 129 S. Main St., anytime before June 4. Perennials, ground covers, cuttings and houseplants can be left at Sherry Becker's barn, 186 N. Main St. Baked goods should be brought in Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. Proceeds of the sale will be used to purchase material to be used at summer workshops in preparation for the December fair.

Jurors picked

Three jurors were chosen by selectmen last week to serve on July 6. Donald Ponitz of Diab Lane is scheduled to be a grand juror. John Smith Halloran of Pleasant St. and Karla Getto of Jerusalem Rd. were picked as traverse jurors.

Blame the English if you can't face the light of day without your morning coffee. Long before the British took to tea, coffeehouses were the gathering place for the elite. In the year 1725, London had nearly 2000 such spots where the wealthy met and where more coffee was consumed than anywhere else in the world. They brought their custom across the sea and Boston opened its first coffeehouse in 1670. Ever since, Americans start sipping their brew at breakfast; for most, only the first of many to follow. I could do with a cup right about now with a slice of Ann Grassie's

STRAWBERRY BANANA BREAD

1½ c. sifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
2/3 c. sugar
1/2 c. crushed strawberries
1/2 c. crushed bananas
2 eggs, beaten
1/2 tsp. salt
1/3 c. salad oil
3/4 c. quick oatmeal

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt in mixing bowl. Stir in oats, then add remaining ingredients. Stir gently until well-mixed. Pour into a greased loaf pan, 9x5". Bake at 350 degrees for 60 to 65 min. Cool on wire rack, When cold, wrap in foil and refrigerate overnight before slicing. One slice equals 132 calories.

Now, when California wines are said to hold their own with the best standard wines in the world, choosing the right wine to complement a meal can be quite a challenge. It's not enough to just follow the ground rule of red wine with meat, white wine with fish or fowl. Cool rose' wines go well with all foods, as do well chilled sparkling wines such as burgundy and cold duck. Chilled dry white wines such as chablis complement fish, poultry, veal, pork and cheese dishes. Dry red wines served at room temperature of 60 to 65 degrees are suggested with beef, lamb chops and Italian dishes and cool sweet wines with dessert or cheeses and any meal with a flair. After dinner, liquers or cordials and, as summer nears, chilled beer and ale may be served anywhere, anytime. Red wines need room to "breathe," so glasses should not be filled more than one third. White-wine glasses should be half-filled when dishes such as Pat Reynold's are served.

EAST INDIAN CHICKEN BAKE

1 lb. 13 oz. can cling peach halves
1/4 lb. stick butter or magarine
1 tsp. curry powder
1 T instant minced onion
1 T wine vinegar
4 chicken breasts, or desired chicken pieces

Drain peaches, saving 1/4 c. syrup. Melt butter in saucepan. Add curry and simmer 5 min. Remove from heat. Stir in onion, vinegar and reserved syrup. Baste chicken with sauce and place on broiler pan or cookie sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for one hour, basting every 15 min. Add peach halves, baste with sauce and bake 15 min. longer. Serve with rice and green vegetable or salad.

It was a druggist in Atlanta who is said to have mixed the first batch of Coca Cola in 1886. The story goes (according to Waverly Root), that his concoction, put together from extracts of coca leaves and cola nuts, was mixed in an iron kettle in his backyard and stirred with an oar. He made a fifty dollar profit that year, selling his brew as a relief for headaches and another two thousand when a third druggist bought Pemberton's formula. The Coca-Cola recipe is carried on the books now at $42 million and the famous drink, now the leading soft drink of the world. Now that we know how the name "Coca-Cola" came to be, we can only wonder who christened this snack designed to provide energy for hikers.

GORP (TRAIL MIX)

2 c. raisins
3/4 c. semisweet chocolate pieces
1/2 c. walnut pieces
1/2 c. shredded coconut
1/4 c. cashew pieces

Toss ingredients together and store in air-tight container. Makes 3½ cups.

As seen from the porch

By Lois Martin

There are idiosyncracies that are fascinating. Those little nuances of our personalities, our tastes and quirks are what make each of us interesting.

Anyway, it's always with gusto, more of which I'd always like thrust on me, that I come upon little surprises.

Having paid respect to the Celtics all season, with testimonial dinners in my kitchen all through those playoffs with the men from Philadelphia, I was certain we could perhaps put away the moving green and white speeches, replete with references to Parrish, Bird and Tiny.

PATCHES

Not so. Thursday night, just as I was still smiling pleasantly about Magnum, on came that voice again, announcing everyone's name from the Lakers and the 76ers. What is it about these people who have to see balls dribbling all the time? So far as I was concerned, as I confided in friends the next day, the game had all the torrid suspense of a match between Tokyo and Outer Mongolia.

David Cutler, publisher of the Mariners, has this thing about the weather and its reporters. He can't bear them. He gets upset if you tell him that in California they spend more time giving the weather than they do giving the news. And he can't stand Dickie (Albert). He just wants, he says, to hear: "It's sunny," or "It's raining."

He watches Harvey Leonard on Channel 7, he says crisply, because Harvey makes the least of the report. David won't abide a discussion of Bruce Swoegler. He doesn't say mean things about Don Kent either because he admires the new hair shade or because Kent's the Dean of meteorology. I didn't have the courage to mention "the cloud deck hiding half the Hancock building" that I'd heard about Friday morning.

Just as I was learning to restrain my envy for people who have beepers (thereby important beeps), I discovered the telephone company people have the newest, most adorable new status symbols...cones.

See, after a telephone company person parks his vehicle, either his big truck or his small nifty little car, he heads directly to his trunk from which he fetches his orange cone.

One morning I saw three little cars with Ma's bell on them and they were parked, each with a little orange cone, seeming to say, "...Ta Da!"

I'd like a blue one, I think, to match my car, a royal sky blue perhaps with a seagull on the side of it. People in the plaza shall be awestruck at the very vision of my little cone perched nattily to the right of my rear wheel. (I'll probably run over it by mistake responding to my beeper.)

Shocking to see common sense employed with justice. There was a young man whose best friend was killed in an accident which was labeled as a drunk driving fatality. As a sentence the man who'd been driving is required to talk about drunk driving to high school students at prom time. A woman assistant DA thought of it. A wise judge listened and used it, because he wanted to make sure the devastated young man wasn't a goner, too. Justice with common sense, and an intent not to add the loss of another life to the one already gone...maybe even to save some. Drink to that with the new Judge Kramer, (soda water, sweetner, lemon/lime)

The other day I embarrassed myself by saying to a woman who's a new employe here, "Does your family mind your working?"

Now that's stupid. I know why I said it. So do other people who've done the same thing. But it's stupid.

We say that because we recognize, being women with families, that young families sometimes feel disrupted when the mother takes on other responsibilities. Indeed some have been known to be a bit jealous of the job rather than zealous about it.

But then I stopped to think...I don't mind my husband working one bit. I never have minded it, not to mention considering that it has made quite a difference in our lives (a genuine litote!). When would anyone say to a man, "Does your family mind your working?"

Work does more for men and women than giving them something to do. The home and family are one of the reasons we may choose to work. Good men, like good women, put families first. And so families shouldn't mind if either man or woman works.

Why you should advertise

Peter F. Hayes, who runs his own advertising writing business in Marshfield, is offering free copies of his booklet "Why Your Business Should Advertise."

Hayes currently writes newspaper and radio ads for many local businesses, as well as TV commercials and brochures for larger companies.

Parent conferences ... Junior High Field Day ... Class elections

THURSDAY, JUNE 3

8:00 a.m.-12, Senior rehearsal, auditorium.
8:00 p.m., Class Night, auditorium.

FRIDAY, JUNE 4

8:00 a.m.-12, Senior rehearsal, auditorium.
11:00 a.m.-1:30 p.m., Junior High Field Day, Milliken Field.

SUNDAY, JUNE 6

3:00 p.m., Graduation, South Shore Music Circus.

PARENT CONFERENCES

To make guidance services more readily available to parents, we have established a program of evening appointments this year. On Wednesday, June 9, 7:30 to 9 p.m., counselors will be available to meet with parents of seventh and eighth graders, on an appointment basis only.

Because of the time restrictions involved, we ask that only parents who have extreme difficulty scheduling a guidance appointment during normal school hours take advantage of this evening appointment program. Of course, all parents are encouraged to make arrangements to meet with a counselor at any time during the regular school day. To make an appointment with a counselor, call Mrs. Mary Brennock at 383-6102.

JUNIOR HIGH FIELD DAY

A field day for the entire Junior High School will be held at Milliken Field Friday, June 4 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

It is being sponsored by the Physical Education Department in conjunction with Junior High homeroom teachers. Fun, carnival-type events will be stressed with awards being given to the first place finishers in each event.

Awards will also be given to the championship 7th grade homeroom and 8th grade homeroom. A tug-of-war between the 7th and 8th grades will determine the junior high champion.

The Communications Council will provide refreshments at the end of the day. The Council would like to take this opportunity to thank Marilyn Watson, director of Physical Education, for all the work she has done arranging this field day.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION SURVEY

An interest survey was given to all physical education classes to determine which activities were most popular and which were least enjoyed among the students. Results will be used in establishing the program for next year.

Activities most enjoyed are: soccer, volleyball, ultimate frisbee, basketball, games, archery, open gym and softball. Those least enjoyed are: fitness testing, wrestling, indoor track and gymnastics.

Activities not presently offered but highly recommended are: bicycle riding, la crosse, swimming, sailing, skiing, self-defense and mountain climbing.

EXAM POLICY RESTATED

Semester examinations are administered in January and June. We feel that these evaluations are important enough to justify devoting eight school days for testing. Since the grades received for these examinations constitute one-third (one-fifth for grades 7 and 8) of the total year's grade, we do not schedule students to take more than two exams per test day.

The school year for students is 180 days. School personnel have no authority to excuse students from school attendance. Parents are obliged to insure that children under their care attend school each day.

Students who are absent on examination days will be required to make up the test upon return to school (or during the summer months if this be the case.) No student will be allowed to take an examination prior to the scheduled date.

There may be, however, extenuating circumstances which a parent may wish to communicate to the principal. This request shall be in writing, in advance of the testing date(s), and addressed to the principal. The principal then shall rule on each case. A teacher may neither alter the exam schedule by his/her own decision, nor by request from a student or his parent.

CLASS ELECTION RESULTS

Grade 8 — Bob Durkin, President; Philip Mahoney, Vice Pres.; Patrick, OConnor, Secretary; John Reiday, Treasurer; Scott Fitzsimmons and Wayne Warren, Rep.'s.

Derby schedules 191st graduation

The 191st Derby Day Exercises, graduation ceremonies of Derby Academy, will be held at the New North Church in Hingham at 2 p.m. Thursday, June 10.

The Derby Lecture, established in 1784 by the will of the school's founder, Madam Sarah Derby, will be delivered this year by the Rev. Thomas G. Cleveland, chairman of the Department of Religion at Milton Academy, and recently, interim rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist in Hingham.

Festivities will begin with performances of Upper and Lower School plays at 11 a.m. On stage in Sarah Derby Hall, Upper Schoolers will perform Bernstein and Robbins' "West Side Story," directed by Mrs. Chester Luther of Norwell, and accompanied by Ms. Cathy Morrison of Marshfield.

At the same time, in a tent on the Upper Field, Lower Schoolers will present an adaptation of A.A. MIlne's "Winnie the Pooh," directed by Mr. Clipston Harding, with Mrs. Luther as musical consultant, and Mrs. Owen Fryling at the piano. Fourth graders will play the principal parts; children in grades 1, 2 and 3 will form the chorus. Costumes for both productions are by Mrs. Roger Earle of Hingham.

Luncheon to honor the graduating class will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the John H. Ross Memorial Dining Room. At 1:30 p.m., the Academic Procession of students in Grades 1-9, faculty, trustees, parents and alumni will be led by pipers to the New North Church. During graduation ceremonies Headmaster Thomas J. Waters will present the school's two highest awards, the Madam Derby Pin and the Academy Pin, to the girl and boy who best typify the Derby Spirit.

Academic prizes will be awarded to those students who have achieved an A- or above average in every subject for the entire year.

Gordon Berg, president of the Board of Trustees, will present diplomas to the fourteen members of the graduating class, who are: William Bradford Boardman, Duxbury; Heather Jo White, Duxbury; Lauren Marie Forrest, Marshfield; Bartow Kelly III, Marshfield; Kevin Richard Kenerson, Hull; James Drew Liddell, Hingham; Sarah Luisa Lualdi, Cohasset; Michelle MacNaught, Duxbury; Leslie Serat Middleton, Hingham; James Gordon Patterson, Cohasset; Heather Caldwell Ross, Hingham; Katherine Otis Strekalovsky, Hingham; Sarah Hopkins Tiffin, Hingham; Lisa Margaret Tittemore, Weymouth.

Derby Day will conclude with the traditional tea in the John H. Ross Dining Room for the graduates and their parents, the faculty, trustees, alumni and friends.

Matt Kuhn, 11, concentrates on his gravestone rubbing work as part of the Deer Hill outdoor school last week.

Eight receive Booster spirit trophies

Eight Cohasset High School students received Spirit Enthusiasm trophies at the Spring Sports banquet, sponsored by the Boosters Club.

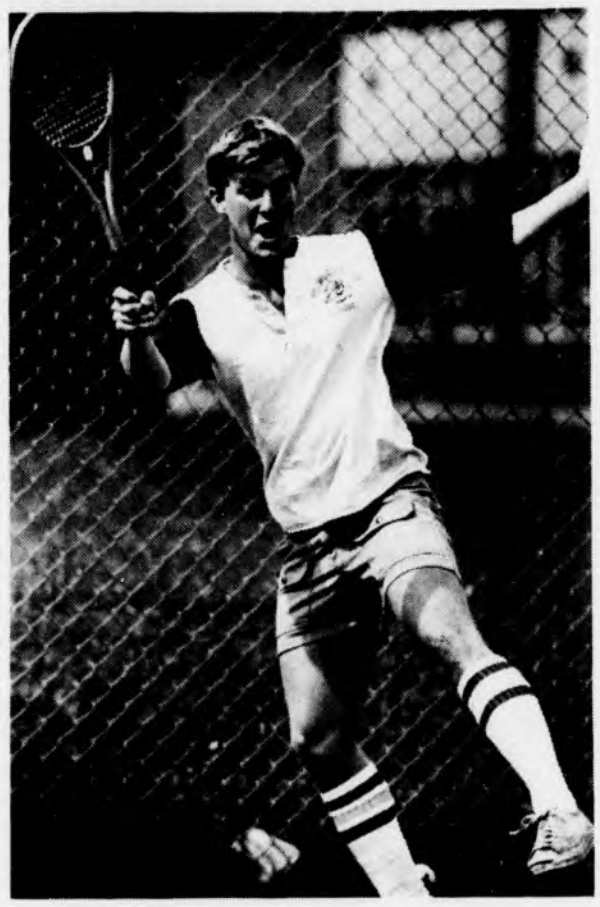
Athletes of seven spring teams chose the winner for the team on which they participated. In softball there was a tie, and both Karen Froio and Sarah Froio were awarded trophies.

Other awards went to: Torin Sweeney, baseball; Mary Jo Mahoney, girls' track; Gordon Ricketts, boys' track; Karen Murphy, girls' tennis; Rob Tis, boys' tennis and Jack McNeill, golf.

Former secretary and past president of the Sports Boosters Club, Beth Goff was awarded a special plaque at the spring banquet, for her dedication and devotion to the youth of Cohasset.

Boosters Club President Rosee Duffy said, "Beth was really behind the idea of forming an all-sports boosters club. She has been the club's guiding light and spirit."

Goff is an aide at the Osgood School and a school bus driver. She directed this year's senior class musical production. Duffy said Goff has a super relationship with children.



"Beth's been handing out awards for years," said Duffy. "We wanted to show her how much we appreciate her." Goff and her family are planning to move out of state in the summer.

Congratulations and best wishes to CHS seniors

Athlete of the week

The Tis balancing act.

Tis is 12-0 and most enthusiastic

Meet senior Rob Tis who was undefeated (12-0) in South Shore League tennis competition this season. He co-captained the boys' tennis squad which finished second in the league (12-2) and qualified for the state tourney.

For most of the season he played at the third singles spot. He was recently awarded the Spirit Enthusiasm Award by the Boosters Club. Tis was chosen by a vote of his teammates to receive the award.

Cohasset Tennis Coach Toni Jillson said, "Rob is a very dynamic person. He had a lot of enthusiasm and it was contagious among the players. I relied on him to instill this point."

"He's a very up person" and team player, said Jillson. Tis was a fast learner, she said, "and I wish that he were going to be here next year."

Jillson described Tis as an athlete who is constantly striving for improvement. One example of improvement was demonstrated versus Rockland. In the first matchup against Rockland, Tis triumphed 7-6, 6-4 with a tiebreaking win in the first set. Last week against Rockland, Tis conquered the same Rockland opponent by a score of 6-1, 6-1.

During the season Tis won all his matches in just two sets. None of his contests went to three sets.

Patience is an important part of Rob's game, said Jillson. "They call it baseline integrity," said Jillson, when he waits out an opponent who eventually makes the mistake.

Other strengths of Rob's game include a powerful backhand and a second serve which is usually loaded with top spin. He recently developed a "nice backhand volley," said Jillson. "He's a good all-around tennis player."

Tis will graduate from CHS on Sunday. He plans to attend Marquette University next year and major in journalism.

Three CHS teams are tourney bound

Three Cohasset High School sports teams have qualified for the Eastern Mass. tournament. The softball team captured the South Shore League Championship Crown with a record of 18-1.

Both the boys' and girls' tennis teams wound up with second place finishes in the league and will also participate in the tourney. Duxbury won both the girls and boys titles in the SSL.

This is the time of year when Athletic Director Clark Chatterton starts collecting uniforms and equipment from coaches and players. Chatterton will have to be patient and wait until the Cohasset teams are eliminated from the tourney before taking inventory from the tennis and softball teams.

SOFTBALL

The girls beat Hanover last week, 12-2. They still have one league game remaining with Abington which is scheduled to be played today (Wednesday).

The softball squad has mounted an 18-1 record under the direction of Coach Bill Fallon. Softball tournament pairings are expected to be announced later this week.

BOYS' TENNIS

The Skipper tennis squad closed the regular season last week with three wins. The Cohasset team beat Abington, 4-1, Hanover, 4-1, and Rockland, 5-0.

The boys completed the league season with a 12-2 record (12-3 overall). They lost to Duxbury twice and wound up second in the SSL standings.

The Skippers were scheduled to make their tourney debut today (Wednesday) against West Bridgewater. At the time of this writing it was not known where the game would be played.

First-year Cohasset Coach Toni Jillson said last week's matchup with Rockland was the best contest of the season. It was a big match because it meant that co-captain Rob Tis had finished the season with an undefeated record. When Cohasset played Rockland earlier in this season, the Skippers won, 4-1 but that win included three tiebreaking sets.

Second singles Shannon Collins, a junior, won his contest versus Rockland in a third-set tiebreaker. He won that match 7-5, 2-6, 7-6 and finished the season with a 9-2 record.

First doubles player Paul Riley had an 8-4 record and freshman John Colocousis finished 9-3 in doubles action. Tis went 12-0 for the league season.

Jillson said, "Everyone was important to the team this year. They were all serious about developing their skills." She also described the team always showed good sportsmanship. Honesty and eagerness to improve are two important qualities for a team to have, said Jillson, and that's why they deserve to participate in the post-season tournaments.

GIRLS' TENNIS

Hanover upset Cohasset's first-place tie with Duxbury in the SSL standings last week. The Skippers were bumped from a co-championship title when they lost to Hanover, 3-2.

The girls were directed by Coach Peggy Lynch. They finished second in the league with a 14-2 record. Besides the Hanover loss, the only team to defeat Cohasset was Duxbury, the eventual title winner.

The opening tournament match for the girls is scheduled for tomorrow (Thursday) against King Philip at home.

GOLF

Freshman Troy Chatterton won second place at the league meet last week. After 18 holes of golf at the North Hill Country Club in Duxbury, Chatterton posted an 81.

A golfer from Duxbury won the meet with a 79 score. Cohasset's senior captain Jack McNeill earned a fifth place finish with an 83.

Sophomore John Drago scored an 88 and Jim Rooney had a 91. The Cohasset golfers are scheduled to compete in the state's next week. The Skipper golf team finished the season with a 7-3 record.

Congregational Antique Show at Town Hall

Cohasset's Town Hall will hold the sixth annual Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church. It will be held Friday, June 4 from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday, June 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Town Hall.

Antiques such as silver, glassware, furniture, jewelry, books, linens, clocks, dolls, utensils, cameras, paperweights, and other fine collectibles will be on display and for sale.

A public snack bar will be held at the Second Congregational Church (next door to the Town Hall) with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks.

The hours for the snack bar are Friday, 11 to 7, and Saturday from 9 to 2. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

Chairwomen, Geraldine Ainslie, Cheryle Kristiansen, and Linda Graves announce the following dealers in this years show:

Nancy Petrus, "Blowin A Gale," Marshfield; Ann Bush, "Bird in Hand," Duxbury; Justine Cook, "Savage Gill Antiques," Pembroke; Jane Chatfield, "The Chatfields Orphaned Oldies," Cohasset; Mary Rushton, Kingston; Alice Fraser, Norwell; Janice Caldwell, Cohasset; James Callahan, Dania, Florida; Hazel Sjoberg "Hatherly Shop," Marshfield.

Also Noel Ripley, Cohasset; Francis Wallet and Helen Wallet, Abington; Madeline Hoagland, "Eel River Antiques," Plymouth; Patricia Foster, "Foster's Colonial Shop," Weymouth; Margaret Colson, Sandwich; Constance Goff, "Collector's Corner," Yarmouth; Jeanette Joyce, Centerville; Armen Amerigian, "Armen Amerigian Antiques," West Bridgewater; Jane Barnes, "Fox Hollow," Kingston; Shirley Berglund, Kingston; Geraldine Pearle, "Purple Pigeon Studio," E. Wareham; Nancy Morrill, "Grasshopper Antiques," Framingham; Margaret Lucas, "Clipper Ship Antiques," Norwell; Barbara and Melvin Petit, Florida.

Admission to the show is $1.50. Discount tickets are available through the dealers or members of the Beechwood Church or from the ad in the newspaper.

Children's Art Week at Art Center

A wonderful way for children to spend the week between the close of school and summer activities is at the Children's Art Week June 28 through July 2 sponsored by the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset.

Teacher Syma Komarin will lead the group in outdoor art activities on the green across from the Art Center's headquarters at 103 Ripley Road.

Activities are geared to ages 7 through 11 and will take place each morning that week from 10:30 to 12 noon. All supplies are included in the class fee; registration must be made in advance either by mail or at the Center office.

Imaginative art projects will include work with paint and pencil, color, collage, sketching from nature and the imagination. For further details, telephone 383-9548.

'The Sorcerer' is coming to Town Hall

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will present the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Sorcerer," at 7:30 p.m., June 9 and 10 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Refreshments will follow at the Church next door.

The operetta is being produced and directed by Ellen Fryling, the church organist and choir director. Ellen is well known for her many musical accomplishments. Included is her direction of the Messiah each Christmas at the Church when many from the South Shore enjoy participating. She is also a member of the Hingham Civic Orchestra.

Joan Kenney is the choreographer. Having just finished a musical in Hingham she is now busy on "The Sorcerer."

Jeanne Scammell has performed in previous Gilbert & Sullivan Operattas presented by the church and is one of the leads once again, along with Philip Von Iderstein, Robert MacNeil, Bennett Driscoll, Norman Megathlin, John Rice, Louise Smullen, Louise Flint and Barbara Richardson.

The chorus is made up of many other talented people from the Second Congregational Church.

Play planners from the Congregational Church are Bob McNeil (L), Louise Smullen, Evan Bailey, Barbara Richardson and Ellen Fryburg.

Appel to exhibit at Frame-up

Joan Appel of Cohasset, noted local musician and artist, is having her first one-woman show in Massachusetts at the Gallery in Frame-Up, Route 3A, Cushing Plaza.

There will be a wine and cheese reception Sunday, June 13 from 1 to 4 p.m. Her show will run through July 10.

A holder of a Master's Degree from the New England Conservatory, she has also studied art at the De Cordova & Dana Museum School, Syracuse University, Paier School of Art, University of Maryland, The Creative Arts Center in New Haven, and the School of the Museum of Fine Arts (Boston).

She has also shown at galleries in Connecticut and Florida as well as numerous shows and exhibitions in New England. A member of several Art Associations, she has shown at the Copley Society in Boston, and the South Shore Art Association.

She is an active member of the Boston Visual Artists Union and National Artists Equity.

Although currently working with monoprints (which will be displayed), her show is representative of her growth, showing acrylic and tissue works on canvas as well as oils, watercolors and drawings, ranging from impressionistic to abstract.

An accomplished sailor, much of her current work shows her deep interest in the sea and sailing, conveying an in-depth understanding of life in and on the water.

Her philosophy of painting is much like that of a poet, in that her personality and emotions are conveyed on the canvas.

"These are all personal soul-pieces," she says. And they are, indeed, conveying the colorful and sensitive facets of a very talented artist.

This oil painting by Joan Appel is called "Apples Mug."

Marion Fallon is new 60 Plus president

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members have elected a new president, Mrs. Marion Fallon, and a new vice president, Mr. Bernard Fallon.

Mary Conway will continue as treasurer, Mary McArthur as secretary and Dorothy Fitzpatrick as social secretary, for the next two years.

The board will meet Tuesday, June 1 at 11 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

Thursday, June 17, will be the date for luncheon at Hugo's. The cocktail hour begins at noon, followed by luncheon at 1 p.m.

Ainslie work order draws fire

The Cohasset Police Association has denounced selectmen's order that reserve patrolmen Larry Ainslie be used on traffic details and special events, labeling it "political interference."

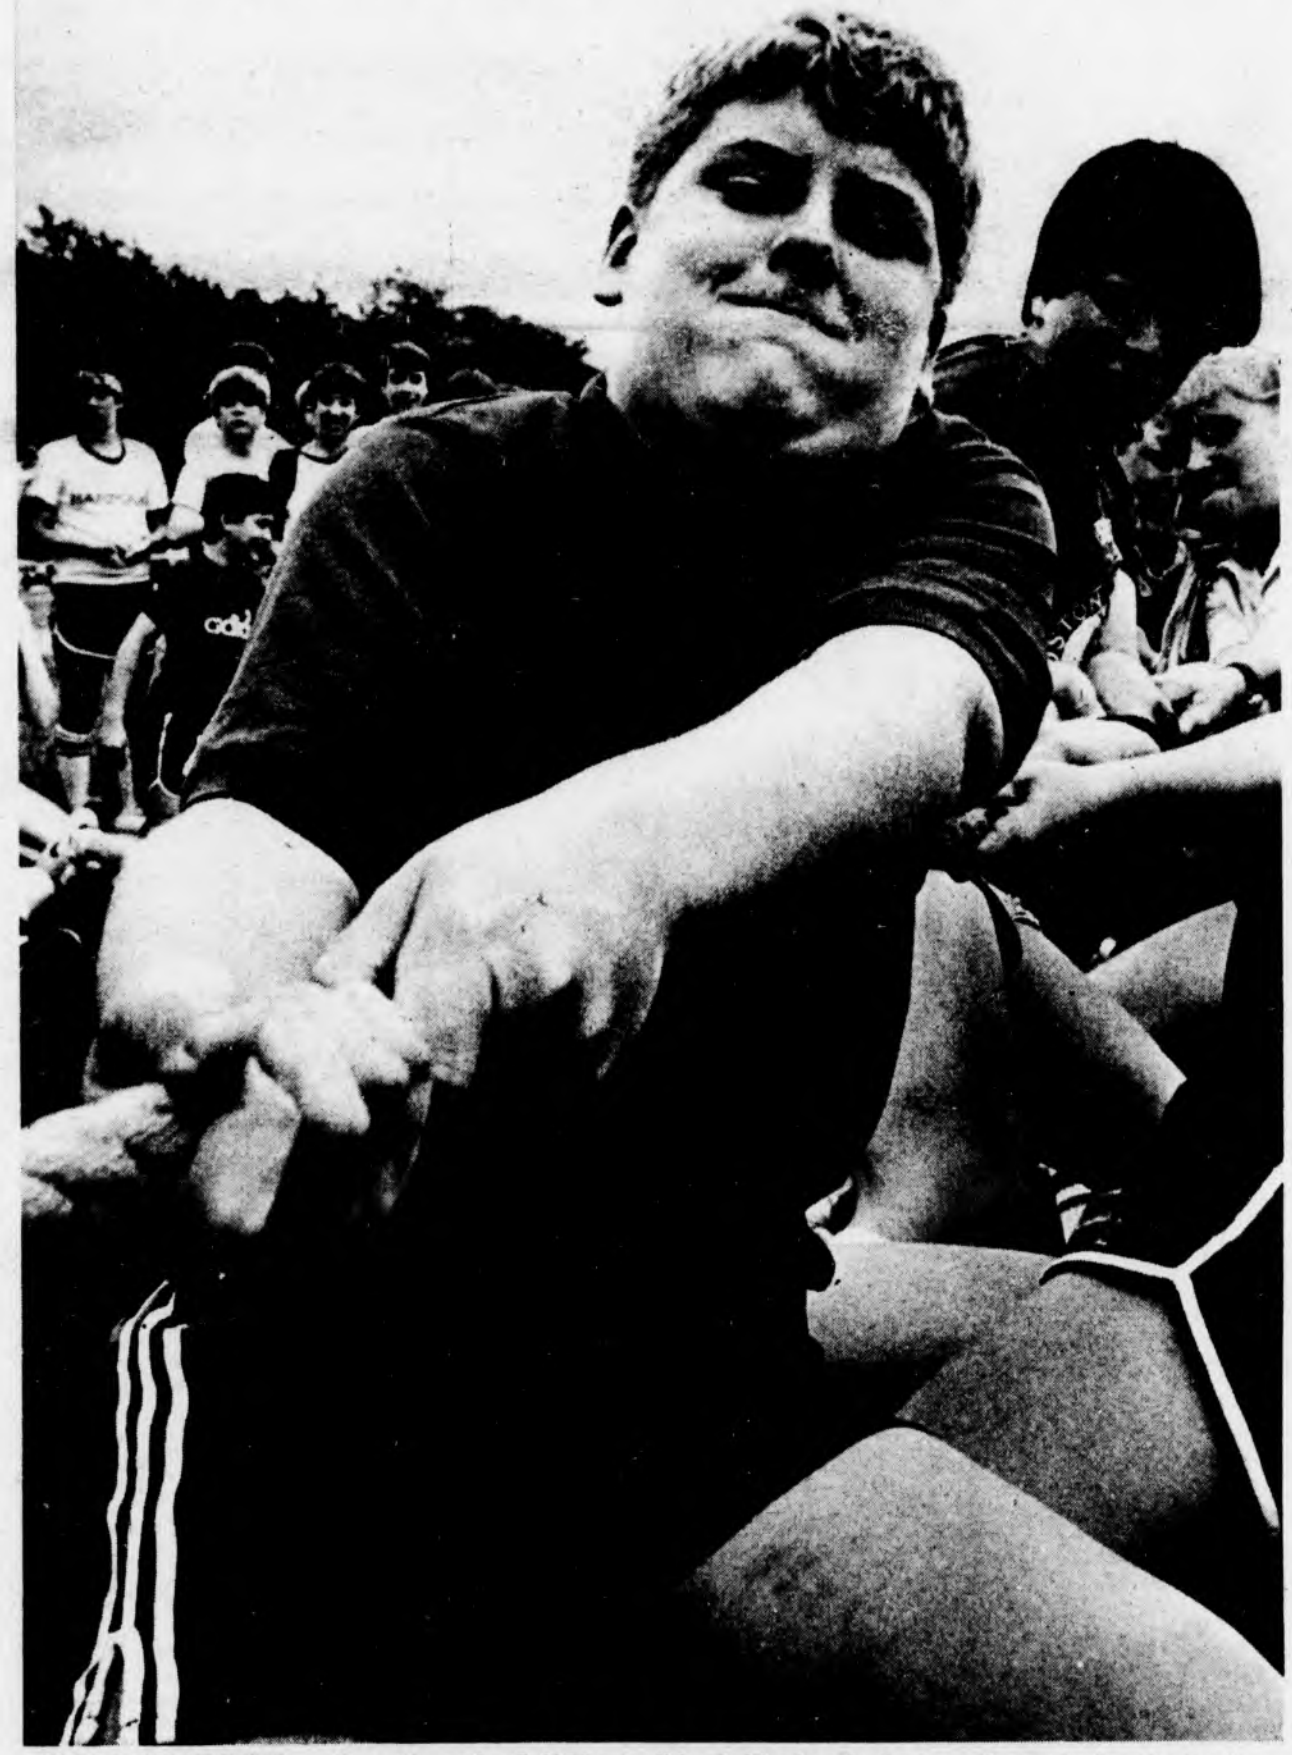
The association voted unanimously this week to inform selectmen of its opposition to the board's order to Chief John DeBassio. Last week, selectmen directed DeBassio to use young Ainslie for traffic details, despite vociferous objections from the chief.

DeBassio has repeatedly noted, "the overall issue is his (Ainslie's) qualifications to serve as a full-time officer. On the basis of background checks, I don't consider him appointable to the permanent police force."

Police Association president Robert Jackson said members feel the chief should be in charge of the everyday operations of the police department "as he sees fit and without political interference."

"Selectmen have overstepped their power. We felt that we should go on record with a statement," he said.

Last year Ainslie was named a permanent intermittent officer by selectmen. He was chosen from a Civil Service list of qualified candidates. Since his appointment, Ainslie said he has not been called for town work details although non-resident patrolmen have been assigned.



"I want to work under the capacity I was hired to work and passed all qualifications for, I am being discriminated against," Ainslie protested.

To upgrade the department's hiring process, DeBassio, with selectmen's approval, required psychological testing, thorough physical examinations, and background checks for all permanent intermittent officers such as Ainslie. Those officers are next in line for regular, full-time positions within the department, the chief added.

The numerous exams are designed to ensure the permanent intermittents "are the best people available for the job," Chief DeBassio said.

In December, 1978, Ainslie was charged with four infractions of the police department regulations,. He was charged with using the police log and police files without authorization, he kept a police radio without permission, and he failed to make himself available

Cable is coming, get your $ ready

Selectmen have begun the process of advertising for cable TV bid proposals.

Two weeks ago the Board wasn't sure it had enough money to pay the costs of advertising.

About $300 would be needed for advertising costs. Selectmen's meeting was recessed and a vote to advertise was approved the next evening.

According to Cable Advisory Committee Chairman Joseph McCool, the committee favors a regional system for the town rather than a "stand alone" system. The committee submitted a report to selectmen which stated, "It is the unanimous opinion of the Cable Advisory Committee that Cohasset would benefit from CATV. The small number of homes in Cohasset make a "stand alone" system impractical and any licensing process will probably be done in concert with some nearby community to take advantage of financial opportunities."

Since the committee was established by selectmen in January, the seven members and two alternates have met seven times.

The committee has contacted several nearby community CATV committees to determine the current status of their processes and the advisability of pursing some kind of regional system. McCool said Scituate went out to bid recently.

Contractors attending the committee's meetings told members that a "stand alone" system would be priced so high as to limit the number of prospective contractors because of the numbers of possible users versus the user cost.

The committee also spoke with the schools, library, community center, police and fire departments to determine what use the various town organizations could make of cable in the community. All of the above expressed positive interest in the community programming.

A questionnaire was developed and published in the Cohasset Mariner and Cohasset Mirror, There were a moderate number of responses which were generally positive, said McCool. A public hearing was held March 29 to sound out any dissenting opinions.

Sewer plant stuck in federal quicksand

The design phase of the proposed $13 million sewer plant off Sohier St. will be delayed because there's an "apparent cutback in federal funding," said Chairman of the Sewer Commissioners Gerard Stanton.

Because the design money has not been funded yet the commission is at least a year away from going out to bid. Another reason for the delay in the project is because a disposal site for sludge from the plant has not been decided.

State and federal agencies told the commission that money would not be approved until a site for the sludge is found. The commission expects to aprove a site soon. Once the federal and state agencies approve the site, an environmental release would be issued. Then the town might be eligible to borrow money and town consultant Metcalf and Eddy could design the plant.

Stanton said the primary concern with delaying the project is that the town landfill is only certified for five years. Construction of the plant which would be able to treat 750,000 gallons a day could take four to five years to complete.

Questionnaires will be sent out from the commission asking businesses where the best disposal site would be. The site could be out of town said Stanton, "Who ever comes up with the best solution for us."

The Board of Sewer Commissioners is conducting a study to select an effluent discharge site. Preliminary designs call for the site off Pleasant Beach at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue.

Cohasset's week...

Town common filming

Filming of Channel 5's birthday celebration on town common was postponed from June 5 until this Saturday, June 12.

Selectmen approved the tentative rain date on Wednesday and the station decided to postpone filming last Thursday.

September Productions, of Boston, will be filming the staged party for WCVB-TV, Channel 5, as a promotional segment in honor of the stations's 10th anniversary.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie brought in a sample invitation to the board's meeting last week which he was told was being distributed on Newbury Street in Boston. Selectmen hope that the celebration will be no larger than the 250 persons that September Productions estimated.

In exchange for use of the common, the town will receive a new flag for the town flagpole from Channel 5.

Planners to meet

The Planning Board will hold its regularly scheduled meeting Wednesday, June 16, at 7:30 at the Unitarian Parish House, North Main Street.

At this time the proofs of the Topographic Maps of Cohasset will be on display for general perusal.

Any questions, additions or corrections will be most welcome at this time.

Selectman injured

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur broke her foot last week and will be absent for the next three to six meetings. After three weeks she might have a walking cast put on depending on the healing progress.

She broke three bones in the ankle area and is confined to the second floor her home. McArthur spent most of last week in bed with her foot elevated.

Selectmen's executive secretary Arthur Clark said once Mary Jane is able to get out with either a walking cast or wheel chair that selectmen should meet downstairs in Town Hall instead of upstairs.

McKinnon's office hours

State Senator Allan McKinnon or a member of his staff will be available to Cohasset constituents Thursday, June 24, at 10:30 a.m. at Town Hall. If this is inconvenient, please call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

Nursing home renovated

Extensive renovations of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home were recently completed at One Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

The Level I & II 80-bed home was completely renovated with new drapes and furniture. The nursing home is under new ownership now having been bought by Joe Polizzotti purchased in November.

Beer & wine at Taverna

A two-day beer and wine license was approved by selectmen last Wednesday for the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church. The beer and wine licenses are dated July 3 and 4 for the Greek Taverna.

Health coverage

Selectmen chose Blue Cross — Blue Shield last week as the basic health insurance coverage for town employees for the fiscal year 1983. The board's vote was 2-0 in favor of Blue Corss — Blue Shield, the lone bidder.

Health rates for employees under Blue Cross — Blue Shield are scheduled to increase by 50 percent in July. Individual employees rates will increase from $52.70 per month to $85.66. Family coverage costs will rise from $151.20 to $231 per month.

Selectmen are also planning to vote for an optional Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) plan. The board is awaiting a recommendation from the town employees insurance committee.

Four jurors selected

Four residents were picked by selectmen last Wednesday for jury duty on August 2.

John Poole of 75 Brewster Road and John Kennedy of 115 Beechwood Street were chosen as special traverse jurors. Leslie Thompson of 56 Oak Street and Elaine Zaloga of 148 Pond Street were also selected to serve in August.

Beach stickers available

Beach stickers went on sale Monday at the police station. Residents may obtain stickers from noon to 4 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekends at the police station.

Stickers cost $10 per residence and $2 for each additional sticker. Police Chief John DeBassio urges residents to clean their car window first and wipe it dry before applying the sticker.

Dog officer opening

Selectmen have received two applications for the position of dog officer.

The dog officer position became vacant last week with the resignation of Joanne Coghill which became effective June 1.

Liquor allowed

Six one-day liquor licenses were approved by selectmen last week for the Cohasset Yacht Club. The licenses are for various events on June 5, July 3, July 24, August 14, August 15 and September 4.

Ainslie work order draws fire...

for assignments.

In a hearing brought against the young officer, selectmen refused the discipline him, but demoted him from lieutenant to patrolman. That action was taken after Ainslie criticized the auxiliary force organization during the hearing.

"I could never recommend him (Ainslie) for a position on the force," DeBassio told selectmen last week. "According to the background information we received, he's not the type of person I would want."

Ainslie is the nephew of selectman chairman Henry Ainslie Jr. The selectman approved the order to Chief DeBassio. He defended his right to vote on the issue, saying the district attorney had decided there was no conflict of interest.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was absent during last week's vote because of a broken foot. She will submit a report to selectmen tonight, outlining her position on the recent mandate to the police chief.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle supported officer Ainslie in this public tug-of-war. He noted that in 1978 officer Ainslie was the town's chief witness when Patrolman David Moyers was charged with drunkeness and pulling out his gun indiscrimantly. Ainslie was an auxiliary police officer then and his testimony led to Moyer's suspension and eventual firing.

He called that incident "the root of the whole problem."

Ainslie is a former Cohasset resident and now lives in Weymouth. He is a patrol officer for the Pinkerton Security Co. at the Prudential Center in Boston. Ainslie noted that in a week's work in Boston, he would handle more incidents that he would in five years on the job in Cohasset.

In the meantime, Chief DeBassio is awaiting advice from town counsel, as to whether he is required to abide by selectmen's ruling.

Before last week's vote, Laugelle told Chief DeBassio, "if we make an appointment, you are expected to treat him equal."

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie.

School Committee briefs...

A THANK YOU TO THE POLICE CHIEF

The school committee decided on Monday to send a letter to Police Chief John DeBassio thanking him for his help regarding alcohol misuse.

The letter is "so that he knows the committee supports him," said School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet. There were no reports of alcohol related incidents reported to police on prom night last week. The committee's letter is to thank DeBassio for the warning he issued weeks ago which told parents they could face prosecution if they provided minors with liquor.

DEPARTMENT HEADS APPOINTED

Six department chairmen were re-elected to their positions by the school committee on Monday. The committee's vote was unanimous, 4-0, with member John Langmaid III absent.

The following department chairmen were approved : William Kite, English department; Charles Davis, Math department; Marilyn Watson, Director of Physical Education; Paul Narkiewicz, Foreign Language department; Edward Sheehan, Social Studies department and Samuel Erbe, Science department.

SCIENCE SUPPLIES

The school committee approved the purchase of 202 items for the school's science department. The total cost of items was $3,699.08.

Two years ago, $7,000 was spent from the school budget for 197 science items, said School Business Manager John Raftery.

RESIGNATION

The resignation of METCO Coordinator Phillip Burrows will become effective at the end of the school year. The school committee voted unanimously to accept the resignation on Monday with deep regret.

Burrows and his wife are planning a move to Maryland for personal and economical reasons, his letter stated.

VAN PURCHASE

The school committee approved purchase of a 1978 van for $1,000 on Monday. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the van would serve as a utillity truck used for transporting maintenance and athletic equipment.

Crowell said Richard Ainslie had been using his own vehicle to transport materials. The van will be used to transport the snow blower among schools and the equipment to line fields plus various track equipment.

The committee's vote was 3-1 in favor of purchasing the van. Member Martha Gjesteby opposed the purchase because she felt some of the $1,000 should be taken from the revolving athletic account rather than the regular school budget.

There is $22,000 in the revolving athletic account. School Supt. Crowell is saving that money for two years down the road when it will be needed to maintain the Junior High and High School athletic offerings.

EXTRACURRICULAR APPOINTMENTS

The school committee approved the following extracurricular and coaching assignments for next year: John Leone, head varsity football; Phil Pisano, assistant varsity football; William Fallon, varsity girls basketball and varsity girls soccer; Jon Anderson, assistant JV girls basketball, head track and head boys soccer; John Mika, cross country; Gino DiGirolamo, varsity field hockey; Nancy Kealey, JV soccer and JV softball; Janet Ditmar, cheerleading; Antonette Jillson, boys tennis; James Sullivan, assistant football; Joseph Bouchard, assistant baseball; Dorothy Bates, Stu. Act. Treas.; William Kite, newspaper advisor; Edward Sheehan, debate; Ron Emmons assistant girls track and drama.

Emmons' assignment as director of the senior class production was postponed until the fall. The committee wants the Class of 1983 to decide what kind of play they want to produce.

DRUG POLICY AND ALCOHOL GUIDELINES

On Monday, June 21, the school committee will discuss the rewritten implementation and procedures section of the proposed drug and alcohol regulations.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said there is no rush in approving the guidelines. It's better to proceed slowly so that the community and faculty would be content with the rules and regulations, he said.

Crowell has set an August deadline for approval of the guidelines.

Water shut-offs planned

Because of a shortage in water department personnel, disconnections for delinquent payers have been delayed until later this week or next week, Water Supt. Ben Curley reported Monday.

The water department is short of personnel because of illness and the recent resignation of a meter reader.

The Water Department is trying to collect $100,000 in overdue water bills, and Curley said those facing shut-offs are the biggest offenders. One resident owes the department $1,700.

Residents scheduled for water disconnection were mailed three notices and most have also received a courtesy phone call, said Curley.

The plan is to shut off water between 3 p.m. and 9 a.m., with most of the shut offs geared to those owing for six months or longer.

Water disconnections had been scheduled for the last week in May.

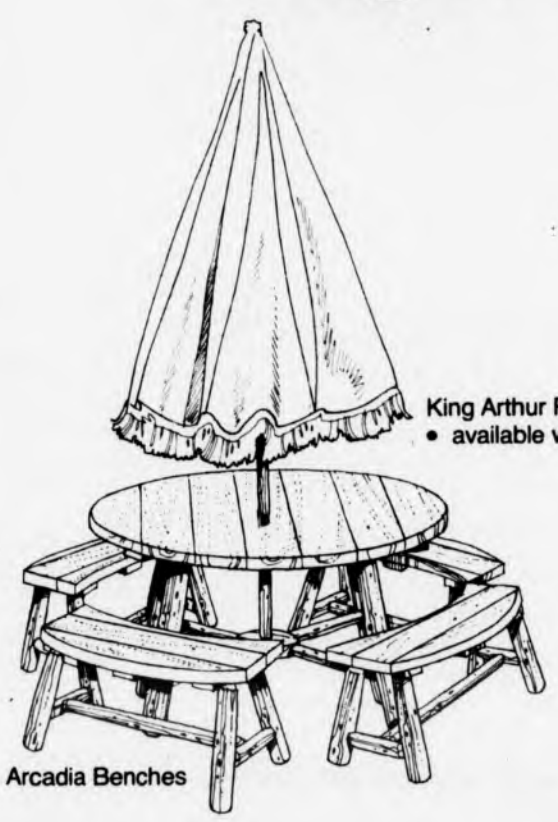
The hard-edged, stainless steel look of recent years is giving way to a softening trend in architecture and decor. Nowhere is this style becoming more evident than in the bedroom. Romance is, after all, a prime feature of the new soft look. Antique patinas, opulent textures, voluptiously skirted tables and artful clutter all serve to create a romantic ambience. Instead of a headboard, draperies may surround the bed to create a feeling of cozy intimacy. Poster beds and canopies create an environment in which it is easy to linger.

To many people the focus of the bedroom ought to be the bed. However what surrounds the bed is of equal importance. New wallpaper can change the entire look of any room. When you are looking for wallpaper why not come see BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE in N. Scituate at 763 Country Way? We have a wide selection of books featuring the finest names in the industry and can custom coordinate your wallpaper selections with other colors in your room. Our hours are Mon.-Wed., 8-6, Thurs. & Fri., 8-8:30, Sat. 7-5 or you may phone 545-3624.



DECORATING TIP: Color tends to create a look of well-being in a bedroom.

JUST TESTING — Robin Pape holds her four year-old niece Candice Buckley over the cold water at Sandy Beach so she can check the water's temperature before getting her feet wet.

☐Daniel Robert Tilden, the son of Marie Migliaccio, 2 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, received a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Sunday, May 31.

He is a founding member of the Mass. Chapter of the Delta Upsilon fraternity and served as chapter secretary for three years.

☐Gail Smart of New London, N.H., was one of 27 Colby-Sawyer College students inducted recently as a new associate member of the Phi Theta Kappa, the national academic honorary society for college freshmen and sophomores.

She maintained a 3.4 or better accumulative average for a minimum of two terms at the College. Gail is the daughter of Mrs. William J. Smart of 42 Nichols Road.

☐Victor E. Vanderlugt of 10 Woodland Drive received a degree in Accountancy from Bentley College last month.

☐Caleb Thomson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Thomson of 150 Beach St. recently graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Conn.

As an undergraduate Thomson was co-captain of the varsity soccer team and was elected to the All-State and All-New England teams. He was also co-captain of the tennis team and played varsity hockey for three years.

He was chairman of the Social Committee, an Inspector in the Community Service Program, and a member of the Athletic Committee.

☐Michael Fichtner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fichtner, 11 Old Pasture Road, received a bachelor degree in Economics at the 106th commencement of Boston College. He graduated cum laude in Economics with a minor in history.

Michael is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School. At B.C. he played club lacrosse, was a member of B.C. marching band, the B.C. jazz band, a member of Social Committee and a freshman orientation assistant.

Mike has been accepted for naval aviation training, Pensacola, Fla., beginning Aug. 16.

☐Eugene Thomas Price of 134 South Main St. has received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Bowdoin College.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Price majored in Government at Bowdoin.

Price was elected to the College's Student Executive Board, the student government body on campus and was selected Vice Chair of that Board.

He was later chosen by the board to serve as student representative to the Board of Overseers and also to the Governing Board's Executive Committee.

☐Linda Jean Chapman of 58 Old Coach Road has received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Bowdoin College.

A Cohasset High School graduate, Jean majored in Mathematics at Bowdoin, where she has been a Dean's List student.

☐Robert S. Booth III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Booth Jr. of 30 Joy Place, graduated from Ripon College, Ripon, Wisc., last month with a major in economics and a minor in computer science.

☐Marianne White received a nice surprise at her recent graduation from the College of Management and Professional Studies at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Marianne knew that she would be receiving the Concentration Award for outstanding scholastic performance in Marketing but instead of the "piece of paper" she was expecting, she was presented with a handsome 9 x 12" wall placque.

In all, 11 graduating seniors received the Concentration Awards in their area of concentration. The awards recognize the outstanding scholastic performance within their concentrations and are presented to those students whose overall grade point averages are 3.5 or above and whose concentration averages are 3.75 or above.

Marianne, her husband Matthew, and their three high school sons live on Forest Avenue and have long been active in community and church activities. Congratulations, Marianne, we knew you could do it!

☐Two Cohasset residents will be serving as officers of the Hingham Civic Music Theatre, next year. Vice-president will be Betty Driscoll and Peter O'Loughlin will be Treasurer. Both Betty and Peter have long been active in this worthy community organization.

☐Did you know that Cohasset was discovered in 1614 by Capt. John Smith, that the small pond on the common is a glacial "punchbowl" formed during the Ice Age or that those (HT) signs you see on certain houses throughout town designate Cohasset's oldest houses built between 1695-1811?

All of this information and a whole lot more is available in a helpful and interesting pamphlet, Map and Tours of the Village and Harbor, which was jointly sponsored by the Village and Harbor Association and the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council. Copies are available in the selectmen's office at the town hall.

☐The Country House Antiques and Collectibles has relocated in the barn directly behind the Bound Brook Artisans on Route 3A just past the Stop and Shop on the way to Scituate.

Owner Arlene Ferreira offers a "good stock" of primitives, antiques and used furniture. Right now, she is featuring an oak ice box, art by local artists and some very attractive copper pieces. Store hours are from 10:30 to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

☐New executive officers for the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club include several Cohasset residents. They are: Eve Hunter, president; first vice president, Debbie Hanian; recording secretary, Beth Leiser; treasurer, Lynn Leighton and historian, Dorothy Leptich.

☐Members of the Cohasset Historic Commission have an exciting idea that they have been working on, a Captain's walk around the harbor.

As one member said recently, "we wish there were some way we could make people love the harbor area as they do the common." So many important events in our town's history occured in the harbor area, they note, that it was truly the "heart of the town."

Many old photographs of what that area once looked like have been collected but there is still a lot or research and work to be done on this worthwhile project, which would certainly be a great benefit to residents and visitors alike.

☐Three Cohasset residents were among exhibitors at last weekend's Antique Show at the Town Hall. Noel Ripley displayed his many different watches and clocks among many other items and the Chatfields showed some very interesting and attractive glassware.

It was interesting to note that one couple said that they had been much busier in Cohasset than at the show at the Commonwealth Pier in Boston.

Host families needed for exchange program

Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham will again participate in the Interstudy Japanese exchange program which is bringing 25 Japanese students, ages 18-23 on Aug. 3-25.

"My husband and I said yes, then wondered what was to come, not really knowing anything about Japan and the program," said a host family last year. "Well, we are truly grateful we didn't say no. It was an experience every family, especially with children, should enjoy."

Margot Cheel, who has coordinated the program and hosted students for three years, adds that "once you have a student, then you look forward to having another one again."

Mrs. Cheel, who can be called at 383-6845, says the reason the program is so successful is its planned program of education and cultural exchange. Each morning students attend English language classes — this year led by Jill Suddath of Cohasset.

Afternoon schedules include field trips to Plimoth Plantation, Boston's Fanueil Hall, etc., or outdoor activities around town — a tennis match, bike ride or frisbee game at the beach.

A family orientation is held prior to the student's arrival, a welcome party for the students brings all families together, as does the students' own Sayonara Party. Many families find new friends in their own community this way.

"A big benefit (for one host family last year) was the language and cultural information my children acquired. They are young and at a good age to have no inhibitions about asking hundreds of questions of our students which even we never thought about."

Many participants find the experience brings the whole family together. In addition, host families become members of the Interstudy Host Family Association which entitles them to low-cost fares to Japan or Europe and scholarships for children of host families.

The Japanese respect for family and home finds these students attentive to young children and eager to learn and share their culture with you.

If you host, you'll find your family summer project special indeed.

Policemen's annual ball successful

The policemen's annual ball was held Friday at Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant. More than 300 people attended the ball which was sponsored by the Cohasset Police Association.

This year's officers of the association are: Robert Jackson, president; Clifton Jones, vice president; John Rhodes, secretary/treasurer.

The board of directors includes Brian Noonan, Charles Stockbridge and Richard Barrow.

Selectmen strike out

We commend to readers' attention our front page story reporting that despite the strenuous objections of Police Chief John DeBassio and subsequent unanimous disapproval of the Cohasset Police Association, Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Henry Ainslie have ordered that Mr. Ainslie's nephew, Lawrence Ainslie, be given paid details on a regular basis.

In trying to think of words to describe the behavior of our Selectmen in making such an order, we recall E.L. Thayer, who in his "Casey at the Bat" spoke of two members of the famous Mudville Nine, Mssrs. Flynn and Blake:

"And the former was a puddin', and the latter was a fake!" Mr. Laugelle, we reckon, is a "puddin" if he doesn't understand that we have an excellent police chief who is doing his utmost to improve the calibre of his personnel.

Mr. Laugelle is a "puddin" if he doesn't understand that the fastest way to lose a good chief, to undermine professionalism in a police department, and to obliterate morale, is for "pols" to be hacking around with personnel decisions.

And he is a "puddin" if he doesn't understand that Lawrence Ainslie's testimony against another officer two years' before Chief DeBassio's arrival on the scene could have had nothing to do with the chief's judgment about Ainslie.

Henry Ainslie, we reckon, is a "fake" if he does not understand that no selectman should ever vote on an issue involving a close relative.

He is a "fake" if he does not understand that whether he breaks the law or not in voting to help his nephew out is beside the point.

He is a "fake" if he doesn't understand that the only proper thing to have done and the only way to create public confidence in town government would have been to abstain.

The pity of the incredible performance by Laugelle and Henry Ainslie is that Lawrence Ainslie has had his name dragged across the tidal mudflats of public opinion. There is disappointment but no shame in being passed over for a police appointment — or any other job. Life goes on and sometimes better opportunities materialize. It is an event that happens to virtually all of us in the course of our careers.

It is Larry Ainslie's misforturne that alleged inadequacies have been announced as if by a Town Crier, and whatever short comings may have been real are no doubt smaller than what the public will imagine. Larry Ainslie would surely have served his interest better had this issue been left untouched. But the real interest that has been skewered here is the public interest, and for that Mr. Ainslie and Mr. Laugelle Rocco are responsible.

Or to borrow once again from E.L. Thayer..."And the echo answered, 'Fraud!' "

It is a pity that Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was forced to miss last week's meeting due to a broken foot. Her wisdom might have had a salutary effect on her colleagues, then, as it has in the past. We understand that she intends to speak out on the Lawrence Ainslie issue and we look forward to hearing what she has to say.

Make it a felony

Governor Edward King, whose 1979 signature on a bill raising the drinking age to 20 has undoubtedly saved scores of young lives in the last two years, recently announced his support of House Bill 5976, which would make vehicular homicide while under the influence a felony.

We're with the gov[illegible]or all the way on this one; in fact we are amazed that drunken vehicular homicide has never been a felony before. Making it felonious will not, of course, deter every fool who would get behind the wheel inebriated. But in concert with other changes in law and with the efforts of groups such as Mothers Against Driving Drunk (MADD) and Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD), it will, we believe, bring down the number of tragedies.

Part of the problem with many of our problems since the mid-seventies has been their seeming intractability. On so many issues nothing our elected officials and nothing we the people have done has seemed to do any good.

It is nice, therefore, that on one literally vital issue something important is being done. We salute Gov. King on his efforts on behalf of highway safety — efforts which contrast favorably with those of his archrival former Gov. Dukakis, who during his term fixedly refused to sign legislation raising the drinking age.

Coping with empty nest syndrome

Claire McDonough

I ran into my friend Fauna at Angelo's last week. She was pale, her hands shook, and she kept looking nervously over her shoulder.

"You poor dear," I murmured sympathetically. "It's the empty nest syndrome. I read all about it in 'Dear Abby.' Now that your children are raised, you feel useless and unneeded. Your role in life is over. Can I help?"

Fauna raised a trembling finger to her lips. "Shh. That's my Brian over by the produce. If he sees me here, he'll know the house is empty and he'll run home and eat the lamb chops. We haven't been able to afford lamb chops since before our first baby 27 years ago."

"I suppose there are some compensations," I admitted. "But doesn't the house seem like an empty shell without the sound of youthful voices ringing through the rooms?"

She stared at me in disbelief. "Are you crazy? In the three months since the youngest moved out we've had one evening without listening to their youthful voices. That was the night we went to the movies."

"But I thought your children had all opted for independent living. I thought they decided it was time for them to stand on their own two feet and make their own choices."

"I thought so, too," Fauna agreed glumly. "Frank and I figured we'd be lonely for a while with an empty house, but we said it would also be a chance to get to know each other again and do some of the things we always wanted to do and never had time for. Like take a cruise, study yoga, and get involved in local politics.

"We had to cancel the cruise when Lisa left her Great Dane with us while she went to save the whales. Then Susan called and asked if her old college roommates could camp out in our living room while they were looking for a cottage for the summer. That was two months ago. Sue comes over to visit them every night and they play the stereo, eat granola and giggle if I practice my yoga."

"Funny," I said. "She's the one you used to complain was never home when she lived with you."

"Yeah," Fauna agreed. "She used to say my meals were unhealthful and non organic. Just last Wednesday she told me I'd probably get botulism from using canned goods. While she was telling me, she was polishing off my last can of tuna. She washed it down with her father's Fresca and wandered off into the livingroom with the pan of brownies I'd made for dessert. I would have gone after her and taken them away, but Brian and Scott were downstairs doing their laundry. They put in too much detergent and you could have paddled a canoe in the basement. I had to wade down and bale them out."

"Why don't you make them clean up their own messes?" I asked.

"They say they don't live there anymore, so it's not their responsibility."

I shuddered. "So far as I can see, you have no choice. You'll just have to tell them to leave."

Fauna looked me in the eye. "Did you ever try to evict a Great Dane?"

Channel 5 invades the Common

By Karin Bartow

Commentary

Cohasset should be flattered that Channel 5 and its promotional geniuses find our Common the most beautiful in Massachusetts. Forty station 'personalities,' 150 typical small town New Englanders (whatever they are), not to mention many civic bands, organizations and entertainers, as well as food and refreshment stands, will dominate the Common on Saturday, June 12, all afternoon.

Last week's news gave selectmen cause for worry, and they have my sympathy. They learned that Channel 5 had been handing out invitations to the 'celebration filming' up and down Newbury Street in Boston. The worry: would these be the 250 invited guests they were told about, or would they be 800-1,000 more? It would worry me that 1,000 day-trippers might find out where Cohasset is. Enough so that I might give Channel 5 a call and tell them the 250 guests, filming crew and stars would be quite enough visitors for one day. Do they know how small our Common is?

I have a friend who 'loaned' her Needham house to Channel 5 for a documentary filming. She was very flattered, of course. They gave her $50 (she didn't ask for it), but it didn't begin to cover the cleaning expenses. "They don't tell you they're going to tar paper all your windows."

Selectmen acted in a most civic-minded way when they agreed to allow use of the Common in return for the flattery, the chance to see Cohasset on TV and a new flag for the Common's flagpole. Very patriotic. (Eagle Flag Company of Quincy, familiar with our 100 foot flagpole, suggests an acrylic, 15' x 25' American flag — runs about $400.)

But what if Channel 5 brings all those extra guests to Cohasset? Will they use this week's postponement to invite more? Perhaps our selectmen should consider asking for a little more than a flag if we are invaded. Perhaps just anonymity when the 'celebration' commercial is aired?

Questions on Town Meeting attendance

Letters

[The following is a copy of a letter to selectmen. Ed.]

To the Editor:

I read in the Quincy Ledger that you were holding a special meeting to find ways of increasing attendance at Town Meeting. I think you should be considering ways of maintaining the attendance you presently have. Because, I for one am giving serious considerations to by-passing future meetings.

I cannot understand how you as Selectmen can completely disregard the vote of the majority and allow a small group to persuade you from spraying for gypsy moths with "Sevin." But in retrospect I guess I can understand. I have had some past experience with your board of health and know first hand that they cannot enforce their own rules and regulations.

It seems to me that whenever this town is faced with legal action, the immediate procedure is to back off.

How can you expect people to take the time and effort to attend Town Meeting, vote on a proposal, have it passed and then have the Selectmen completely disregard the wishes of the majority.

Regardless of what the outcome may have been, I feel the vote of the people should have been upheld even if it required court action.

Class advised to give of themselves in unstable times

CHS senior Steven D'Onofrio delivered the following valedictory address at graduation ceremonies Sunday. Ed.)

It is my pleasure to address the graduating class, parents, relatives, friends, clergymen, administrators and school committee members. I would like to take this opportunity to discuss some of the harmful effects that our rapidly changing lifestyle has brought about for Americans, especially young adults.

During my four years of high school, it has become evident that we live in a world of unrest. Domestically, we are disrupted by a tightening economy and family instability, while internationally, we are entangled by treaties and obligations in a web of political controversies in unstable countries. This unrest has turned young Americans from the "help-others" attitude that pervaded the late sixties, to the "preserve-thyself-first" attitude that we live with today.

Clearly, every event that happens in the world today has global effects. During the past four years, each person here today has in one form or another felt the effect of events that took place as far as thousands of miles away. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan certainly threatened the international power balance and reminded us, as a nation, that we are not the only super power in this world.

The Soviets similar siege of Poland and aid to El Salvador instilled a concern in Americans that we might have to again use American youth to defend our national interests. Moreover, the Iranian Crisis furthered our awareness of and direct involvement in the political unrest of other nations. Altogether, these events have caused concern, if not fear, in Americans today.

But how have these events affected all of us gathered at this ceremony? Examining the current presidential administration on the basis of what it has accomplished, and is in the process of accomplishing, neither denouncing nor advocating its actions, it is clear that some budgets have suffered while others have flourished controversially as the administration has attempted to provide for our own concerns and deal with international unrest. There are some graduates here today who have been directly affected by the presidential administration's decision to reinterpret the eligibility guidelines for social security benefits.

Also, a reduced availability of government funded student loans has certainly influenced many decisions concerning plans for college. And lastly, due to our tightening economy, many students today have difficulty in finding employment on a part-time or full-time basis.

Clearly, we are growing up in a drastically changing society. However, I contend that society is changing in more ways than just economics and politics. A prominent feeling in this country now is that we are living in an "I" and "me" generation. What is not obvious to many people is that such an attitude will only intensify the hardships in ours and other nations.

During this difficult period many of us turn our thoughts and actions to our own self-fulfillment. Hard times require that we actualize our abilities by being sensitive to the needs of others and by providing assistance. This is the time to challenge our class and all young adults to respond to the call to dedicate ourselves to those organizations and public services that help all of mankind.

As many of us enter college this fall, we will experience totally new and different academic and social lifestyles. We will enter a society in which it is more difficult to stand out as leaders, but less difficult to conform to the ways of others; a society in which it is easy to forget that there are others in this world who are less fortunate than ourselves. It is essential, however, that each of us here today uses his or her knowledge to the benefit of all humanity and not just oneself.

In the late fifteen and early sixteen-hundreds, Francis Bacon, an Englishman, wrote a collection of essays on the different entities of life. In one essay entitled "Of Wisdom For a Man's Self" he said,

> Wisdom for a man's self is, in many branches thereof, a depraved thing. It is the wisdom of rats, that will be sure to leave a house somewhat before its fall. It is the wisdom of the fox, that thrusts out the badger, who digged and made room for him. It is the wisdom of crocodiles, that shed tears when they would devour. But that which is specially to be noted is, that those which (as Cicero says of Pompey) are sui amantes, sine rivali (lovers of themselves without a rival) are many times unfortunate. And whereas they have all their times sacrificed to themselves, they become in the end themselves sacrifices to the inconstancy of fortune, whose wings they sought by their self wisdom to have pinioned.

The message that Bacon sought to convey three-hundred years ago is just as, if not more, applicable to our unstable society today. As we graduate from high school and enter into a new way of living, it is my hope that the Class of '82, as individuals, will strive to bring about a change from the "I" and "me" attitude that prevails among many today. This will not be an easy task. The future years that we face will more than likely prove to be just as economically tight and politically unstable as those past.

Only by giving of ourselves whether it be in umpiring a Little League game, or in working for world peace, will we make our nation one deserving of the respect and fellowship of other nations. I am addressing more than just the graduating class when I suggest that each of us here this afternoon makes it his or her obligation to use the education we have received and the abilities with which we have been blessed not only for self-benefit, but for the benefit of all people.

Time to control technology is now

(CHS senior Thomas S. Ryan delivered the following Salutatory address at graduation ceremonies Sunday. Ed.)

Good afternoon. Today truly marks a milestone in each and every one of our lives. We have been prepared, and now we must venture forth and survive in a world which offers both enriching opportunities and despairing setbacks. Yet, as we sit here today, contemplating the life that faces us in an abstract future, the world is changing in a disharmonious manner, destined to break the very spirit and essence of man.

Our world is changing at a rapid, and often alarming, pace. Although we have become a highly advanced society from a technological and productive standpoint,some of our greatest advancements have caused severe setbacks in the nature of our existence.

Our nation, and most of the other industrialized nations in the world, has become highly productive in all facets of manufacturing, technology and business. The country has become the world leader in almost every area of production, making ours a country of production. But, in this social and technological rise, one symbolized by the "giant leap for mankind" which put man on the moon, we, as a society, have also become producers, making our society a "Society of Production." The individual in America has been molded and processed into a functioning component, a necessary ingredient, in this society.

Unfortunately, being social animals, this trend in our society can be paralleled to our friend, the ant, or it you prefer, the bee, other social animals. In their societies every member exists for a purpose, an assigned role, necessary for the total well-being of the colony. Those who can't produce are considered worthless and destroyed. And each producer, though he performs a different task, is as every other.

To my dismay, our society is becoming very much like the anthill or beehive. Individuals have become numbers assigned to various tasks for the benefit of all. Scientists invent, workers produce, soldiers defend. Useless members drop out and become "losers," deprived of the respect awarded to those who do what society requires. But what has this advancement gotten us? Has this cold, technocratic existence brought us any closer to the happiness and peace of mind we all desire?

No. It hasn't. In fact, this way of life, although it helps the country as a whole, has destroyed the essence of man. Our inventions have become our bane. Our advanced society has led to the depressed individual.

This technological way of life has produced a society of automatons, ugly robots, each assigned a role, programmed if you will by more advanced robots. For eight hours a day, forty hours a week, we produce. The rest of the time we take advantage of the devices produced by others — the incessant TV, the blaring radio and the other trappings of modern man.

The results of our Society of Production, this hi-tech anthill, are tragic. We have become lazy. The Pioneer Spirit once synonymous with the American has vanished in favor of convenience. Elevators, escalators and cars replace legs. Push a button — get results. Let the machine do the cooking, the cleaning, the thinking, the — living? Perhaps in the course of evolution we will lose our legs and other unnecessary items. We will become huge pulsating brains with well-developed push-button fingers and huge detectors and receptors in lieu or eyes and ears.

We have also lost a once sincere love of nature. Given the choice between a serene walk in the woods or that favorite technological marvel — Pac-man, what normal teenager wouldn't choose the latter? The natural beauty of the country, here long before our lovely computers, has been sequestered off into reservations, like the Indians. There, if anyone so desires, is where people can see nature as it is, or at least what part man finds pleasurable and safe for picnicking. Even our valiant efforts to return to nature by "roughing it" are complete with tent, cooking stove, light, portable TV and of course, L.L. Bean catalog. And we always need more parking lots.
